Phil Engel, 20th-Fox tub thumper, is swinging into action on the basis of the largest TV and radio appropriation ever made by his company for regional promotion of a picture. Working with Jack Saef, Metropolitan publicist, he is paving the way for the opening of "Untamed" there on March 16. In addition to TV and radio promotion, tie-ups with travel agents, art exhibits featuring items from Africa, where "Untamed" was filmed, and jewelry stores, are being arranged, including a diamond display in a window of Shreve, Crump, and Low's, well-known jewelry establishment. Among TV promotion will be the screening of "Zululand," a short subject made in Africa while "Untamed" was being filmed, through WNAC-TV.

L. D. Netter, Jr., Altec sales manager, consummated arrangements whereby Maine and New Hampshire Theatres, Inc., will employ Altec field engineers in the maintenance and service of the circuit's sound equipment. The Zoning Commission has reserved decision on application by Francis H. Holmes, owner, land at Route 5 and Deming Road, to rezone the area from residence and farm. The tract contains 40 acres. Five persons appeared before the group to protest the rezoning on the grounds that it was generally known that George LeWitt, veteran New Britain, Conn., theatre owner, intends to build a drive-in on the site if it is rezoned. The quintet expressed the contention that a theatre would detract from the area, and, moreover, would cause a traffic hazard and other effects. Attorney Harry N. Jackaway, appearing for Holmes, argued that the proposed change would be in accordance with the general comprehensive town plan, would allow the land to be used to its best advantage, relieve Holmes of a hardship since there is nothing at present he can do with the land as it contains a pond and is not suited for residences, provide the town with more tax revenue, and furnish a source of employment.

Phil Berler, left, buyer and booker, E. M. Loew's Theatres, Boston, operating 55 theatres, was recently greeted by Danny Kaye on the set of Paramount's "The Court Jester." Mrs. Berler is second from right. With them are their friends Dr. William Green and Mrs. Green.

Hartford

Attorney Herman M. Levy, general counsel, TOA, and MPTO of Connecticut, was among those appearing before the State Legislature's judiciary committee to oppose a measure introduced by Senator Arthur H. Healey, Democrat, that would license steam boiler operators in Connecticut. Levy declared that present police inspection admirably covers the situation. Another opponent, Fred Waterhouse, representing Connecticut Manufacturers' Association, asserted that boilers are periodically inspected throughout the state under law.

Ray McNamara, Allyn, lined up newspaper interviews with a Navy helicopter pilot, now living here, in conjunction with "Bridges at Toko-Ri." . . The McNamara campaign for "Country Girl" was highlighted by several sizable newspaper layouts, special displays in area amateur theatre meeting rooms, and breaks in area libraries.

Pat Buchieri, Hartford Theatres Circuit, got a number of newspaper beaks on UA's "Little Kidnappers" when the film broke post-World War II hold-over record locally by extending stay into a ninth week. Most surprising aspect of the engagement was that the film's initial week was only a fair grosser. . . . Lou Cohen, Loew's Poli, got a sizable break into the local dailies on the success of several MGM revivals across the country.

Rod Taylor, young Australian star of DCA's "Long John Silver," recently visited Springfield, Mass., on a New England bally tour in connection with the film. He is seen with Paramount's Edward A. Smith.

Sid Kleper, manager, Loew's Poli, College, New Haven, was in town during vacation. At one time, Kleper, a Hartford native, was assistant manager, Loew's Poli Palace here. Manager at that time was Lou Cohen, now managing Loew's Poli.

New Starflower ovenware deal was started on Wednesdays, Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays at the CAC Plainfield, Plainfield, Conn. . . . Ed Hale, Buena Vista Productions, was in town for "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," at the Stanley Warner Strand. . . . Round Hill Drive-In, Springfield, Conn., was first ozoner in the western Massachusetts territory to resume for 1955.

Disneyrama, consisting of cartoons and novelties, was shown at the Perakos Eastwood, East Hartford; Elm, West Hartford; and Strand, Thompsonville, Conn. . . . Early March reopening was set for the Crown, undergoing extensive remodeling. A new concern, known as the Crown Company, headed by E. Pomeroy, will operate the theatre on lease from the Post-Thompson estate, according to Joseph L. Giobbi, who will serve as theatre manager. Giobbi has been in the amusement field for 30 years. Renovations include installation of air conditioning, CinemaScope screen, and stereophonic sound.

Albert M. Pickus, national vice-president, TOA, and owner, Stratford, Stratford, Conn., was named civil defense committee chairman by Raymond J. O'Connor, president, Stratford Chamber of Commerce. Pickus is also serving as Stratford's civil defense director.

Ahead of a sneak preview, Phil Allaire, Stanley Warner Palace, Norwich, Conn., advertised, "SHH! Don't tell anybody but there's a big musical sneak preview at the Palace Thursday night at eight!"

Norm Levinson, ex-assistant manager, Loew's Poli, is now living at the Hotel Buckingham, Minneapolis. He is a field press representative for MGM in the upper midwest. . . . Interstate Palace, Rockville, Conn., advertised, "If you can recognize voice of prominent Rockville person on our automatic telephone answering device—you win two passes to any show. Call anytime, Thursday thru Sunday, when device is in operation. Leave your guess with cashier at box-office any evening. First two persons to correctly identify voice win." . . . Bob Schwartz started a new ovenware giveaway at the Ville, Waterbury, Conn.

One of the largest industry transactions of the post-World War II era was completed, with Midwest Theatres, Inc., Boston, leasing the Meadows Family Drive-In, here, now under construction, for a minimum of 10 years. The Meadows is being built by the A. J. Bronstein interests, owners and operators, East Hartford Family Drive-In Theatre Corporation, and will be the largest drive-in in the U. S., according to Bronstein's spokesman, attorney Bernard E. Francis. Car capacity is slated for 2,070, and cost of construction is over the half-million dollar mark. Amount of money involved in the long-term lease, however, was not disclosed. Midwest Theatres, Inc., are headed by the father and son combination of Philip and Richard Smith, both of Boston. The latter are understood to be planning to book first-run attractions, an innovation for a Hartford area drive-in venture. A May 15 opening is planned.

Newington

First Connecticut drive-in to resume 1955 operations was the Pike Drive-In, managed by W. Amadeo. The ozoner relighted on Feb. 24, with "Four Guns to The Border" and "Khyber Patrol." Plans are under way to remodel the refreshment area.

Stamford

Bill Sobel, Starlite Drive-In, has been vacationing at Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Waterford

The Waterford Drive-In was the first eastern Connecticut ozoner to reopen for 1955. Resuming on Feb. 24, the theatre advertised, "Visit Our Heated Snack Bar!"

Massachusetts

Palmer

Samuel Goldstein, president, Western Massachusetts Theatres, Inc., announced that the Strand had opened on Feb. 19.

Worcester

Mike Stranger, Plymouth, has been busy with promotions on Columbia's "I Am The Law" and "Dead Reckoning." Stunts included were an "overtime parking meter" gimmick. This featured distribution of cards, depositing coins in meters all around the main stem where overtime parking was found on opening day. This made a lot of friends. Models were used to distribute "Don't Be A Sucker"—"I Am The Law" envelopes containing all day suckers. In addition he had a decode the message, win a free guest ticket contest which had fine results and was a lot of fun, according to patrons. Stranger also posted hundreds of imprinted, cutout arrows pointing toward the theatre and also used in a tieup with a parking lot. On "The Bamboo Prison," Stranger dipped deeper into his bag of tricks and had former war prisoners interviewed on radio and TV programs and used six young men for street bally. They were dressed in army fatigues. On "The Violent Men," Stranger tied up with two local banks with "Protect Your Valuables Against Violent Men," etc. And to top off all of his recent activities, Stranger, figuring that adults as well as kids liked cartoons, held an early morning cartoon show running over two hours with all of the "entertainment packed cartoons you would possibly want to see in one sitting." Admission was pegged at 50 cents for adults and children under 12 at 15 cents.

The new dance craze, The Americano, as performed by Abbe Lane in the film, "The Americano," was use by Dave Levin, Albee manager, as part of his exploitation in conjunction with the screening at his house. Levin arranged with the local Arthur Murray Studios to give two complimentary lessons in the fast-rising dance to any of the Albee patrons who were successful in winning awards in a contest he devised. . . . In conjunction with the forthcoming presentation of "Long John Silver," Newberry's, the "junior" department store, which staggered local businessman and residents when, in a multi-million-dollar deal, they purchased the State's largest Rexall-Liggett store, is conducting a monster treasure hunt whereby all patrons are given a key with which they try to open a treasure chest. Those holding keys that open the lock will divide over 100 awards, amounting to several hundreds of dollars. Topping the list is a fully paid two weeks Florida vacation for two; a chest of silverware; and scores of other valuable gifts. The promotion has got the whole town talking, is building considerable-increased traffic in the store, and is spiralling interest in the forthcoming screening of "Long John Silver."

Bill Trambukis, Loew's State manager, arranged a special sneak preview of "Bad Day at Black Rock." Special invitations were sent to the press, radio, TV officials, and local dignitaries.

February, a month of serious fires in the area, selected the Broadway, Schuylerville, N. Y., as one of its targets. The 500 seat house, the only one in the village, was gutted by a blaze. Robert Galusha, 15, an employee, was working in the theatre when he discovered the fire. He summoned the fire department by telephone from inside the house, then found his exit blocked by a jammed door when he tried to leave. Firemen pried it open to let the youngster out. An explosion rocked the one-story brick building and blew out the upper part, about the time the fire of undertermined origin was detected. Two adjacent buildings were evacuated, without damage or inury to anyone. The Broadway is owned by Schuylerville Theatre, Inc., of which Vivian Sweet, Salem, N. Y., is president. Sweet, who has operated the Star, Salem, and Swan, Greenwich, N. Y., for a long time, purchased the Broadway about four years ago. It had been owned by the Milligan family.

Manager Al Swett set up a special laugh attraction at the Ritz for Washington's birthday, a "Kartoonascope" of 21 new cartoons. Troy

Seized by police in Gulfport, Miss., Larry Cowen, former manager, Proctor's, was to be extradited here to face a forgery charge lodged by his wife and a grand larceny complaint filed by his mother, resident of local Jewish Home for the Aged. Cowen, pre-war manager, Fabian's Grand, Albany, and earlier a Fabian employee in Brooklyn, had been sought since September, when he disappeared from his suburban home in Melrose, N. Y. A lieutenant commander in charge of the Naval intelligence office here during World War II and a member of the Naval Reserve for 20 years until retirement on pension two years ago, Cowen's car was being sought for repossession by a Troy, N. Y., finance company. Complaints of passing several worthless checks since lighting out also had been made. Illness of several years' standing was advanced as a possible contributing factor. In fact, Cowen's arrest followed his application for admission to a veterans' hospital in Gulfport.

Paramount advertising director Sid Blumenstock and Jerry Sager, publicity and advertising director, B. S. Moss' Criterion, New York City, recently jumped the gun on the Academy Award nominations and prepared the above 40 x 60 in advance with a slot to insert the number of nominations Paramount's "The Country Girl" would receive. The poster was placed on display two minutes after the final Academy Award announcement.

Easton

Just about everyone of the 5,873 persons who live in this small Eastern Shore town and an equal number from the surrounding area turned out to take part in "Music Therapy Fund Benefit Day" by attending the world premiere of MGM's "Hit the Deck" and greeting vivacious Ann Miller. The day was launched by a luncheon sponsored by the Easton Junior Chamber of Commerce. Mayor Calvin G. Lomax presented Miss Miller with the key to the city. The luncheon program, arranged by Jaycee Dick Williams, manager, Schine's Avalon, was emceed by Sam Cannon, manager, station WCEM. Following the luncheon, together with Mrs. George Scott Wallace and Mrs. Margaret Dickson, co-chairman of the day's activities, Miss Miller took part in a program at Easton High School. More than 550 students were in attendance. One of the highlights of the day was the star's appearance before the assembly of the Eastern Shore State Hospital patients at nearby Cambridge, Md. The star talked, sang, and danced, to the delight of the staff and visitors as well as the patients. A later afternoon tea party was broadcast from the lounge of the Tidewater Inn. Taking part with Miss Miller, other than the station's women's commentator and officials of the Music Therapy Fund, was Mrs. William A. Tucker, the former Mrs. Vincent Youmans. Mrs. Tucker told of some of her late husband's experiences connected with his writing the songs for "Hit The Deck." Representatives of out of town newspapers, radio stations, and trade magazines enjoyed a private screening of "Hit The Deck" at the theatre in the afternoon. Resplendent with yacht club pennants, flood lights, pavement throngs, and lobby broadcast, the Avalon presented the world premiere. Local theatre arrangements and general promotion was handled by Avalon manager Williams, who was assisted by Schine's Eastern Shore management supervisor, Herman Knopp, New Milford, Milford, Del., and Tom Baldridge, MGM.

Three For The Show (737)

MUSICAL COMEDY
91M.

(Color by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Musical entry has some angles.

CAST: Betty Grable, Marge Champion, Gower Champion, Jack Lemmon, Myron McCormick, Paul Harvey, Robert Bice, Hal K. Dawson. Produced by Jonie Taps; directed by H. C. Potter.

STORY: When Jack Lemmon, Broadway musical comedy writer, is reported killed in action during the war in Korea, his wife, star musical entertainer Betty Grable, marries Lemmon's former collaborator and partner, Gower Champion. It tuns out that the army has made a mistake and Lemmon turns up just as Grable closes in a show and she and Champion are to leave on a vacation. Things get kind of complicated until he learns the truth, then they don't clear up any because Grable can't decide whom she would like to live with. She enjoys the attentions of both and keeps both at their distance. The army gets its share of the blame but doesn't know what to do about the situation. Champion and Lemmon demand that she make a choice, which is also the desire of Marge Champion, who has been in love with both, so that she can get a bid in for the one that is freed. Producer-agent Myron McCormick uses some ingenuity to bring Lemmon and Champion together to write another show, and things clear up with Champion realizing he is in love with Marge Champion and Lemmon and Grable, too, finding they are really in love. McCormick also has another hit show on his hands.

X-RAY: There are a number of fairly entertaining moments to be found here as well as a couple of cute song numbers and dance routines, but on the whole it could have stood some bolstering in most departments. The story is of average interest and the cast, direction, and production are generally okeh. The screen play is by Edward Hope and Leonard Stern, based on a play by W. Somerset Maugham. Among the songs heard are "Someone To Watch Over Me," "I've Got A Crush On You," "How Come You Do Me Like You Do," "Down Boy," "Which One?" "I've Been Kissed Before." The entry seems best suited for adult audiences. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

ESTIMATE: Average western for the duallers.

CAST: Phil Carey, Gene Evans, Martha Hyer, William Bishop, Douglas Kennedy, Roy Roberts, Don Beddoe, Aaron Spelling, George Keymas, Mel Welles, Harry Harvey, Henry Rowland, Boyd Stockman. Produced by Wallace MacDonald; directed by Fred F. Sears.

STORY: Phil Carey returns to his home town after his release from jail. He decides to go straight and set up a blacksmith shop, but the townspeople are skeptical of his honesty. He manages to establish a practice, with the aid of his sweetheart, Martha Hyer, and new partner Douglas Kennedy. When Carey discovers that the gang plans to rob the town bank, he informs the populace, who make ready for the raid. Something goes wrong and the bandits escape. Carey is blamed, being accused of conspiring in the robbery attempt. With the aid of Kennedy, he escapes from the infuriated citizens, and the two head toward the gang's hideout. They talk ringleader Gene Evans into accepting them into the gang. Plans are made to rob a train. Kennedy, revealing his true identity of a Pinkerton man, tries to contact law officials. He is unsuccessful and forced to accompany the gang when they rob the train. No money is found, but Evans discovers Hyer to be aboard the vehicle and abducts her. The leader also learns of Kennedy's identity and has him killed. Evans makes plans to rob the town, forcing Hyer to trick the townsmen into leaving the town unprotected. When the gang rides into town, it is ambushed by women. The robbers are either killed or taken prisoner, credit being given to Carey, who is exonerated by the citizens.

X-RAY: The film has the excitement and melodrama necessary to please action-fans, and is okeh for the lower half. The acting and direction are standard, but the plot, although not unique, has some variation and moves along at a fast enough pace. Story and screen play are by David Lang.

AD LINES: "Branded An Outlaw, He Had To Prove His Innocence"; "Stalked By The Law, Hunted By Ruthless Killers, Where Could He Turn??"; "To Clear His Name, He Fought With Fists And Guns."

STORY: A band of pirates led by Anthony Dexter, arrive at a Latin American town in search of buried treasure. They discover that a church has been built over the site of the chest. Dexter journeys into town for the purpose of discovering whether the villagers know of the buried loot. He meets bar-maid Martha Roth and a friendship is established. The town is being guarded by a garrison of soldiers and the pirates must tear up the church in secret in order to find the chest. They fail in their first attempt. Tricking the soldiers into leaving town, the pirates take over the entire village, forcing the townspeople to dig inside the church. It is soon discovered that the treasure-chest has been already dug up. Priest Lon Chaney reveals that it is he who found the gold which was used for charity. Dexter, enraged, orders the town burnt, but the natives, under the leadership of Robert Clarke, revolt and battle the pirate band. Roth rings the church bell to recall the troops, falls from the bell-tower, and dies. The army arrives, and the pirates are killed.

X-RAY: Although the film has the color of its El Salvador setting and an okeh cast, the entry is inclined to lack excitement and contains a number of low spots, resulting in fair entertainment. It should fit in adequately on the lower half. Screen play is by Fred Freiberger and Al C. Ward.

AD LINES: "Wild Raiders Of The Tropic Seas"; "From The Seas They Stormed . . . And Brought Death And Violence With Them"; "A Search For Hidden Treasure In A Jungle Of No Return."

MGM

DRAMA 101M.

ESTIMATE: High rating entry on juvenile delinquency.

CAST: Glenn Ford, Anne Francis, Louis Calhern, Margaret Hayes, John Hoyt, Richard Kiley, Emile Meyer, Warner Anderson, Basil Ruysdael, Sidney Poitier, Vic Morrow, Dan Terranova, Rafael Campos, Paul Mazursky, Horace McMahon, Jameel Farah, Danny Dennis. Directed by Richard Brooks; produced by Pandro S. Berman.

STORY: Glenn Ford, young veteran, is hired to teach English at an all-boys school in a tough neighborhood. He's elated particularly because his wife, Anne Francis, is to have a baby. His students, led by Negro Sidney Poitier and Vic Morrow, show they have contempt for authority. At the end of the day, new teacher, attractive Margaret Hayes, offers him a lift home after making a hit with the students with a tight fitting skirt. When he goes to meet her, he hears sounds of a struggle and finds her in the grasp of a student in the darkened library. Ford battles the would-be attacker until help arrives, and he's taken away by the authorities. This further antagonizes his class and leads to Ford and fellow-teacher Richard Kiley being beaten. Kiley quits when the hoodlums smash his priceless record collection. Hayes continues to try and make a play for Ford who isn't having any. Francis is aggravated by anonymous phone calls and notes intimating Ford is playing around with Hayes. This brings on the premature birth of the baby boy, whose life hangs in the balance for several days, but he survives. Ford considers offering his resignation, but interest by Poitier and some others in his producing the Christmas show and in some of the classroom activities modifies his decision. Morrow brings things to a head by refusing to work and pulling a knife on Ford, who wants to escort him to the principal's office. Ford accuses him of attacking him and Kiley and of sending Francis the notes, and though slightly cut on the hand takes the knife away as the rest of the class led by Poitier refuse to help Morrow. Poitier leaves with Ford, pleased that he's not going to quit after all.

X-RAY: This one is really a hot one. It's rough, tough, and yet its motives are of the highest. It exposes, examines, and nails delinquency in schools in poorer and slum neighborhoods, and it also entertainingly suggests some possible solutions. Some of the language and some of the situations have rarely been presented on screens, and the result might very well shock some audiences. The end result is explosive realism and the word of mouth and exploitation values should prove big audience getters. The problems of today's teachers comes to the fore, and the public may be stirred in the proper direction by this phase of the film. Could this encourage further delinquency? It could but only if the situation is already a festering one. In other words, the toughs and the delinquents might very well get a kick out of seeing themselves and their methods portrayed upon the screens. Decent people should treat it as an expose of conditions today. As for entertainment values of the film, these are in the better category because dramatic intensity and suspense keep interest on high throughout. The cast is uniformly good with Ford turning in his best performance to date. He is more than ably supported by Anne Francis, Sidney Poitier, Richard Kiley, Margaret Hayes, and the others. The direction and production are very good. Aiding in the setting of the mood are the tunes "Rock Around The Clock," "Invention For Guitar And Trumpet," and "The Jazz Me Blues." The screen play is by Richard Brooks, who also directs, based on the novel by Evan Hunter.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher program rates.

AD LINES: "He Was Told—Don't Be A Hero And Never Turn Your Back To The Class"; "They Were After Diplomas In Delinquency Unless Someone Could Stop Them"; "Want A Little Action? . . . Come To School And Learn A Few Things Not Taught In Books."

Hit The Deck (519)

MUSICAL COMEDY 112M.

(CinemaScope)
(Eastman Color)

ESTIMATE: Entertaining musical entry.

CAST: Jane Powell, Tony Martin, Debbie Reynolds, Walter Pidgeon, Vic Damone, Gene Raymond, Ann Miller, Russ Tamblyn, J. Carrol Naish, Kay Armen, Richard Anderson, Jane Darwell, Alan King, Henry Slate, Jubalaires. Directed by Roy Rowland; produced by Joe Pasternak.

STORY: Navy chief petty officer Tony Martin and seamen Vic Damone and Russ Tamblyn return to San Francisco. Martin finds his song-and-dance sweetie, Ann Miller, has decided to marry a civilian since he won't wed her after six years of waiting. Damone finds his mother, Kay Armen, keeping company with J. Carrol Naish, and the latter is surprised at the grown son and becomes cautious. Tamblyn has been keeping it a secret that he is the son of an admiral, Walter Pidgeon, and he finds his sister, Jane Powell about to get mixed up with married actor-wolf Gene Raymond. Tamblyn meets dancer-singer Debbie Reynolds, learns of the whereabouts of Raymond, and he and his buddies hurry to rescue Powell. The apartment is wrecked, and Raymond emerges with a black eye and complaints to the Shore Patrol, which gets out an alarm for the three. They have several close calls, one of which is in Naish's flower shop where Martin makes believe that he is going to ask Armen to wed, which prompts a proposal from Naish. Powell tries to get Raymond to withdraw the charges, but he sets a trap for the trio and they are caught. Pidgeon is shocked that it might ruin his son's career in the Navy until his aide, Richard Anderson, announces that Raymond has arrived to drop the charges having been convinced that his career and marriage would suffer by the bad publicity. Everybody is happy come finale time, with Martin asking Miller to wed, Tamblyn and Reynolds looking forward to a future together, and Powell and Damone in love.

X-RAY: This entry is light, gay, and full of amusing entertainment as well as colorful settings and neat dance routines. Audiences will take it lightly and take to it. The story is interesting and holds the dance and comedy routines together nicely, while the performers turn in fine jobs. The direction and production are in the better class. All-in-all it's an entertainment package that should please most audiences looking for some fun and uncomplicated screen fare. Among the tunes heard are "Join The Navy," "Loo, Loo," "Hallelujah," "Keepin' Myself For You," "Lucky Bird," "A Kiss Or Two," "Why, Oh Why," "Sometimes I'm Happy," "I Know That You Know," "More Than You Know," "Ciribiribin," "Lady From The Bayou," and "Harbor Of My Heart." The screen play is by Sonya Levien and William Ludwig, based on the musical play, "Hit The Deck."

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher bracket.

AD LINES: "Hit The Entertainment Jackpot With 'Hit The Deck' . . . A Gay And Funny Film With Loads Of Music, Dancin' And Romancin' "; "Join The Navy . . . And Have Some Fun In CinemaScope"; "Three Gobs Had Only One Thing In Mind On Their First Shore Leave In Months . . . Girls, Girls, Girls."

Tarzan's Hidden Jungle (507)

MELODRAMA 73M.

ESTIMATE: Average series entry.

CAST: Gordon Scott, Vera Miles, Peter Van Eyck, Jack Elam, Zippy, Charles Frederichs, Richard Reeves, Don Beddoe, Ike Jones, Jester Hairston, Madie Norman, Rex Ingram, Lucky. Produced by Sol Lesser; directed by Harold Schuster.

STORY: Jack Elam, greedy white hunter, and Charles Frederichs have been hired by Don Beddoe to collect hides, elephant tusks, animal heads, etc., and they set about killing animals indescriminately. One of the gang crosses into territory controlled by a savage tribe led by Rex Ingram and he is thrown to hungry lions after killing an elephant. Elam learns that the tribe permits UN doctor Peter Van Eyck to enter their territory for medical teatment and research periodically. Through the efforts of his nurse, Vera Miles, Elam prevails on Van Eyck to permit them to go along for photographic purposes, hiding the fact that they are hunters. Miles learns their real purpose but is lost in the jungle and threatened by its hazards until Gordon (Tarzan) Scott arrives. Together they make their way to Ingram. The latter is incensed by efforts of Elam and company to drive the animals across the river so they could be slaughtered and orders Miles and Van Eyck killed for bringing the intruders. Scott saves the situation by calling the animals to return, with Elam and Frederichs crushed by the hordes of elephants. Scott saves the doctor and the nurse and peace is restored.

X-RAY: Devotees of the Tarzan series will find that this latest in the series fills the bill pretty well, with newcomer Gordon Scott filling in the title role neatly. There is a switch in story line in that Tarzan no longer has any female attachments but rather devotes his efforts to keeping peace in the jungle although he does appreciate shapely Vera Miles. There is enough action to keep youngsters and adults who like the series satisfied. The screen play is by William Lively based on the creations of Edgar Rice Burroughs.

AD LINES: "Another Thrilling Tarzan Adventure Brought To The Screen"; "When Killer Hunters Invade The Jungle, Tarzan Battles Them To The End"; "Savage Killers Battle Tarzan Deep In The Jungle."

ESTIMATE: Light hearted import should have wide appeal.

STORY: Dirk Bogarde enters medical school and is taken under the wing of students Kenneth More, who purposely flunks each year so that his grandmother's bequest of 1,000 Pounds a year while a student will continue; Donald Sinden, more interested in girls than study; and athlete Donald Houston. More is forced to study as his girl, Suzanne Cloutier, threatens to leave unless he makes some progress toward a degree. Life is fast and furious for the students, and Bogarde becomes interested in nurse Muriel Pavlow. Their romance blossoms despite the temporary distraction of lovely model Kay Kendall. The five years pass quickly for Bogarde after an inauspicious start in which he faints at the sight of blood; falls through a window of the nurse's quarters and is only saved from expulsion by the efforts of famed surgeon James Robertson Justice; and other misadventures involving his roommates. He completes the course and qualifies, proud to be a doctor but aware that uproarious student days are gone forever.

X-RAY: If medical school is not as depicted here, it certainly should be, for a more happy, likeable group of students never graced theatre screens. This Technicolor comedy broke all records in England, winning the equivalent of the Academy Award for More, and with the proper handling should more than satisfy on this side of the Atlantic. The dialogue is fast and funny, the situations amusing, and the performances bright and polished. More and Justice are particularly effective. The color, production, and direction are high calibre. This is a natural for the art spots and class houses, but there is no reason why it can't be played to the mass audience, who should enjoy themselves if proper selling gets them into the theatre. This one is guaranteed to make friends for several English performers. The screen play is by Nicholas Phipps from the novel by Richard Gordon.

AD LINES: "Five Years Of Mirth And Madness Make A 'Doctor In The House'"; "He Learned As Much About Women As Medicine, And It Was More Fun"; "England Loved It—So Will You."

ESTIMATE: Colorful entry has names and angles.

CAST: Tyrone Power, Susan Hayward, Richard Egan, John Justin, Agnes Moorehead, Rita Moreno, Hope Emerson, Brad Dexter, Henry O'Neill, Paul Thompson, Alexander D. Havemann, Louis Mercier, Emmett Smith, Jack Macy, Trude Wyler. Produced by Bert E. Friedlob and William A. Bacher; directed by Henry King.

STORY: In Ireland in 1847, Tyrone Power is a guest at the home of Henry O'Neill, where he has come from South Africa to purchase horses to help equip his force of commandos, men dedicated to seeking a free Dutch state. He and O'Neill's daughter, Susan Hayward, are attracted to each other, but he convinces her her place is not at his side just then. The potato blight kills the land and O'Neill, and Hayward marries neighbor John Justin. They set out for the new land of South Africa and her baby is born. In Capetown, they join a wagon train headed for free land some 800 miles distant through hostile Zulu-infested territory. Richard Egan, head of the outriders, is attracted to Hayward to the jealousy of his girl, Rita Moreno. They are besieged by thousands of Zulus. Among those killed is Justin and the situation is saved by the arrival of Power and his men. There is a fight between Egan and Power over Hayward, who loves Power, and the latter wins. They build a house. Power, however, is soon summoned away. Egan shows up and Hayward permits him to stay to help out with the chores. A storm brings down a tree on Egan's leg and amputation is necessary. Power's baby is born to her. Trading household possessions for gold with the natives, she comes across a huge rough diamond, which permits her to live in Capetown in style, and here Power finds her again as well as his son. A battle soon separates them again and she loses all her money. She and her sons try and recoup only to run across Egan again who heads a band of outlaws who have taken over a town. She is held prisoneer by him until Power and his men arrive and defeat Egan's men. He tries to escape using one of the youngsters as a hostage but is killed by a spear thrown by Power's native aid. Power at last feels free to join Hayward on their land now that peace and freedom have come to the land.

X-RAY: There are a goodly number of thrilling moments to be found here, especially the siege of thousands of Zulus plus some moments of high drama and action, and the entry as a whole proves entertaining. It is aided by competent performances by the cast, good direction and production. The story packs a load of situations in its lengthy telling and holds interest throughout. With some selling and exploitation, it should do well. The screen play is by Talbot Jennings, Frank Fenton, and Michael Blankfort, adapted by Jennings and William A. Bacher, and based on the novel by Helga Moray.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher bracket.

AD LINES: "A Handful Against Thousands Of Avenging Zulus In Color And CinemaScope"; "An Adventure Thriller Packed With Action And Bruising Romance"; "He Had A Job Taming Both The Country And The Girl."

(Goldstein)

(Ansco Color)

ESTIMATE: Good program entry.

CAST: Joel McCrea, Miroslava, Kevin McCarthy, John McIntire, Nancy Gates, John Carradine, Emile Meyer, Robert Cornthwaite, Walter Baldwin, Jaclynne Greene. Produced by Robert Goldstein; directed by Jacques Tourneur.

STORY: The western town practically owned by John McIntire, and his clan is visited by circuit judge Joel McCrea, who discovers that McIntire's son, Kevin McCarthy, has not been arrested or tried for a fatal shooting. He sets about to right that wrong to the dismay of legal advisor to the McIntire clan, John Carradine, and to the pleasant suprise of sheriff Emile Meyer. McCrea subdues McCarthy in the saloon and escorts him to jail. When Carradine has himself appointed prosecutor, McCrea realizes he must get the prisoner away to another town. He discovers that James Bell and his daughter, Nancy Gates, witnessed the shooting and that McIntire has an attractive and strong-willed niece, Miroslava, who makes a play for McCrea. The latter, Meyer, the prisoner, and the two witnesses sneak off in the night before McIntire's men can storm the jail. While McIntire and his men seek them out, Miroslava joins McCrea to warn him. McIntire and his men surround them and McCrea appears to surrender until he can get to a vantage point and open up with his guns. McIntire bows to the force of law and Miroslava goes with McCrea.

X-RAY: A highly interesting story well-built with suspense and drama is to be found here, along with competent performances by the cast as a whole and particularly McCrea. Action, too, is injected in proper proportion. The direction and production are in the good category. It should make up well as part of the program. The screen play is by Herb Meadow and Don Martin, based on a story by Louis L'Amour. Maximum aspect ratio: 1.85-1.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "It Took A 'Stranger On Horseback' To Stir Things Up"; "Action . . . Murder . . . Romance . . . Adventure Follow The 'Stranger On Horseback'"; "An Off-Beat Story About A 'Stranger On Horseback' And How His Arrival In Town Changed Some Lives."

ESTIMATE: Okeh programmer or art house entry.

CAST: Jack Hawkins, Glynis Johns, Noel Purcell, Laya Raki, Inia Te Wiata, Patrick Warbrick, Kenneth Williams, Tony Erstich, Edward Baker. Produced by George Brown; directed by Ken Annakin.

STORY: In 1820, ship's officer Jack Hawkins lands in sparsely settled New Zealand with Noel Purcell. They are taken prisoners by Maori tribesmen headed by Inia Te Wiata. Hawkins makes a good impression and is proclaimed a friend and given some land should he ever wish to return. Returning to England, he and Purcell are arrested for unwittingly carrying contraband given them by the captain. They are heavily fined and Hawkins decides to return and settle in New Zealand. Fiancee Glynis Johns accompanies him and they are married. With a few followers, they build a small settlement. Hawkins succumbs to the charms of Wiata's wife, Laya Raki, but the chief refuses to turn to violence. Peace is continually threatened by another tribe, with Wiata's priest, hating Hawkins, also plotting their downfall. Eventually the two enemies attack the settlement without Wiata's knowledge. Although the attackers are beaten off, they take their toll, with Hawkins and Johns dying together in the flaming cabin despite Wiata's attempts to rescue them. Their baby son survives and is cared for by Wiata as more settlers land.

X-RAY: A fairly colorful entry depicting life in settling of New Zealand by the whites has a story of average interest, some action sequences, interesting native footage, colorful settings, okeh performances, and average direction and production. The native angles can be exploited for programmer use or it can go in art houses. The screen play is by William Fairchild. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

AD LINES: "Savage Natives Fight For Their Land In New Zealand"; "Follow White Men Into New Lands And Thrilling Adventure"; "Action . . . Adventure . . . Torrid Romance . . . Savage Native Attacks."

Ma And Pa Kettle At Waikiki (519)

COMEDY
79M.

ESTIMATE: Okeh series entry.

CAST: Marjorie Main, Percy Kilbride, Lori Nelson, Cindy Garner, Claudette Thornton, Lowell Gilmore, Byron Palmer, Loring Smith, Esther Dale, Fay Roope, Teddy Hart, Oliver Blake, Mabel Alpertson, Russell Johnson, Ben Welden, Ida Moore, Charley Lung, Hilo Hattie. Produced by Leonard Goldstein; directed by Lee Sholem.

STORY: When Percy Kilbride's tycoon cousin in Hawaii, Loring Smith, is taken ill with overwork, he sends for Kilbride to take over in view of the letters Kilbride has written to him of his wealth and business knowhow. He is accompanied by Marjorie Main and their eldest daughter, Lori Nelson, to whom Byron Palmer, Smith's assistant, becomes attached. While Main causes a sensation among the feminine social set, Kilbride comes through with some accidental innovations at the factory which speed up production, one of which almost blows up the place. A competitor has Kilbride kidnapped so that he can't sign some necessary legal papers. He wanders away from his gunmen keepers and makes friends with a Hawaiian family. The latter assists Main in rescuing Kilbride from the crooks, who are turned over to the police. Main and Kilbride decide that it is time to go home, with Kilbride emerging as a hero and saving the business. The romance between Palmer and Nelson also grows riper.

X-RAY: On a par with previous entries, this latest in the series should please devotees as others have in the past, and it is best suited for the program where the releases find favor. The story is average, as are the performances, direction, and production. The screen play is by Harry Clork and Elwood Ullman. One song, "Kaleponi Hula" is heard.

TIP ON BIDDING: Usual program rates.

AD LINES: "Ma And Pa Whoop It Up In Hawaii Where The Grass Skirts Blow And The Pineapple Juice Flows"; "Ma And Pa At Their Funniest"; "It's Hula Time In Hawaii For Ma And Pa Kettle."

Man Without A Star (520)

OUTDOOR MELODRAMA

ESTIMATE: Off-beat outdoor action entry has the angles.

CAST: Kirk Douglas, Jeanne Crain, Claire Trevor, William Campbell, Richard Boone, Mara Corday, Myrna Hansen, Jay C. Flippen, Eddy C. Waller, Frank Chase, Roy Barcroft, Millicent Patrick. Produced by Aaron Rosenberg; directed by King Vidor.

STORY: Wandering cowhand Kirk Douglas saves fellow boxcar traveler William Campbell from taking a rap for a freight car murder of a train guard committed by another hitchiker. Campbell sticks to Douglas who teaches him to rope, ride, and shoot as they go to work for foreman Jay C. Flippen on a ranch owned by new purchaser Jeanne Crain. For relaxation, Douglas turns to Claire Trevor, woman of easy virtue. Crain announces she has bought more cattle and will let them graze wherever she pleases, despite requests from other ranchers to restrict her herds. Flippen refuses to carry out her orders so she asks Douglas to take over. The other ranchers string barbed wire to protect their grazing lands, and Douglas decides to leave after a fight with Campbell, who becomes Crain's defender, even killing a man who insults her. Her new foreman, Richard Boone, gets rough with the other ranchers. He also insults Douglas and makes a fool of him in public when he is gunless, so that Douglas joins the ranchers in their war on Crain and Boone. The latter has a fight with Campbell, who is wounded and warns Douglas of a stampede attack, which is stopped. Douglas beats Boone in a fight. The other ranchers having won their point try to get Douglas to remain and offer him a spread, but he decides to seek his destiny elsewhere. Campbell remains behind to marry a local rancher's daughter.

X-RAY: This is an off-beat western that has much of merit in it. It's loaded with action, dramatic moments, good performances, and better direction and production. There are sequences which are best suited for adult audiences. The story holds interest throughout, with the pace a good one. With a little extra effort, it might show better-than-average results. Two tunes are heard, "Man Without A Star" and "And The Moon Grew Brighter And Brighter." The screen play is by Borden Chase and D. D. Beauchamp, based on a novel by Dee Linford. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher program rates.

AD LINES: "He Had A Way With Men And Women . . . They Liked Him Or Hated His Guts"; "He Was Quick With A Guitar Or Gun And Hated To Be Fenced In"; "Action . . . Thrills . . . Raw Courage . . . The Immortal City

DOCUMENTARY
78M.

(Realart)
(Filmed in Italy)
(Print by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Good artistic entry for art and specialty spots.

CREDITS: Produced and directed by Jerome Cappi; narration written by Felix Doherty; narrated by Raymond Burr.

STORY: The histoic ruins, statues, palaces, and temples in and around Rome each have their place in the story of Rome and the story of the switch from paganism to the worship of the religion of Christ is told as each of the works of art are photographed. Early Christian hardships are related, the march on Rome by Constantine, his conversion to Christianity, the transforming of the pagan temples into temples of Christ, the attacks by Attila the Hun and those of the Saracens later, the progress made by science in the 15th century, the rejuvenation of St. Peters and a complete tour of that institution together with its fabulous art treasures, the Vatican City, its treasures, routines, building and gardens as well as its guards and its principal inhabitant, The Pope, are all to be seen. Visitors flocking for audiences with the Pontiff brings the film up to date with modern-day Rome getting its share of camera attention.

X-RAY: Suited primarily for art and specialty spots because of its subject matter, this entry filmed with special permission from the Vatican, is one of the better features of its type. Although lengthy, the film does get a chance to show off in color some of the treasures by Raphael, Cellini, Perugino, Michaelangelo, and many others, and narrator Burr does a fine job tying in the history of the city with its photographed landmarks and treasures. Heavily populated Catholic areas may flock to this, what with special attention given St. Peters, the Pope, the Vatican, and other religious shrines.

AD LINES: "A Story Never Before Told In Such Marvelous Detail"; "History Lives Again In A Colorful Presentation About 'The Immortal City'"; "A Thrilling Tale Of A City That Made History Through The Ages Told With Startling Realism And In Revealing Color."

ESTIMATE: Okeh for the art spots.

CAST: Michele Morgan, Kieron Moore, Francoise Rosay, Jack Watling, Philippe Lemaire, Nancy Price, Francis de Wolff, George Woodbridge, Fred Johnson, Dimitri, Michael Mulcaster, Frian Roper, Catherine Bradshaw. Produced by Nelson Scott; directed by Marc Allegret.

STORY: Michele Morgan returns to her home at Perribonka, a tiny Canadian village, after five years at school. She becomes the center of attraction for three young men. There is Jack Watling, her childhood sweetheart; Philippe Lemaire, gay trapper; and Kieron Moore, son of Morgan's godfather, Francis de Wolff, who has returned to his native town only to escape the police after years of crime in the cities. Morgan falls in love with Lemaire, but is disillusioned and brokenhearted when she finds him making love to another girl. Moore, borerd with his life in the backwoods, flirts with Morgan and finds himself in love. It is through his efforts to prove to Morgan that his love is sincere that he is finally caught by the police and killed. Morgan turns to Watling, shocked by Moore's death into realizing that love can only be built on understanding.

X-RAY: The film is graced with good acting performances, an interesting story that is filled with insight and human understanding, and good direction. The authentic Canadian background, captured by superior photography, also adds merit to the fare and makes it okeh entertainment for the art and specialty houses. Screen play by Marc Allegret.

BLACK ARROW. Columbia Serial. 15 chapters. In the cast are Robert Scott, Adele Jergens, Kenneth MacDonald, Robert Williams, Charles Middleton, Martin Garralaga, George Lewis, others. Directed by Lew Landers; produced by Robert Flothow. First Chapter, "City Of Gold." 28m. When first reviewed in October, 1944, it was said: "This opens in the period immediately following the Civil War, when the carpetbaggers came into a community and picked it so clean that almost every bit of territory was a shambles financially. One of these, Kenneth Jackson, hearing of a secret city of gold, takes his henchmen out west, and manages to stumble on an isolated tribe of fire-worshipping Indians, whom he entrances with some wooden matches. Because they are trespassing on an Indian reservation, they are stopped by several bona fide Navajo braves, who try to force them to come before the local Government agent, Charles Middleton, but the braves are killed. One of those killed was a Navajo chief and the father of Black Arrow, Robert Scott, who is ordered to avenge his father's death by murdering Middleton. As a result of his refusing to do so, he is driven from the tribe with some of his own tribe pursuing him with orders to kill him. FAIR." (7140).

BIRTHDAY PARADE, 20th-Fox—CinemaScope Specials. 10m. One of the most renowned royal processions from Buckingham Palace, the Trooping of the Color marking the official birthday of the Sovereign, is seen in Eastman Color. The ceremony begins when Queen Elizabeth rides out through the gates of her palace. On this occasion, the Goldstream Guards provide the escort for the Color. GOOD. (7503).

STAMPEDE CITY. 20th-Fox—CinemaScope Specials. 7m. Calgary, Canada, a peaceful old western town, comes alive with parades and pageants for "The Big Stampede." Plenty of horses with gayly clad cowboys and cowgirls, and Indians robed in all their finery are on the scene. GOOD. (7502).

Musical

TONY PASTOR AND ORCHESTRA. Columbia—Thrills Of Music. 10m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of September, 1948, it was said: "Disc jockey Fred Robbins introduces the number, and Tony Pastor and his orchestra go through their paces in a trio of tuneful novelty songs. The numbers heard are "The Maharajah Of Magador," "The Secretary Song," and "Man At The Door." This is a sprightly reel. GOOD." (Rosemary Clooney is seen as one-half of the Clooney Sisters.) (7954).

Color Novelty

ROUGH RIDING. MGM—Pete Smith Specialty. 9m. Some of the hazardous ways of winning prizes for the cowboy are shown in Technicolor at a Wyoming rodeo. Some of the cowboys follow the rodeo from town to town, paying entry fees to participate in some of the contests which can result in serious injury. Narration by Pete Smith. GOOD. (S-652).

Novelty

CANDID MICROPHONE. Columbia—No. 1, Series 2. 9m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of November, 1949, it was said: "Allen Funt, with the aid of the hidden microphone and motion picture camera, gets unsuspecting people to act natural on the screen. His first session is with a woman in an airline office who wants to buy a ticket to Denver. After he gets through, she almost decides to take the train. Next, he plays a clerk in a plumber's supply house, and tries to talk a character out of wanting to build a shower in a closet. The final sequence has him as adviser in the office of a honeymoon service, where he tries to sell a prospective bride a bill of the wrong goods. EXCELLENT." (7554).

Color Sports

CARIBBEAN PLAYGROUNDS. Warners—Sports Parade. 10m. At San Juan, Puerto Rico, a variety of sports are played including golf, water skiing, baseball, girls' softball, basketball, tennis, and horsemanship. In the British West Indies, we see thoroughbreds racing, soccer, football, rafting, sailboating, and marlin fishing. FAIR. (2505).

Sports

AQUATIC STARS. Columbia—World Of Sports. 9m. The first part of the film takes place in Miami Beach, where youngsters, not able to walk yet, are put through their water paces by Ralph Smith. The kids display real aquatic ability and a complete lack of fear. In the second part of the reel, Guy Scott demonstrates his method of teaching the sport of water skiing. FAIR. (7806).

JUST A REMINDER

• • These PINK "SERVISECTIONS" are the industry's oldest and most reliable means of establishing a file of reference data that becomes more valuable with each passing month and year. . . . Published every-second-week (26 forms each year) they are compiled and indexed by the Film Season starting with the first issue of September and ending with the last issue of August. . . . Separately bound and separately numbered, the last page of each form always indexes all Features reviewed since the start of the particular season, and the preceding "SERVISECTION" page on which any review may be found. . . . Reviews of Short Subjects are indexed at regular intervals. . . . At the end of each Film Season you will have accumulated a complete and detailed history of all film distributed in it, for your later use in locating reissuable or replayable product.

COMPLETE BACK SEASONS—are available to Subscribing Theatres at 52c per set!

. . . plus the fact that this is the ONLY* reviewing service in the entire trade press that gives detailed analytical reviews to ALL Features and ALL Shorts distributed during any particular Film Season!!!

THIS WE WILL BE HAPPY TO PROVE THROUGH A CONTRAST STUDY OF PAST SEASONS!

AND . .

For those Subscribing Theatres who wish to save and classify by seasons . . .

THE "Service-Kit" RING BINDER

will adequately house 2 Film Seasons (52 forms)

This sturdy, stiff-backed, 3-ring, loose-leaf binder is covered in dark blue levant grain Fabricoid that guarantees a long and useful life. The size is 10½ x 12¾ inches to fit these forms.

CAPTIVE AUDIENCES

SOME held 'em this way!

OTHERS held 'em this way!

YOU hold 'em THIS way

You don't have to resort to thumbscrews to get your patrons' attention...you've got it. And in their attention you have what other advertising media spend thousands for every year.

But are you exploiting the attention of this "captive audience" to your profit? Are you selling all your shows in advance? Are you putting over your contests and special events from your screen? MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

VOLUME 53 NUMBER 20

IT'S TIME FOR A LITTLE THINKING!

AN OPEN LETTER to Rita Hayworth, Abbott and Costello, Kirk Douglas, John Ford, Burt Lancaster, Jane Russell, Marilyn Monroe, Frank Sinatra, Joan Crawford, Cornel Wilde, Randolph Scott, John Wayne, Jimmy Stewart, Humphrey Bogart, John Hnston, Jose Ferrer, and every other star, director, or producer who takes a "percentage piece" in lieu of all or part of his or her salary:

Now that you are most often a Percentage Partner instead of a Hired Hand in the top-bracket features that result from your abilities and from your popularity with the movie-going public, you have a proprietary interest in both the distribution and exhibition of such features and should concern yourself with them. In today's restricted market, with less top-bracket features being made than at any time in the past 25 years, and with no major producer-distributor having a dime invested in theatres, or able to guarantee you any playing time except what he can sell to theatre customers, both your income and your future popularity must depend on a playoff of your top-bracket features in the maximum number of theatres and a viewing by a maximum number of patrons. It would even seem to be to your advantage to have a maximum number of theatres kept alive and healthy and ready to compete for your pictures.

Unfortunately this seems to be diametrically opposed to modern distribution methods!

Top distributors today seem to think in terms of fewer features, shown to fewer patrons in fewer theatres, at higher admission prices, with percentage terms that won't permit the theatre to live, and a resultant higher company profit than made previously from more features and a lot of theatres to boot. Scarcity and the economic pressure of the theatreman's big investment in theatre realty, are more prominently identified with today's film sales than the drawing power of the stars, the prominence of the story, or the capability of the director.

Thirty per cent less features than in 1945 are expected to return a bigger profit; so not only your top-bracket ones, but some that would have formerly been classified as "B's," must be forced into the high profit column. To accomplish this, there has been a steadily increasing demand on theatremen for higher percentages and guarantees, as a national policy and without exception, so that many smaller first-run and second-run theatres find it impossible to live and pay their bills on what is left. Such theatres are accordingly passing up the very top bracket features of yours that the public wants to see—to both the industry's and the public's loss.

Of course, the film peddler's reasoning is that any theatre's passing up of top bracket features only aggravates the scarcity of playable pictures at that particular location so that he, the distributor, is certain to get the same return on some lesser pictures and his profit position remains the same. That's just dandy for him! But where does it leave you? And your public?

There are really big hit-pictures today that, complete with their repeat engagements, only play 13,000 U.S. dates. Those same pictures, less mercilessly handled after the big first-run situations, and with their repeats, could play 17,000 to 20,000 dates. And that added volume could represent many more hundreds of thousands of gross to the Percentage Partners.

But there doesn't seem to be any individual picture thinking today. While the scarcity exists, the pressure will be on the theatreman, and even old reissues now completely owned by distributors can demand a high percentage. So distribution's objective is to keep the pressure on and to keep twisting the tail of exhibition. That doesn't take thinking! And it isn't good for theatremen or the public. Or for you!

P.S. For more evidence on this subject see National Allied's E.D.C. report directed to the meeting in St. Louis in February.

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

RECENTLY IN THE home office projection room, Charles Einfeld, vice-president, 20th-Fox, in charge of advertising and publicity, unveiled plans of the company to go in for more and more selling of product via TV on local levels. With this in mind, more materials are being made available for exhibitor participation.

KONECOFF

Einfeld's was the first company to make TV trailers several years back but they were discontinued because the demand was very small at the start. TV campaigns by theatres are on the increase, taking advantage of the larger number of operating stations as well as the many more sets that are in use, and requests have come in from as many as 300 exhibitors for TV materials which are available free to theatre customers. TV use is being included in cooperative campaigns on pictures that led themselves to the medium, and the entire TV advertising budget is being kept flexible for the year, according to Einfeld.

Future pictures are being filmed with special footage being shot simultaneously to supplement the stills and publicity material ordinarily worked with during production. In other words, a star of a film may welcome audiences to his or her home and, after a tour, plug the film they are working in; educational footage may be shot for use on shows intended for youngsters with appropriate plugs where this is feasible, or the camera may follow the star away from the set and show him visiting the area where the film is being shot to make an interesting travel bit on a TV show.

The campaigns by the company are being compared to the publicity received in the Sunday newspapers, where good

New Films Spark Rally

NEW YORK—Business continued spotty last weekend in the Broadway first-runs, with some spots rallying sharply with strong new product. According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Battle Cry" (Warners). Paramount was heading for a $48,000 sixth week, the fifth week having been $51,000.

"Untamed" (20th-Fox). Roxy opened to $30,254 for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the initial session expected to reach $50,000.

"Hit The Deck" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, tallied $80,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the second week bound to top $115,000.

"The Country Girl" (Paramount). Criterion did $24,500 on the 13th week.

"Bad Day At Black Rock" (MGM). Rivoli claimed the sixth week would gross $9,000.

"Underwater" (RKO). Mayfair expected the fifth week to garner $10,000.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor announced that the opening session would hit $59,000.

"New York Confidential" (Warners). Victoria was down to $13,000 on the fourth week.

"Timberjack" (Republic), Loew's State was heading toward $10,000 on the opening week.

"The Long Gray Line" (Columbia). Capitol reported $34,000 for the fifth week.

German Denies Print Lack

NEW YORK—William J. German, president, W. J. German, Inc., distributors of Eastman raw stock, declared last week that motion picture companies are making more prints per picture than at any other time in the past.

German said that on the average, from 300 to 550 prints per picture are being made now, as opposed to from 250 to 375 prints per picture on the average two years ago. He pointed out that distributors claim that there is no print shortage.

German also predicted that the next year will see more pictures produced in Hollywood by major studios and independents, and that there will be more big pictures which will run longer.

L. Schwartz Heads Century

NEW YORK—Leslie R. Schwartz was elected president, Century Circuit, Inc., last week, succeeding Fred J. Schwartz, now president, Distributors Corporation of America, who still remains as a director of Century.

Also named by the directors were Samuel Goodman, first vice-president; Andrew A. Nelson, second vice-president; Martin H. Newman, treasurer; Henry C. Miner, Jr., board chairman; and Frank Milton was named to the board to fill the vacancy created by the recent death of David Schlein.

U-I Announces Plans To Produce For TV

NEW YORK—The following announcements were made by U-I President Milton R. Rackmill at the annual stockholders meeting last week:

The company will definitely enter telepix production, which has been under study for many months; U-I's library of old features is not for sale to TV interests at the moment, the company awaiting a more propitious time; The company is not interested in any co-production deals; purchase of Decca Records stock by his group sufficient to give control of that company, which owns 72 per cent of U-I's outstanding common stock was occasioned by information that a "couple of other groups of financial wolves" were buying up Decca common with a view to control; CinemaScope's advent last year had no effect on U-I grosses; cost per picture rose last year from $10,000 to $15,000, and Rackmill made it clear that he regards budgets of more than $2 or $2½ millions as out of the question.

Rackmill said that he expects profits this year to be about equal with those of 1954, saying that he had no reason to expect either a rise or drop. For the year ending Oct. 30, 1954, the net earnings of the company were $3,797,688 or $3.58 per share.

The entire board of directors and officer slate was reelected, and following the stockholders' meeting, the board voted a quarterly dividend of 25 cents per share of common, payable March 30 to stockholders of record on March 21.

Toll-TV Group Names PR Firm

NEW YORK—The Joint Committee on Toll-TV last week announced the appointing of the public relations firm of Robert S. Taplinger and Associates to represent not only the industry, but also such other interested parties as are sympathetic to the committee's aims.

It was also announced that Marcus Cohn, Washington firm of Cohn and Marks, will continue to serve as legal counsel for the committee.

It was expected that with placing of Taplinger's services at the disposal of all groups opposed to toll-TV, the committee would encourage others to join the exhibitors in the fight to prevent its licensing by the Federal Communications Commission.

Meanwhile, the committee was reported as progressing very slowly in its efforts to gather and prepare definite data and material for submission to the FCC on or before May 9, as an "interested party." Discussions this week included plans to retain expert engineering service and advice as well as the services of an expert economic consultant.

Milstein Mourned

HOLLYWOOD—J. J. Milstein, 57, veteran in distribution since 1914, died last fortnight following a long illness. He is survived by his widow and a daughter.

Wisconsin Allied Sets Up Emergency Defense Group

MILWAUKEE—National Allied last week authorized the board of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Wisconsin to establish a Wisconsin Allied Emergency Defense Committee to work in cooperation with the national EDC.

Wisconsin Allied was empowered "to set up machinery for hearing and attempting to resolve the just complaints of our member theatres as they relate to the unreasonable sales policies of the distributors."

Wisconsin Allied is also expected to run a survey of its theatres to ascertain the complaints, which will be dealt with in combination with the members of the EDC and the national organization.

Benjamin Drive Sets UA Billings Record

NEW YORK—The final week of United Artists' Bob Benjamin Drive has racked up billings of $1,900,000, the greatest seven-day total in the company's 36-year history, it was announced last week by William J. Heineman, vice-president in charge of distribution and co-captain of the salute to UA's chairman of the board.

The concluding week of the six-month domestic sales push, which ended March 5, topped the best previous seven-day billings by $796,000. The former record was $1,104,000.

The salute to Benjamin, which will award a total of $50,000 in cash prizes to the 32 branches competing in the United States and Canada, was led by co-captains Heineman and B. G. Kranze, general sales manager. Final standings of the exchanges, which competed in three groups of equal grossing potential, will be announced late in March.

In disclosing the results of the Bob Benjamin sales campaign, Heineman declared, "The tremendous billings achieved in this greatest United Artists Drive represents an overwhelming tribute to our chairman of the board. To every member of the sales force who has contributed to this unprecedented performance, I want to extend congratulations on behalf of all home office executives."

Unanimous Vote Validates Admissions Tax Measure; Retroactive Provision Hit As Senate Delays Action

ALBANY—The New York State Assembly last week unanimously passed a bill validating the collection by New York and other cities of the breakage on the five per cent admissions tax. The measure is retroactive to June 30, 1954. The Senate has delayed action on the bill in order to study it further.

Dr. John C. Phillips, executive director, Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatre Association; Joseph M. Geoghan, Century Theatres; and Morton Sunshine, executive director, Independent Theatre Owners Association, presented the industry case to the lawmakers. Emanuel Frisch, president, MMPTA, protested in the Ways and Means Committee that "the entire five per cent admissions tax imposed by the city of New York is discriminatory and excessive, and that the exhibitors are now suffering under the burden."

The major opposition to the law centered about its retroactive clause, of which the legality was doubted.

The law states that "the grant of the authority to impose the taxes was intended to include the power to employ the customary methods of dealing with fractions of a cent so as to eliminate any need to collect such fractions individually and at the same time to assure collections which in the aggregate would equal the amount of the tax authorized. This intent was understood by the State Tax Commission, which under the Enabling Act of 1947, was required to prepare model local laws, ordinances and regulations for the assistance of local officials." The Commission used a schedule to insure this result in its model laws, and cities taking advantage of the enabling act have done likewise.

Senator Fred G. Moritt, Democrat, Brooklyn, stated that he could not understand "why the motion picture industry has been singled out for taxation" in explaining why he blocked the passage of the amendment. He called the amendment a bad bill, and asked why the Legislature "should be asked to close the fourth door. The industry is already shut in on three sides—through the federal admissions tax, the New York City five per cent tax, and television."

$600,000 Suit Filed

NEW YORK—Triple damages amounting to $600,000 was asked in a suit filed last week in Federal Court by the Idamin Amusement Corporation against the eight major distributors, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, and National Theatres and their subsidiaries.

Idamin, operators of the York, Manhattan, charges the defendants with discriminating against Idamin and claims that a conspiracy to eliminate competition by a series of unreasonable, unjust, and discriminating runs and clearances against the plaintiff and in favor of Loew's and RKO theatres.

Industry Execs At COMPO Meet Plan Lures For Lost Audiences

NEW YORK—More than 70 top exhibition and distribution executives met last week through the efforts of COMPO at the Hotel Astor, and discussed methods of increasing the theatre-going population. The session was presided over by Wilbur Snaper, Allied of New Jersey, and Pat McGee, TOA. Robert W. Coyne, COMPO counsel, opened the meeting.

Highlighting the discussion was consideration of an audience poll, outlined by "Rick" Ricketson, Fox Inter-Mountain Circuit, Denver. The plan calls for two chairmen, representing exhibition and distribution, to head the national poll committee. Alice Gorham, United Detroit Theatres, chairman of COMPO's poll committee, explained that moviegoers would vote in theatre lobbies all over the country for five categories, best picture, most popular male and female stars, and most promising male and female newcomers. Voting would take place from Thanksgiving to Dec. 7, and winners may be honored on a national TV show.

Leonard Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, discussed the problem of getting young folks between the ages of 15 and 30, who comprise 80 per cent of theatre audiences, back to the movies. He suggested overcoming the sudden rise in prices from the children's level to an adult level at the age of 12, more films with youngster appeal, and development of young stars. He added that he had talked over the plan with the major studios who agreed with the program.

Elmer Rhoden, National Theatres' president, discussed the possibility of a touring production exhibit, Filmorama, with production props from each studio to create interest throughout the country in upcoming productions.

Leon Back, Baltimore, Md., exhibitor, reported on a Coca-Cola tie-up in his area whereby teenagers as the guests of the beverage company tour theatres and witness their operation. A committee was named to examine advertising, programming, and media. It includes Emanuel Frisch, Oscar Doob, Harry Goldberg, Harry Mandel, Rodney Bush, Charles Schlaifer, Charles Steinberg, Ken Clark, Arthur De Bra, and Ralph Russell.

Single Bills Dropped

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Memphis suburban theatres have abandoned their single bill policy after a one month's trial, it was announced last week by James A. West, president, Memphis Neighborhood Theatre Owners Association.

The theatres had a gentlemen's agreement on twin bills, but the Park, owned by Ruben Lester, was not a party to the agreement.

16mm. Documents Opened

HOLLYWOOD—Defendants in the government's 16mm. anti-trust case will be able to examine the documents which the government plans to use in its prosecution, it was revealed last week. The defendants must also reveal their documents in the case to government attorneys.

Commandments" News Bureau Organized By Paramount

HOLLYWOOD—A full-scale international news bureau, staffed and operated on the lines of a news syndicate, has been established by Paramount to handle news and information concerning Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments," being filmed in VistaVision and Technicolor.

The news bureau is at full operating strength now, a full year and a half before planned release of "The Ten Commandments," to guarantee comprehensive news coverage. Reason for the unprecedented scope of the publicity campaign, according to Jerry Pickman, Paramount vice-president in charge of advertising, publicity, and exploitation, is to comply with interest in and appeal of the picture.

The news bureau will be under the over-all supervision of Teet Carle, head, Paramount Studio publicity, and will be under the immediate direction of Art Arthur, Cecil B. DeMille's executive assistant in charge of public relations.

Workshop Facsimile Set For AMPA Meet

NEW YORK—Feature attraction at AMPA's meeting scheduled for March 23 in the Georgian Room of the Picadilly Hotel will be a facsimile of MGM's Ticket Selling Workshop, it was announced last week by David A. Bader, AMPA president, who has invited Mike Simons, director of customer relations for MGM, to tell members just what makes the Workshops tick.

With the approval of Howard Dietz and Charles M. Reagan, Simons has accepted and is bringing all the scenery and props to New York from out-of-town meetings. The Georgian Room will be decorated exactly as it would be for one of the MGM meetings. Those attending will assume the role of exhibitor guests and will be given the Workshop treatment in brief form.

Emery Austin, MGM director of exploitation, will be one of the featured panelists. He will speak briefly about his new "34th" promotion aid, the campaign material for MGM's 1955 Motion Picture Theatre Celebration which is currently a Workshop highlight.

TOA Mulls N. Y. For '56

NEW YORK—Theatre Owners of America reported last week that negotiations were under way to obtain the use of New York City's new Coliseum, now under construction, for use in holding the 1956 convention.

The Coliseum, scheduled to be completed in March, 1956, will be the world's largest exposition and convention hall. It is presumed that efforts would also be made to hold the annual TESMA-TEDA trade show in conjunction with the convention.

TOA's 1955 convention has been set for Los Angeles, Oct. 23-7.

Technicolor Ends Year On Optimistic Note

NEW YORK—Net profit of Technicolor, Inc., and it subsidiary, Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation, for 1954 came to $2,319,160, or $1.18 per share, it was revealed last week by Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president, in the annual stockholders' report.

Despite the introduction of new materials, procedures, and controls during the past year, said Dr. Kalmus, earnings after taxes were level with the record first half of 1953, an all time high. Net profit in 1953 was $2,371,735.

Technicolor ended 1954 in a very strong liquid position, with $14,742,040 in current assets, as against liabilities of $5,274,655, or net current assets of $9,467,385, of which $11,872,452 are in cash and United States government obligations.

Dr. Kalmus said that currently, 92 feature length pictures in color by Technicolor or with prints by Technicolor are either under contract or in preparation for production photography. In 1954, Technicolor had commitments for 88 feature length pictures.

In the foreign field, Technicolor, Ltd., British affiliate, showed a profit before taxes of 730,756 Pounds, compared with 905,696 Pounds for 1953. Despite this difference, however, profit after taxes in 1954 was 28,000 Pounds greater than in 1953, due to the lowered excess profits tax. Total for 1954 after taxes was 362,756 Pounds.

Kalmus Honored As Pioneer

HOLLYWOOD—Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president and general manager, Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation, received the Pioneer Award of the Foreign Press Association at a ceremony last fortnight at the Cocoanut Grove of the Ambassador Hotel.

In making the award to Dr. Kalmus, the Foreign Press Association broke a 12-year-old tradition of honoring only actual film makers with the Pioneer Award, according to Frederick Porges, president. This was the first time a figure connected with technical advances in the motion picture industry has been so honored.

Merian C. Cooper, who presented the award to Dr. Kalmus, noted that Kalmus was a pioneer in the film industry in the truest sense. He said that Technicolor, in bringing color to the screen, changed and widened the possibilities of movie making in the same manner that sound and wide screen procedures changed them.

Picker Takes Hospital Post

NEW YORK—Eugene Picker, Loew's Theatres, was designated as the new chairman, Will Rogers Memorial Hospital fund raising and finance committee, following the retirement of Fred J. Schwartz after three years service.

Schwartz was lauded by A. Montague, hospital president, for "superb leadership and consecrated service" at a luncheon in his honor and presented with a monogrammed pen set in recognition of his services.

The retiring president announced that the fifth annual Christmas Salute, now nearing completion, had already yielded $140,000 for the hospital, assuring a new record when all the returns are in.

Canadians Take Part In Workshop Session

TORONTO—Canadians participated in the MGM Ticket-Selling Workshop gatherings, held in the Cadillac Hotel, Detroit, with Garfield Cass, Toronto office, acting as host to the Canadian representatives from Odeon, Famous Players, Twentieth Century Theatres, and Premier Operating Corporation.

The group from Famous Players included Bert Brown, Dan Krendel, Bud Barker, and Bill Trudell, London. Those from Odeon included Jim Hardiman, Odeon ad-pub chief, who was joined by managers from nearby cities. Raoul Auebach, Twentieth Century Theatres, made the trip, while Premier Operating's group was led by David Axler and included managers of 10 theatres.

MGM's Detroit office staff, joined by Chet Friedman, Canadian head office, participated in a briefing session preceding the Workshop.

Canadian Comment

A "Fun Frolic" is to be held by the newly-organized Women of the Motion Picture Industry. Already the gals have had two parties, and the bazaar, to be held in Toronto, is for "fun." The 55-member organization, whose main purpose is charity, made one family particularly happy at Christmas with a number of hampers.

The opening of "Innocents In Paris," at the RKO Palace, New York, meant a switcheroo for the motion picture business. The film rights are owned by a Canadian company, Cardinal Films. This is a switch. For a Canadian company to also have USA distribution rights is rare; it's usually the other way around.

Although exhibitors continue to have their hopes high for the possibility that the law which bans anyone under 16 from theatres in Quebec would be repealed, discussion in the Quebec legislation has taken a negative turn. The law was originally passed in the '20's after a fire in a movie house cost the lives of 27 children.

Letters have been sent all exhibitors in Canada by the Motion Picture Industry Council asking for pledges towards the public relations campaign for the industry. The pledge asked is five cents a seat or per car annually. Under the plan, an executive secretary would be hired who would be qualified to engage in public relations work, and who will work under the direct supervision of the rotating executive director. An office will be set up in Toronto and a sub-office in Montreal, so that plans worked out for English-speaking magazines and newspapers can also be acted upon in their French counterparts in Quebec. Already, Famous Players, Odeon, and Twentieth Century Theatres have pledged their one hundred per cent support of the plan.

The J. Arthur Rank Screen Advertising Services, Ltd., has opened offices at 20 Carlton Street, Toronto, under the direction of Jack D. Ralph, who before moving to Britain six years ago, was secretary of the National Film Board. Through the new setup, JARO will seek to extend its screen advertising service to Canada. With Ralph, vice-president, are Bob Wallace and Neil Sneyed, joint managing directors, who were the principals in Publicity Films, a Toronto firm acquired by the newest JARO division in this country. It is JARO's intention to have their Canadian subjects offer native radio and TV stars, as well as American and British film players.

Stepped up promotional activity has been begun by five Toronto suburban Famous Players theatres, the Beach, College, Parkdale, Alhambra, and St. Clair. The theatres initiated a program of free gifts every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights. The promotion with the label of "Ladies' Night" started with the first gift a ballpoint pen. A feature of the promotion is the "no service charge."

England

British movie stars Jack Hawkins, Diane Cilento, and Donald Sinden have been singled out for special honors by the Variety Club of Great Britain. The organization named Hawkins as "star of 1954," chose Miss Cilento as the "most promising actress of the year," and voted Donald Sinden as the "actor who made the most progress."

Among the Canadian industryites in attendance at the recent MGM Detroit, Mich., Workshop meeting were, left, left to right, Bill Trudel, Famous Players Canadian Corporation district supervisor, London, Ont.; Bert Brown, promotion manager, Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto; Dan Krendel, Famous Players Canadian Corporation district supervisor, Toronto; Norm "Bud" Barker, Famous Players Canadian Corporation assistant advertising manager, Toronto; Ed Lamoureux, manager, Palace, Windsor; Bruce Fraser, manager, Park, Windsor; Bob Knevels, manager, Tivoli, Windsor;

Hirsch Carries The BALLy

CHINO, California's institution for men, is famed as the first prison in the United States wi hout bars and is the setting for producer Hall Bartlett's "Unchained," being released by Warners.

Hardly the place one would expect to find a self-respecting foo:ball player, and yet starring in "Unchained" is Elroy (Crazylegs) Hirsch, gridiron great turned movie star. Hirsch plays his second starring role in the film, having previously enacted his own biography for Bartlett in "Crazylegs, All American."

To achieve maximum attention for the film, Mort Blumenstock's publicity department arranged a 14-city tour for Hirsch, commencing in New York. A natural tieup, because of his sports fame, was appearances on various sports programs, both the radio and TV variety, as well as press interviews and assor:ed interview dates.

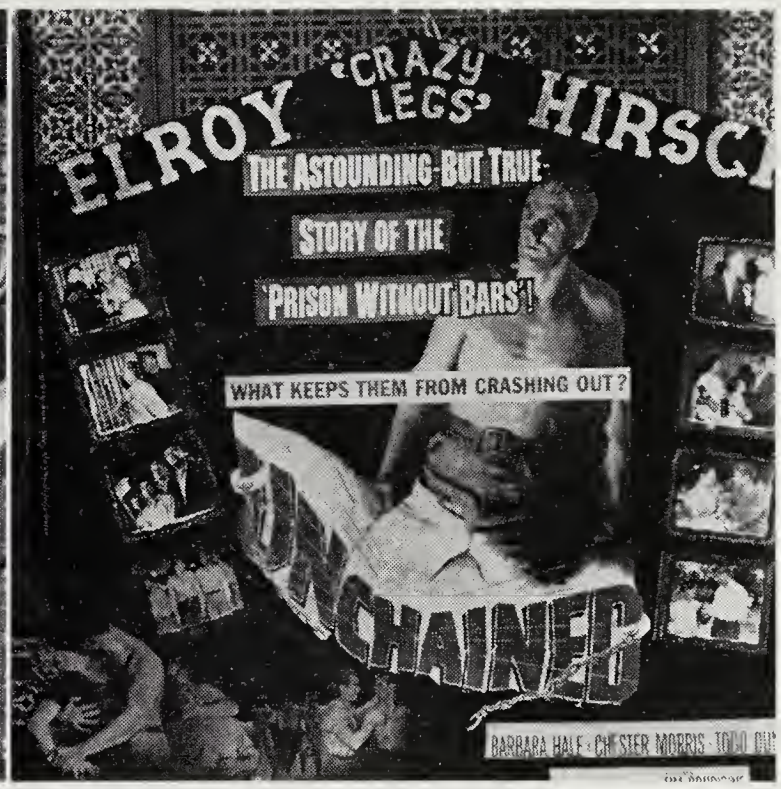
In New York, for instance, Hirsch appeared on sports shows run by Harry Wismer, who has announced his football exploits often through the years; Jimmy Powers; and Jackie Robinson, and then, for a change in pace, he made a guest appearance on CBS's "Strike It Rich" and several other network shows.

Included in the star's itinerary were Buffalo, Boston, Providence, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Washington, Baltimore, Chicago, Detroit, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Kansas City, and Dallas, always immediately preceding the opening of the film so that his rounds of appearances could have the greatest impact.

It was not entirely a sports operation, however, for included on the tour were meetings with prominent figures in the realm of exhibition and leading civic opinion makers in each key stop. Those who met him were agreed that the personable athlete had made the sizable jump from football to films quite successfully.

It appears that Bartlett's production talent and Warners' distribution knowhow have resulted in a happy combination of cinematic achievement.

Hirsch is met in Washington by George A. Crouch, general manager, Stanley Warner Theatres, in the Washington territory.



Hirsch takes time out to visit Pittsburgh Variety Club, and meets I. Elmer Ecker, chief barker, and Harry Hendel, head, Allied of Pittsburgh.

Top, Hirsch and Harold Brown, president, United Detroit Theatres. Bottom, Hirsch in Minneapolis. L. to r., John Branton, buyer, Minnesota Amusement Company; Hirsch; Edward Hyman, vice-president, United Paramount Theatres; M. B. Adcock, and Art Anderson, Warners.

Hirsch hits Buffalo, shown here conferring with Eddie Miller, manager, Paramount, Buffalo, as they plan together for his activities to promote "Unchained" in the Buffalo area. The star also made several local TV and radio appearances.

"Oasis," Europe's First C'Scoper, To Get Gala International Bows

NEW YORK—"Oasis," the first European motion picture filmed in CinemaScope and the initial French and German co-production in the new entertainment medium, will have gala world premiere openings this spring in principal cities of England, France, Germany, Belgium, and Switzerland, preceding its American debut later in the year, 20th-Fox, distributors of the film, announced last week.

Filmed in its entirety in Morocco with an international cast headed by Cornell Borchers, Michele Morgan, Pierre Brasseur, and Carl Raddatz, under the direction of Yves Allegret, the production also will be the first tri-lingual attraction in CinemaScope, being released in German, French, and English versions.

Darryl F. Zanuck, 20th-Fox vice-president in charge of production, currently is in Europe advising on the editing of the film which has generated tremendous interest on the continent because its co-production illustrates dramatic post-war harmony between France and Germany.

First premiere openings of "Oasis" will be held in five principal cities in Germany, Berlin, Hamburg, Cologne, Dusseldorf, and Frankfurt. Stars of the German and French film industries, government officials, and dignitaries from the civic, social, and business worlds will be in attendance at the openings.

Following the German introduction of "Oasis," the film will have an invitational premiere in Paris, at the Normandie; next on the premiere agenda will be capital city openings in Belgium, Switzerland, and England.

Rappaport Suit Settled

WASHINGTON—The anti-trust suit brought by I. M. Rappaport, Baltimore, Md., against five distributors and two theatre circuits was settled out of court last week for an undisclosed cash payment, following three weeks of trial.

Brought on behalf of Rappaport's Hippodrome and Town against Loew's, Paramount, Warners, United Artists, and U-I, and against the Loew's and Stanley Warner Circuits, the suit alleged that the two theatres had been unable to get enough first-run pictures from 1947 through 1951 due to a conspiracy among the distributors.

The suit sought $900,000 damages and an injunction.

For his work in the production of the short subject, "Assignment: Children," which Paramount is releasing for the United Nations, Danny Kaye was recently presented a Brotherhood Award by Dr. William Lindsay Young, right, vice-president, National Conference of Christians and Jews, on the set of "The Court Jester" in the presence of Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount vice-president and studio head.

Columbia To Occupy New Quarters In '56

NEW YORK—Columbia announced last week acquisition for its own use and occupancy of 711 Fifth Avenue, a 15-story and penthouse fireproof office building. Leasehold ownership of the property was acquired from Webb and Knapp, Inc., and associates, who retain the fee.

Purpose of the acquisition is to enable the company to bring under one roof its many departments now scattered throughout the midtown section of the city. Negotiations for the structure were conducted by William Zeckendorf, president, Webb and Knapp, Inc., and Jack Cohn, executive vice-president, Columbia. Harry J. Takiff, Columbia executive, will administer all affairs pertaining to the building. Richard D. Gittlin, president, Republic Funding Corporation, acted as broker.

Columbia revealed plans for a $3,000,000 improvement program under the supervision of the architectural firm of Kenneth H. Rippen Company, Inc. Plans call for these improvements to be completed and the building ready for Columbia occupancy early in 1956.

Barney Balaban, president, Paramount Pictures, recently accepted the post of honorary chairman of the 1955 Joint Defense Appeal of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, and Harry Brandt, president, Brandt Theatres, right, has accepted the post of vice-chairman. The drive will be formally opened by a dinner on April 3 at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

Goldwyn's "Guys" Gets The "G" Back In MGM

NEW YORK—After several weeks of negotiations, contracts were signed last week whereby Samuel Goldwyn's forthcoming screen production of the musical comedy, "Guys And Dolls," will be distributed throughout the world by MGM. The announcement was made by Nicholas M. Schenck, president, Loew's, Inc., the parent company of MGM.

Goldwyn was the founder of the Goldwyn Picture Corporation, one of the companies that merged as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Prior to this merger, Goldwyn resigned to become an independent producer in 1924. While Goldwyn will produce "Guys And Dolls" independently at his own studios and with his own finances, this new contract allies him after 31 years to the Leo the Lion trademark which he introduced to the public in 1917. The present MGM Studios were originally known as the Goldwyn Studios.

The budget for the production of "Guys And Dolls" will be five million dollars. Schenck made the following statement, "We are pleased that an important independent producer like Samuel Goldwyn has shown such confidence in our organization as to entrust his greatest production effort to our distributing company. It is a significant step for us in our new policy of joining with the leading independent producers in the marketing of cutstanding films."

Look Honors Schary, Others

NEW YORK—Look magazine's 1954 industry award was given recently to Dore Schary, MGM vice-president and studio head, for "his continued leadership as a Hollywood spokesman and his active participation in a long list of civic enterprises devoted to the public welfare."

A special award was made to Russel V. Downing, president and managing director, Radio City Music Hall, for making the Hall "a model showcase for the best film entertainment."

Other "Bests" selected for 1954 are actor, Bing Crosby, "The Country Girl," Paramount; actress, Judy Garland, "A Star Is Born," Warners; supporting actor, Edmond O'Brien, "The Barefoot Contessa," United Artists; best supporting actress, Eva Marie Saint, "On The Waterfront," Columbia; best male newcomer, Jack Lemmon; best female newcomer, Helen Traubel; best producer, Walt Disney, "20,000 Leagues Under The Sea," Buena Vista; best director, Alfred Hitchcock, "Rear Window" and "Dial M For Murder," Paramount and Warners; best cinematographer, Boris Kaufman, "On The Waterfront"; best screen writers, Valentine Davies and Oscar Brodney, "The Glenn Miller Story," U-I.

Irving Berlin received Look's Achievement Award for "White Christmas," Paramount, and "There's No Business Like Show Business," 20th-Fox.

LA Lauds Warner

BURBANK, CAL.—The Los Angeles City Council last week passed a resolution of merit paying tribute to Jack L. Warner, executive producer, and to Warners studios, for "meritorious initiative and for making the civilian population increasingly defense-conscious.

RKO Circuit Reports In Black Ink In '54

NEW YORK—The 1954 report of RKO Theatres Corporation revealed last week that at the end of 1954 the company had 85 theatres, of which 81 were company owned, and four leased to others. Of the 85, 45 were owned in fee, nine were held under ground lease, 20 leased, and the company had a 50 per cent interest in companies which owned five theatres in fee and leased six more. In addition, RKO had a half interest in two Canadian theatres owned in fee which were leased to others.

Under the terms of the consent decree, RKO must dispose of a minority stock interest in one company by March, 1956. The company is in a position to acquire new theatres with the permission of the court.

The net income in 1954 was $829,920, compared with a loss of $296,570 in 1953, both years taking into consideration special items.

Total income last year was $32,614,823, compared with $34,075,569 in 1953, the loss being due to operating fewer theatres. Income from admissions and miscellaneous theatre income in 1954 was $29,261,989, against $31,075,122 in 1953, while rents and other income amounted to $3,352,834 against $3,000,447. RKO reported that it spent in excess of $600,000 for new theatre equipment last year, as against $1,500,000 in 1953. All RKO theatres can project films in all media now in general use.

Meyers Raps Toll-TV

KANSAS CITY—Abram F. Myers, general counsel, National Allied, told the convention of the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Kansas and Missouri that "a stay at home society will react to the disadvantage of every business." He urged an all-out effort to oppose toll-TV on the part of exhibitors.

Ruben Shor, president, National Allied, stressed the value of publicity in urging the theatre operators to take their message directly to the consumer. Regarding rentals, Shor emphasized the need for checking on enchanges through forms listing companies as the "three treating you best" and the "three treating you worst."

Election of officers will be held by mail this month.

Makelim "Goal In Sight"; Needs Sufficient Contracts

HOLLYWOOD—Hal R. Makelin, replying to a request for information concerning his production and distribution plans, wrote to Homer Tegtmeir, vice-president, Northern California Theatre Association, last week that he will start production when sufficient exhibitor contracts have been received to eliminate practically every element of loss to exhibitor, producer, banks, distributor, and laboratory. He added, "I cannot and will not be stampeded by exhibitor leaders or others . . . into going ahead half cocked."

The producer reminded Tegtmeir that meetings were held last July, at which the Makelin plan was fully explained, and that the plan has not changed since then. Makelin also wrote that "the goal is in sight."

features are being used constantly. TV stations have certain programs where they can use some interesting and informative material gratis, and 20th-Fox has come through with one such feature for its current release, "Untamed," where background material on the production was filmed and put out in a four-minute version, "Destination Zuzuland," with the result being interesting, informative, and containing a plug for the film. Then, too, a picture strip with scenes from the film can be used with copy supplied.

Martin Michel, radio and TV head, showed how a typical TV program might incorporate the story of the film tied in with special scripts supplied local station personalities. Local experts too can be brought before the cameras to present some interesting yarns which are then backed up by footage from the film.

Study has shown that to use the 10 second spot during the station break is not advisable unless the film is a well-known property, "The Robe" for instance, and more time must be utilized to tantalize audiences with scenes and information on the film.

The company is making available six advertising trailers on "Untamed," three of 20-second length and three of one-minute length, with the last scene frozen so that the local theatre can be imprinted thereon.

RELEASES BY FILMAKERS: Harry Mandel and Irving Levin, Filmaker toppers, were in town briefly last week and reported that four features will be made during 1955, all in Superscope with higher budgets than in the past. Scheduled to roll on April 15 is "Battle Hell," with Hal Chester producing and Lou Foster directing and possibilities for the cast include Tab Hunter, Robert Cummings, and Mickey Rooney.

May 15, "The Smouldering Sea" will get under way, a best-seller that will go on location in the Hawaiian Islands. Negotiations are under way with Paul Douglas, Lee J. Cobb, Keefe Brasselle, and Fred MacMurray. June 15 will see the start of "The Firebug," an arson story produced and written by Collier Young, with possibly Edmond O'Brien and Teresa Wright in the cast. Finally, "The Weapon" will be made in the U.S., England, Germany, and France, with Broderick Crawford possibly getting the lead in this chase story to start on Aug. 1.

Filmakers will release five films in 1955, with "Crashout" already playing off. Reports from New England indicate high returns. "Mad At The World," a juvenile delinquency yarn, will be released on April 10; "Battle Hell," Aug. 1; "Smouldering Sea," Sept. 15; and "The Weapon" at the end of the year.

Levin reported that there have been no complaints from any of the exhibitors participating in the minimum guarantee selling plan instituted by the company, with earnings amounting to two and three times the amount in the minimum guarantee. The plan will be continued whereby exhibitors can buy the films in advance and be assured of first-run exclusively in their location. A slight advance in rentals may be requested from exhibitors to permit the spending of more on the films and insure better productions.

Levin has been assured by exhibitors, and he quoted E. M. Loew in particular, that more money has been made with Filmaker product than with many other releases of bigger companies where the material is inferior and higher percentages are demanded. With the lower terms requested by Filmakers, exhibitors are able to put more money into their local advertising and selling campaigns, which incidentally, the company will encourage in the future at point of sale. Exhibitor advice will be followed since they know their mediums best for maximum effectiveness.

This Was The Week When.....

Louis de Rochemont's "Animal Farm" received the best film rating from the London film critics. . . . The world premiere of Paramount's "Run For Cover" was set for Austin, Tex., on April 5. . . . An editorial in the New York Times said that "the international achievement behind Paramount's 'Assignment Children' deserves everyone's gratitude." . . . William J. Heineman, vice-president, United Artists, announced the premiere of "The Purple Plain" for March 25 at the Chicago, Chicago. . . . The Museum of Modern Art announced a cycle of 50 years of Italian cinema, to be shown beginning March 21.

Edmund Grainger announced plans for six deluxe "A" films to be produced in 1956, in addition to three set for 1955. . . . American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres declared a dividend of 25 cents per share on both common and preferred stock, payable April 20 to holders of record March 25. . . . Universal's 3-D "Revenge Of The Creature" was set for a world premiere at the Broadway-Capitol, Detroit, March 29. . . . The Globe was announced as the setting of the premiere of IFE's "The Wayward Wife" during the Easter holidays.

THE METROPOLITAN SCENE: Walter Pashkin, one-time staffer on MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, became the father of a six pound, eight ounce girl to be named Peggy. Tieclasps with African designs and reproductions blossoming around town coincidentally with the opening of "Untamed." It's a reminder by Swank. . . . Warners has prepared a 16-page, two-color special brochure on "East Of Eden" for world-wide distribution to colleges, public libraries, newspaper representatives, book stores, etc., and it's loaded with background material, production information, etc.

High Court Considers Treble Damage Taxes

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court took under advisement last week the question of whether the whole amount of triple damages awarded to the winner of an anti-trust suit is subject to income tax, or only the first third of it.

The Bureau of Internal Revenue took the case to the Supreme Court after the Third Circuit Court of Appeals found for William Goldman Theatres, Philadelphia, sued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, who claimed that the tax was due only on the first third of such damages.

U-I Copyright Affirmed

LEXINGTON, KY.—An interlocutory order of summary judgment of copyright infringement was granted in the United States District Court last week against Howard G. Underwood, Sr., and the Trans-World Distributing Corporation, which was charged by Universal Pictures with making duplicate negatives and prints of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and offering them for exhibition at various theatres.

The order directed the defendants to deliver up on oath all copies of the film and directed the destruction of all prints and trailers of the film which were seized by federal marshals after the action was begun in September, 1952. The question of damages to be paid the plaintiffs is still open.

"Bwana" Brings Another Suit

Broidy, Goldstein Take AA Story On Road

HOLLYWOOD—Steve Broidy, president, Allied Artists, and Morey R. Goldstein, vice-president and general sales manager, will take the story of the new Allied Artists "on the road" and personally tell it to exhibitor groups in 14 key cities.

"We are now ready to launch our program as a major company," Broidy stated last week. "The most important group of pictures ever produced by our studio will be available for release during the next six months. We want to talk to the theatre men in the field about these films and discuss our future policies."

The tour, which keynotes the celebration of Allied Artists' Silver Anniversary Year, was launched at Dallas on March 15. A screening of "An Annapolis Story" and "Shotgun" will open the sessions followed by a luncheon at which Broidy and Goldstein will discuss the company's plans for these pictures, as well as "The Big Combo," "Seven Angry Men," and "The Warriors."

The itinerary, according to John C. Flinn, director of advertising and publicity, who will accompany Broidy and Goldstein, includes Dallas, March 15; Atlanta, 16; Charlotte, 17; Philadelphia, 18; New York, 19-21; Boston, 22; New York, 23; Pittsburgh, 24; Detroit, 25; Chicago, 26-28; Minneapolis, 29; Kansas City, 30; San Francisco, 31; Los Angeles, April 1.

Screenings will be held in each city and, as in Dallas, followed by a luncheon for exhibitors, bookers, top exchange personnel, and trade and lay press representatives.

About People

NEW YORK—Arthur M. Loew, president, Loew's International Corporation, was assigned last week to make a comprehensive study of MGM studio activities and the planning of production for worldwide consumption. The request for Loew's services was made by Nicholas M. Schenck, president, Loew's, Inc., and Dore Schary, head of the studios. Loew will not relinquish his post as director of the overseas activities of MGM, but, for the duration of this assignment, will divide his time between Culver City, Cal., and New York.

NEW YORK—John J. O'Connor, vice-president, U-I, was named chairman of a committee on Motion Pictures of the Cardinal's Committee of the Laity for its 1955 annual appeal, it was announced recently by John A. Coleman, executive chairman. The vice-chairman of the committee will be L. Douglas Netter, Jr., of Altec Service Corporation. The goal of the appeal this year is $2,717,000, of which the Cardinal's Committee has accepted a quota of $1,000,000.

NEW YORK—Frank Braden, veteran publicity specialist, has been retained by United Artists to make an eight-state promotion junket in behalf of Stanley Kramer's "Not As A Stranger," it was announced last week by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation.

BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Dramatic Records Aid Paramount's "Foy"

NEW YORK—First of its kind ever issued on a motion picture, RCA-Victor will release an album of dramatic readings and songs from "The Seven Little Foys," Mel Shavelson-Jack Rose production for Paramount. Bob Hope will do the narration and dramatic readings tieing together the 10 songs from the film. Shavelson and Rose are now writing this new narration.

Joseph J. Lilley, who scored the VistaVision film, is reorchestrating the music and will conduct the recording session. Lilley is also writing a new love theme to be used in the album. RCA will release albums in 33 and 45 speeds. In addition, individual records will be issued at 78 r.p.m.

While there have been a few albums of dramatic readings with music issued before, none has ever been on a motion picture nor of the scope of this production. The only comparable album is Bing's "Crosby Sings," issued last summer and an immediate success. RCA and Paramount will work together in exploiting the albums, covers of which will be a color photograph from the Technicolor film, Hope's first in VistaVision.

Package Deal Set

NEW YORK—Two forthcoming Paramount pictures, "Hell's Island" and "The Desperate Hours," and Mary Murphy, new star appearing in both, are set for tremendous nationwide promotion under a unique tieup that has been arranged between Paramount and the Produce Packaging Association. PPA controls production and distribution of packaged tomatoes in the United States.

Miss Murphy has been crowned "Tomato Glamour Queen of 1955." The Produce Packaging Association will advertise this fact on a monumental scale, namely, by distributing to the public during the present calendar year 500,000,000 Mary Murphy folders.

The Association will see that the folders, presenting art on Miss Murphy as "Tomato Glamour Queen" and crediting "Hell's Island" and William Wyler's "The Desperate Hours" successively to conform to their release, are inserted in every cellophane-wrapped cardboard tray of tomatoes sold in the United States. Weekly sales of these trays of tomatoes average 10,000,000.

"Burma" Bally Available

NEW YORK—Free 24-shee's for RKO's second Superscope production, "Escape To Burma," are available to exhibitors on request, it was announced last week by Walter Branson, world-wide sales manager. RKO currently is providing exhibitors with free 24-sheets for Howard Hughes' "Underwater!"

One of Portland's busiest shopping intersections recently had "Miss Battle Cry," Shirley Robinson, making a startling contrast to the fur-clad, package-laden women shoppers. "Miss Battle Cry" was interviewed on special remote radio broadcast from window of J. K. Gill department store by disc jockey Sammy Taylor. Idea was developed by Oscar Nyberg, manager, New Fox, where Warners' "Battle Cry" had its Oregon premiere.

Paramount In Watch Tieup

NEW YORK—"Hell's Island," "The Desperate Hours," and a number of other new Paramount pictures were set last week for strong promotion among members of the armed forces at home and abroad under a special tieup with Zodiac watches.

Mary Murphy and Marla English will be featured photographically in 200-line Zodiac ads scheduled for the Army Times, Navy Times, and Air Force Times, whose total circulation is 500,000 weekly.

Zodiac is printing at its own expense autographed photographs of both actresses and in the ads will offer the pin-up free to servicemen writing in for them.

"Daddy" Gets Astaire Boost

NEW YORK—Two executives of the Fred Astaire Dance Studios, national dance director Ed Simms, and New York director of dance education Elfriede Zieger, have left for Hollywood at Astaire's request to learn the new dance sensation, the "Sluefoot," introduced by the song-and-dance star and Leslie Caron in 20th-Fox's CinemaScope musical, "Daddy Long Legs."

Columbia publicists recently used this exciting street bally to plug "The Wild One" in Rome, Italy.

"Marty" Music Bally Features UA Campaign

NEW YORK—A major music promotion combining a disc jockey barrage, window and counter displays, song contests, and special screenings for radio and TV personalities has been set in behalf of Hecht-Lancaster's "Marty," it was announced last week by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation for United Artists.

Pegged to the title tune, co-authored by Paddy Chayefsky, who wrote the screen play for the forthcoming UA release, and Academy Award winner Harry Warren, the "Marty" song campaign will kick off with distribution of the MGM record featuring the Leroy Holmes orchestra and the Naturals.

The 45 and 78 RPM discs will be hypoed in the field by United Artists' exploitation staff and MGM promotion representatives in a long-range program designed to hit high gear in various exchange areas shortly before openings of the comedy drama.

Displays in music, department, and chain stores will employ window streamers, counter cards and playdate posters. A special promotion jacket for the record carries prominent credits and scenes from the Hecht-Lancaster production.

A nation-wide slate of name-the-tune contests run by platter jockeys will additionally support the mass-penetration campaign.

Dance Magazine Hails "Chandra"

WASHINGTON—Dance Magazine, the leading authority in its field, recently gave "Chandra," the million dollar Hindu dance spectacle, its approval by devoting an entire page to favorable comment as well as scenes from this unusual film import, which had its American premiere at the Art Cinema last week.

A Hoffberg Productions release, "Chandra" was produced in India by the Gemini Studios. Slated for an extended run, "Chandra" had major dignitaries of the Indian Embassy on hand among the invited guests attending the opening evening performance.

As part of its promotional campaign, speecial discount tickets are being distributed throughout the metropolitan Washington area to allow dance students and teachers to attend evening performances of "Chandra" at a reduced rate.

16mm. Trailer Utilized

LOUISVILLE, KY.—A. E. "Joe" Hedden, manager, M. Switow and Sons' Cozy, subrun house, recently used a lobby stunt on "Green Fire" that may be done on any film having spot TV commercials available. He set up a 16mm. outfit and portable screen in the lobby, made a loop of a 20 second TV spot, turned it on, and let it run continuously during the rush hours.

The Editor Speaks

TODAY, with our wonderfully revitalized motion picture industry, top grade pictures have become the order of the day, rather than, as in the past years, the exception.

PAUL MANNING

HAND IN HAND, the gift wrapping department (our loving term for the ad and sales departments) have been having a field day ballyhooing their fine new product, with the current healthy boxoffice take making the going quite pleasant.

HOWEVER, as one great statesman put it, "In time of peace, always be prepared for war." Recently, a major studio, fat and comfy from a great big year of nothing but sensational profit, put out a much touted, supposedly super-duper, triple A production, designed to blast all existing boxoffice records to smithereens. Accordingly, the ad and sales departments wrapped this heavyweight in their most lavish and colorful gift wrappings.

BUT THE SAD NEWS today is, despite all this buddy-buddy shouting, despite the top star names in the cast, despite the tops in direction and production, it just ain't doing business.

WHICH PROVES, BROTHERS, you gotta make 'em good. A dud stays a dud, no matter how big it is, or how you camouflage it!

Leo's Mighty Roar

KICKING OFF MGM's 1955 Motion Picture Celebration, a super-quality featurette ballyhooing the forthcoming product from this bustling studio was shown recently to the trade press of Hollywood.

THIS DEPARTMENT was strongly impressed with both the excellence of the production itself, and the colorful, powerful potential of this film upon the public when shown by the thousands of exhibitors to whom it will be made available.

EMBRACING 10 top level feature productions, key scenes are shown, whetting the public appetite for the time when the features ballyhooed will be shown in the same theatre.

THE GLAMOROUS TRAILER is in CinemaScope and features guest appearances by some of Leo's leading luminaries, who discuss the films they star in. Exhibitors can obtain the 18-minute subject without cost, and the entertainment hinted at certainly gives the motion picture industry plenty of reason to toot its own horn.

SMOOTHLY HANDLED by amiable George Murphy, Leo's ambassador at large and master of ceremonies, this advance guard is rightly deserving of every support this editor can give. Therefore, we are happy to offer these scenes from the features which will be soon released from Leo's distribution centers.—P. M.

"Untamed," Fitting For Both Title And Terrain

20th-Fox sends its stars and technicians into the African wilds and finds that there is more to Zululand and its primitive inhabitants than are shown in the best travel folders.

LONG A FAVORITE setting for motion picture drama, it was inevitable that the scenic and ethnic glories of South Africa would be recorded by the expanded eye of CinemaScope. The inevitable came to pass this year when producers Bert E. Friedlob and William A. Bacher made "Untamed," starring Tyrone Power, Susan Hayward, and Richard Egan, and directed by Henry King.

"UNTAMED" WAS WRITTEN from Helga Moray's novel of the same name. Miss Moray, herself, was born in South Africa and the story is a fictionized account of the life of her own great-grandmother.

IT WAS ONE of those "small world" coincidences that Friedlob should have been co-producer of the film version of Miss Moray's book. He was a member of the expedition she made to the South Seas, but during the intervening years while she was writing in England, he was a rising producer in Hollywood. He was an independent producer until he joined 20th-Fox. His credits include "The Star," starring Bette Davis, "Steel Trap," and many others.

BACHER STARTED his career as a dentist and then made a improbable switch to radio, where he became one of that medium's most enterprising producers. He made his film debut at 20th-Fox, where he produced "Leave Her To Heaven," one of the most successful films in the company's history. He left the company to go with the State Department as an expert on films and returned, in association with Friedlob, with "Untamed." His next picture will be "The Tall Men," starring Clark Gable.

FOR A PICTURE of the scope of "Untamed," King was an obvious selection as director. It is doubtful that any director has a more impesing list of "big" pictures or successful pictures. Beginning years ago with "The White Sister" and "Stella Dallas," his credits include such champions as "In Old Chicago," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," and enough others of similar stature to fill this page. He is also familiar with Africa, having directed "Stanley And Livingstone" and "The Snows Of Kilimanjaro," before embarking on "Untamed."

IT WOULD NOT be amiss to list the production values in "Untamed" along with the stars of the picture. For with this first recording of Africa and Africans in CinemaScope, audiences will have an opportunity to see the glories of "The Dark Continent" as they never have been presented on the screen before.

TO OBTAIN ALL THIS, director King, cameraman Leo Tover and a company of 40, spent three months shooting all over Africa. The spectacular "attack on the Laager" sequence was made in the interestingly named Valley of the Thousand Hills section of Natal province. Although a Zulu preserve, it is very sparsely populated and to make up the company of 3,000 Zulus, natives had to be imported from distances up to 300 miles. This involved transportation by everything from ox-carts to airplanes and the setting up of an entire community to house them.

A STRONG GOVERNMENT was necessary because the movie company armed the troups with spears, normally forbidden, dressed them in their ancient habiliments of war; set them to singing traditional war chants and then unleased them in a simulated attack upon the Boers.

A SOUTH AFRICAN officer served as camp commandant and he recruited a police force, fire department, hospital aides and a sanitary squad.

MANY OF THE "props" in the picture, such as spears for the Zulus, had to be manufactured in South Africa, and the guns for the Boers were borrowed from museums. Wagons were purchased and re-built along lines suitable to the period and 200 oxen were hired to haul them. Roads had to be built to bring the wagons to the various locations and whole cornfields were bought to feed the animals.

THE PROJECT was carried out in the presence of lions and other predators, who gave no trouble, and snakes, ticks, and other insects which did. Among other things, the ticks carried malaria which felled several members of the company from Hollywood. Yet, almost miraculously, all this was done without death or serious injury to any of the thousands of participants.

COMPLEMENTARY TO THIS tremendous effort and consistent with it were the sequences shot on the sound stages and at the 20th-Fox ranch in the nearby Santa Monica mountains.

Rita Moreno watches as Richard Egan gets a tip from director Henry King on the action for an upcoming scene in the film, shot on location in Africa.

Susan Hayward and Tyrone Power, who star in the South African adventure, rehearse a dance number while director King watches approvingly.

James Stewart Returns

James Stewart, who toured the Orient with his wife as part of Paramount's pre-selling campaign for "Strategic Air Command, is seen at a Manila ceremonial reception as the guest of circuit owner Ernesto Ruffino, right. At left is A. S. Velasquez, Paramount Philippines manager.

JAMES STEWART, accompanied by his wife, Gloria, has just returned to Hollywood from his first trip to the Orient, where he visited such cities as Tokyo, Hong Kong, Yokohama, Kyote, and Manila among others. A combination business and pleasure trip, Stewart held many press conferences in advance of screenings of three of his latest films, "Rear Window," "Far Country," and "Strategic Air Command."

MUCH OF THE lanky star's fan mail is of Oriental origin, and he looked forward with great interest to meeting the populace first hand. He was not disappointed.

THE STEWARTS' ARRIVAL in Tokyo in a driving rain did not deter the overwhelming crowds, nor dampen the enthusiastic greeting of the man whose many quality motion pictures have earned him a unique and enviable position in the entertainment world and with people everywhere. The thunderous ovations accorded the couple and the genuine display of affection shown the star on every occasion is still another example of the high esteem with which he is regarded.

STEWART'S FIRST HAND experience, meeting the people of various cities, pointed up even more vividly the tremendous influence wielded by motion pictures, and made it more evident that the entertainment offered by the movies is indeed the universal language.

THE STAR FOUND the people gracious and understanding, showing an eager interest in the American way of life. He left Japan with a warm feeling, generated by the people whose interest in him showed only too clearly that the entertainment offered by motion pictures can and does, in its place, bring a measure of better understanding between the peoples of many countries.

STEWART'S FILMS have always been made to exacting standards on the highest possible plane as attested to by his popularity which has consistently placed him in the top 10 stars everywhere.

THE INDUSTRY can well be proud of James Stewart, whose impeccable behavior, quiet intelligence, and keen understanding have made him one of the most popular and beloved figures in the world.

GOOD THINGS TO COME FROM HOLLYWOOD . . .

MGM'S "Blackboard Jungle"

"BLACKBOARD JUNGLE" leaps from the screen into the lives of most Americans living with today's fast moving younger generation. Coming to violent grips with one of the major problems facing us today, steadily increasing juvenile delinquency, this hard-hitting picture attacks the problem where most authorities agree is its spawning ground, the public schools in the slum areas of our larger cities.

GLENN FORD offers his best screen performance since his memorable one in "Gilda." A difficult role, that of a young teacher attempting to control diabolical and savage students, Ford rises to new heights. Backed up with outstanding contributions by the entire cast, this is a picture which will cause wide public controversy and, by thus doing, bring heavy boxoffice grosses to all situations.

PANDRO BERMAN, producer, rates high praise for his alertness to this ever growing problem, and for his daring and ingenuity in fashioning this explosive film.

RICHARD BROOKS, the director, who also did the screen play, is still young enough to evaluate and qualify the dynamic ingredients of this problem. He forces realism and motion into script and into the picture itself. A very important credit for Mr. Brooks.

IT IS the studied opinion of this editor, that "Blackboard Jungle" will be attended, applauded, and remembered far longer than most of Hollywood's lavish, pretentious films.—P. M.

Seen above are two scenes from "MGM's exciting story on juvenile delinquency, "Blackboard Jungle," starring Glenn Ford and Anne Francis. On the bottom row are director Richard Brooks, who also wrote the screen play, and producer Pandro S. Berman.

MGM Releases Set

NEW YORK—MGM will release four pictures in May and June, according to tentative plans. The pictures will be released at the rate of two a month and will make a total of 12 minimum for the first six months of the calendar year.

The new tentative releases include "The Prodigal" in Eastman Color and CinemaScope, and "The Marauders" in Eastman Color, for May; and "Love Me Or Leave Me," in Eastman Color and CinemaScope, and "Moonfleet" in Eastman Color and CinemaScope, for June.

Previously announced for the first four months of the current year were "Bad Day At Black Rock" and "Green Fire," for January; "Many Rivers To Cross" and "Jupiter's Darling," for February; "Hit The Deck" and "Anchors Aweigh" reprint, for March; "The Glass Slipper" and "Bedevilled," for April. All are in color.

NEWS OF THE Territory

BRANCHES

Atlanta

Atlanta will be one of 39 cities to receive an all-star closed circuit theatre telecast on March 28. The mammoth two-hour show will be presented at an Atlanta theatre not yet designated, beginning at 9:15 p. m. Proceeds will go to CARE, European relief agency. A 13-man committee has been named to push plans for the benefit presentation. Committee includes Mayor William B. Hartsfield, honorary chairman; Dean Phil Narmore, chairman; and Harrison Jones, co-chairman. Members are Carling Dinkler, Sr., Daniel J. Houghton, Frank Malone, Mrs. Spann W. Miller, Samuel Rothberg, Mrs. Louis Regenstein, Jr., Mrs. T. E. Schneider, J. C. Shelor, Robert E. Snodgrass, and John Staton.

J. E. McLeory, Charlotte representative, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges, has returned there after a visit with his family here. . . . On the Row for a visit were O. C. Lam and son, Lam Amusement Company, Rome, Ga.; Sidney Laird and L. J. Duncan, Al-Dun Amusement Company, West Point, Ga.; W. Welch, Dallas, Dallas, Ga.; Abe Soloman, Independent Theatres, Chattanooga, Tenn., and Ebb Duncan, theatres in Georgia.

Jimmy Campbell and Ben Jordan, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges, were in for a sales meeting with branch manager Jimmie Hobbs. . . . Billy Welch, son of Mrs. Grace Hammond, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges, left for a trip to New York. . . . Oscar Howell, president, Capital City Supply Company, was back after a trip from the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Toddy, owners, Toddy Pictures, were back at their office after a visit in Florida. . . . Mrs. Rose Lancaster, Strickland Film Company, was back at her desk after a spell of illness.

George J. Schaefer announces that his company, Selected Pictures Corporation, has acquired the distribution rights to "Gangbusters" for the territory served by Atlanta, Jacksonville, Charlotte, New Orleans, Memphis, Dallas, and Oklahoma City. Schaefer has also concluded arrangements with Jack Schlaifer, who recently resigned from United Artists, to take complete charge of sales and distribution on this picture. Schlaifer is due in Miami and Jacksonville to supervise saturation bookings of the film in Florida. The exploitation and advertising of all saturation openings in each of the above territories is being handled by Terry Turner for the producer, Visual Drama, Inc.

In Nashville, Tenn., a serious threat to drive-in operations has been lifted by a change of application of proposed state legislation which would have forced the removal of screen towers to other locations on drive-in property whenever pictures reflected on the screen are also visible as to distract passing motorists. Instead of applying to existing drive-ins, an identical measure is expected to be enacted which would apply to drive-ins built after April 1, 1955. A committee of exhibitors, led by Stacy Wilhite, Cooksville, Tenn., president, Tennessee Theatre Owners Association, pointed out to the special Governor's Emergency Traffic Committee sponsoring the bill that application of such law would cause undue hardship to existing drive-ins and would require large expenditures for moving screen towers and changing field operation. The committee agreed to change the bill to mean outdoor theatres constructed after the expected April 1 enactment date.

New owners of the drive-in at Apalacicola, Fla., are P. J., N. J., and J. J. Nicholas. . . . Jimmy Gaylard, owner, Troy, Troy, Ala., is the new owner, Cecil Drive-In, from owners, Wade Amusement Company, and will change the name to Coffee County Drive-In. Mack Clark was appointed as manager. . . . Jack Hunt and his son-in-law, Ray Carsky, are new owners, Trail Drive-In, Sarasoto, Fla., from Hugh Thomas, Jr., and will call it the Airport Drive-In. Hunt came from Chicago and for five years was general manager, Barger Theatre Circuit. Carsky was former merchandising and concessions manager, Balaban and Katz.

The 41 Drive-In, Okolona, Miss., with Bob Cowsert, manager, has installed CinemaScope. . . . Bill Wolfson, city manager, Wilby-Kincey Theatres Montgomery, Ala., has returned to his office after being hospitalized for an eye operation in Fort Worth, Tex. He has been unable to see for the past six weeks.

Scott Lett and the Mrs., Guild Screen manager, Charlotte, has returned after a tour of South America. . . . Happy to report that George Ebersole, 20th-Fox special sales representative, Charlotte, is back on the job after a spell of illness.

On the Row were Frank Pierce and son, Barber Drive-In, Louisville, Ga.; Al Morgan, McLendon Theatre Circuit, Alabama; Ward Bennett, Bennett Drive-In, Abbeville, Ala.; Ralph Johnson, Zebulon, Cairo, Ga.; and Dick Kennedy, theatre owner in Alabama and Tennessee.

Vivian Miller, new booker, MGM, replaces Dot Stephens. . . . Betty Goolsby, MGM's payroll clerk, was back after a spell of illness. . . . Eileen Watson, MGM, was back after a vacation spent in Jacksonville. . . . George M. Jones, U-I sales manager, is much better.

Mrs. Mary Dale, accounting department, Allied Artist Southern Exchanges, was host to the office force at her home. . . . Mrs. Elizabeth Lee was added to the Strickland force as secretary.

Captain James A. Rebb, 87, pioneer exhibitor here, died at a private hospital. Rebb owned and operated the old Superba for a number of years during the days of silent pictures. He was also owner of the old Fairview before his retirement in 1942. Surviving are his wife, two sons, and several grandchildren.

J. E. McLeroy, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges, Charlotte, was in for a visit with his family. . . . WOMPI participated in a fashion show at Rich's in conjunction with other Atlanta Clubs, for the purpose of building up their treasury. Shirley Smoak has been chosen as the WOMPI model for the occasion.

At the February luncheon meeting of WOMPI, Mrs. Margaret Turner, club editor, Atlanta Journal, made a talk, her subject, "What Makes News." Mrs. Turner came up with an interesting and little known fact, that Atlanta has more women's club per capita than any city in the world. There are 3,500 clubs here.

In booking and buying were Jack Biggart, Motor In, Lancaster, S. C.; Mrs. R. Barrington, Marlboro, Clio, S. C.; Jodie Holland, Lyman, Lyman, S. C.; Leighton Parker, Parkhill and 301 Drive-In, Manning, S. C.; R. L. Wilburn, Union Drive-In, Union, S. C.; Octave Martin, Cowpens, Cowpens, S. C.; Wellie Hamrick, Co-Ed, Boiling Springs, N. C.; Louis Whitley, drive-ins, Laurenburg, N. C.; Fairmont, N. C.; Rockingham, N. C.; Tom Britt, Starlite Drive-In, Laurel Hill, N. C.; Buford Grigg, Dianne 29 Drive-In, Gastonia, N. C., and Friendly Drive-In, Lincolnton, N. C.; Jesse Booth, Palmetto, Walnut Cove, N. C.; Morris Abrams, Palace and Strand, Georgetown, S. C.; Dick Eason, O. and E. Circuit, Salisbury, N. C.; Jim Geddie, Carolina, McColl, S. C.; Joe Gibson, Harlem, Greenville, S. C.; J. W. Griffin, Jr., Griffin, Forest City, N. C.; and Jodie Holland, Lyman, Lyman, S. C.

Charlotte

The Anderson Family, Anderson Circuit, Mullins, S. C., are making plans to visit Hawaii. Howard Anderson and his helpers will manage the business angle while they are away. . . . A. F. Sams, Statesville Theatre Corporation, will soon have a son-in-law.

Joe Johnston, feature booker, Wilby-Kincey, is the proud papa of another son. . . . Jack Griffith, U-I salesman, has a baby daughter, named Betty Anne. Jack is the son of Mrs. Walter Griffith, secretary, Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina.

Howard Burnett, former employee, Paramount, has just returned from the armed services to his position as third shipper with Paramount. He was stationed in Korea. . . . Weber Howell, former office manager, Paramount, has returned to his position after having served in the armed forces in Alaska. . . . Seen along Film Row booking and buying were W. G. Fussell, Wonet, Bladenboro, N. C.; R. D. McGowan, Joyce, Spring Hope, N. C.; and Cary Caudell, Danca, Wallace, N. C. . . . The following visited Paramount for buying and booking: Jimmy Austin, Clinton, Clinton, N. C.; O. K.

Hogan, St. Paul, St. Paul, N. C.; I. W. Holliday, Vance, Vanceboro, N. C.; Charlie Holliday, Pines, Pinetops, N. C.; Roy Champion, various theatres, Wilson, N. C.; and Howard Anderson, Anderson Theatres, Mullins, S. C., for his circuit of theatres.

C. A. Dandelake, president, Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, Colonial, Tarboro, N. C., has returned after a check-up at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Md. . . . MGM has changed the date of its workshop. It will be held here on April 4. Theatre owners of North and South Carolina changed the date of the general meeting. It will be held on April 5, at the Hotel Charlotte. Highlights will be toll-TV and film rentals.

Several members of the WOMPI club in Atlanta, one of which is a member of the national extension committee, were in to assist in organizing a local WOMPI club, at which time the charter was drawn up and the officers nominated and elected. The meeting was in the form of a Dutch luncheon at the Oriental Restaurant. The planning committee includes Myrtle Parker, Paramount; Mildred Hoover, Paramount; Rebecca Miller, National Screen Service; Thelma Culp, Warners; Gladys Hawkins, Wilby-Kincey; Rose Hutton, Columbia; Rose McIlroy, MGM; and Mildred Warren, 20th-Fox.

Paramount recently remodeled their office with a complete paint job and general house cleaning. The effort certainly brightened the place.

Jacksonville

Attending a luncheon held here in honor of Mr. and Mrs. James Cagney were Leon D. Netter, president, Florida State Theatres, and Mrs. Netter; Louis J. Finske and LaMar Sarra, FST vice-presidents; FST executives Joe J. Deitch, Mark DuPree, and Bob Harris; Ed Chumley, Paramount branch manager; and Bender Cawthon, Florida projectionist. Host was A. C. Lyles, Paramount publicity man from the west coast, who got his start in the industry as an usher at the local Florida. A day prior to the luncheon, Cagney had received an honorary Doctor of Humanities degree from Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., in recognition of his outstanding role in the motion picture industry for the past 33 years. He recently completed his 50th picture, "Run For Cover," a Paramount release.

"A Man Called Peter," 20th-Fox's Easter picture, is to have advance screenings here, in St. Petersburg, and in Miami for clergymen of the state, according to Tom Tidwell, 20th-Fox branch manager. He said that the picture is to be released on Good Friday, April 8, in key cities of the state. . . . Walter Powell, formerly a film salesman in Charlotte, has joined the sales staff of the local 20th-Fox branch. . . . Walter McDonald, new head booker, United Artists, came here from a booking job in Atlanta. . . . Linda Fleming has returned to work as a 20th-Fox biller after recovering from an operation.

Bill Beck, manager, first-run Five Points, had a gala north Florida premiere for "Yellowneck," produced by Empire Studios of Orlando and distributed by Republic. Stars Rex Allen and Marie Windsor were here for public appearances on the Five Points stage at the opening.

Bob Skaggs, manager, Florida, said that the Army's WAC band, of 60 pieces, would be in the pit of the theatre for the first-run opening night of "The Long Gray Line." . . . He also revealed that the Florida has been selected as the only north Florida outlet for the March 28 closed circuit live TV variety show to originate on a New York stage for nationwide showings to benefit CARE. . . . Patrons of the Florida were being supplied with ballots listing all the current Academy Award nominations. Persons guessing closest to the actual awards of Oscars on March 30 are to receive long-term passes to the theatre.

Edith Smith secured the cooperation of the Jacksonville Art Museum membership in giving advance support to the selling of tickets for an art motion picture, "Flamenco," to be presented at the San Marco on April 9 and 10. She said that a sidewalk art exhibit is scheduled for both nights on the sidewalk in front of the theatre. . . . State exhibitors in were A. J. Kaniaris, Beach Drive-In, St. Augustine; William Lee, Starke; Jim Raulerson, MacClenny; Courtney Muter, Orange Lake; and Adeline Gawthrop, Linda Drive-In, Palatka, back from an extensive South American tour. . . . Visiting Roy Smith at his candy and popcorn concern were Mr. and Mrs. Lew Phelps, Grinnell, Iowa, who were covering the state on a selling trip for the Miracle Equipment Company, makers of drive-in playground equipment. . . . Mrs. Belle Dow, owner, No. 1 Drive-In, Daytona Beach, Fla., was a visitor from New York. . . . New Yorkers George J. Schaefer, Selected Pictures Corporation, and Terry Turner were here to schedule booking and exploitation programs for their "Gangbusters." . . . Other New Yorkers in were Ben Newman, candy specialist, and Paul Little, Pepsi-Cola representative.

Memphis

Local Boy Scouts saw free movies at five big movie parties. Theatres showing for the Scouts were the Plaza, Ritz, Joy, Strand, Millington, Tenn., and the Park, here. A giant Council-wide movie party was held at the Malco, downtown, and enoyed by the boys.

WOMPI is one year old in Memphis, and a birthday dinner was held at the Variety Club. It was "Bosses Night," and by the wonderful turnout of bosses, WOMPI has no need to fear whether they are with them or not, as only three of the branch manager were unable to attend. Guest speaker was naturally the number one movie man, a man whom everyone knows thinks first of movies and anything pertaining to them, M. A. Lightman, Malco Theatres. He spoke to the group briefly of the thing next dearest to his heart, The Children's Convalescent Home, and asked the cooperation of all WOMPI members in helping put the Hospital over for Variety; there is no doubt of the cooperation he will receive, as WOMPI has already shown their interest in the Hospital, having donated a blackboard recently. It was a successful dinner and all members are planning on the "Sadie Hawkins Day Dance" on April 16. There will be several surprise acts of talent heretofore unknown, and figures will be revealed that might land a movie contract for some unknown.

A. J. Cianciola announces that the Plaza has its sights set to being one of the major first-run theatres in Memphis. As proof, three topnotch films are booked there for first local showings.

New Orleans

Harry Carey, Jr., who plays the halfback named "Ike" in Columbia's "The Long Gray Line," is in town boosting the movie, scheduled for an early showing at RKO Orpheum. . . . Earl Perry has taken over the buying and booking for the Park, Houma, La., formerly handled by J. G. Broggi. . . . Jack "Joe Friday" Webb is in town to supervise the filming of background scenes for his forthcoming movie, "Pete Kelly's Blues." With him is Bill Gutheri, Warners unit manager.

Six lucky contestants will receive a set of flippers and goggles like those worn by Jane Russell and Richard Egan in the RKO Technicolor film, "Underwater," for the best description in the completion of the sentence "I would like to swim underwater like the stars in RKO's 'Underwater' because ——" The contest is sponsored by the Voit Company and The New Orleans Item. . . . Warren Salles informed the exchanges that he plans to reopen his Park Drive-In, Covington, La., sooner than in previous years.

Shreveport

Arthur Franz, Columbia star, who made a personal appearance here at the New Saenger in connection with his latest, "New Orleans Uncensored," was given a pleasant surprise while attending a luncheon given in his honor. Unbeknownst to the actor, a true-to-life background had been set for him to meet unannounced a World War II buddy now stationed at Barksdale Air Force Base here. He is Major Norman P. Stoker, a pilot. Franz was his navigator. Franz appeared on the stage of the New Saenger in the evening and also appeared over KSLA-TV in the afternoon. He was given the key to the city by Mayor James C. Gardner.

Mrs. Jane Nelson, born and reared in this area, was recently named manager, Joy Drive-In. She has the distinction of being the first women in Shreveport to manage a local drive-in. She has worked for Joy Theatres, including the downstown Joy, the Leo Drive-In, and the Joy Drive-In for the past six years. It seems as if the jobs for men only are fewer and fewer.

The deed for the sale of three theatres here and a fourth in Bossier City, La., for $550,000 was recorded in the office of Dozier Webster, clerk of the district court. Don George, Inc., and the Commercial National Bank of Shreveport, trustee of the Don George trust for Delores M. George, sold the theatres to Ollie D. Harrison and Thomas E. McElroy for $150,000 cash, and $400,000 payable in 10 annual payments of $40,000 each. Included in the sale were the Don George, Davis, Don Drive-In, and the Venus.

Gulf States Allied Sets Meet Agenda

NEW ORLEANS — Abe Berenson, president, Allied Theatre Owners of Gulf States, following their monthly board meet at which plans were discussed and formulated for their upcoming annual convention to be held at the Edgewater Gulf Hotel, Edgewater Park, Miss., on April 3-4-5, revealed that a national spokesman from the toll-TV committee will be present, who will not only give the conventioneers the latest on the new menace to our business, but will also be prepared to answer a lot of questions. Also expected is a COMPO representative who will give some revealing figures and statistics on the proper mode and method of selling pictures today. The two special guest speakers are in addition to several national industry and Allied leaders, who will participate in the meetings, including Max Younstein, UA.

The social side will include a Gulf cruise to the surrounding islands and surf bathing if the weather permits, cocktail parties, luncheons, topped with the regular annual banquet. Highlighting the diversion, a real shindig will be on tap on April 4 when they completely take over a famous Gulf Coast night club including floor show, dancing, and food.

Exhibitors in attendance were E. R. Sellers, F. G. Prat, Jr., Locke Bolen, Lefty Cheramie, Sammy Wright, William Butterfield, Nick Lamantia, Ed Ortte, J. V. O'Quinn, B. V. Sheffield, Eldon Briwa, Frank Ruffino, B. J. Keyhan, Bob and Frank deGraauw, Joy N. Houck, J. A. Parker, and Frank Lais.

The Forsyth, Winston-Salem, N. C., closed its doors permanently at the end of the last show on Feb. 19, and Urey K. Rice, city manager, Twin City Theatre Corporation, said no attempt would be made to reopen at another location. The Forsyth closed to make way for remodeling the building it occupied for use as a new F. W. Woolworth Company branch store, and its closing leaves Winston-Salem with only two first run houses, the Winston, also owned by Twin City Theatres, and the Carolina, controlled by the North Carolina Theatres Company, Inc. Localites were sorry to see the house disappear.

A shapely model comes out of the box arrangement behind her for a breath of fresh air. Set up by Jack Clem, Florida State Theatres art shop, and manager Charley Whitaker, Paramount, Miami, Fla., when the girl enters the bottom of the contraption she appears to be in the goldfish bowl by her right shoulder through a tricky arrangement of mirrors. The stunt attracted lines of viewers when displayed in advance of RKO's "Underwater," Paramount.

The Princeton, Princeton, N. C., was damaged by fire at night an hour before the film, "Smoke Screen," was to be shown. No one was in the building at the time the blaze originated, and the fire was not discovered until smoke and heat pressure blew open the front door. Employees had been in the building 45 minutes earlier to get the equipment ready for the show. Francis Rains, owner and operator, estimated the damage at $18,000. He said he had no insurance and was unable to say whether he would be able to reopen the house. The blaze was battled for 90 minutes by firemen before it was brought under control. The stage was burned, the screen destroyed, fans for the heating system damaged beyond repair, the lenses in the projectors cracked, and film valued at $3,000 was partially destroyed.

District Judge C. C. Wyche, United States District Court, struck from the answers of exhibitor defendants in eight distributors' percentage fraud suits pending here, allegations that the license agreements for the motion pictures involved in the suits were illegal and void under the anti-trust laws, on the ground that such defenses were insufficient as a matter of law. The order was entered in actions brought by Paramount, U-I, Loew's, United Artists, RKO, Columbia, 20th-Fox, and Warners against Herbert B. Ram, Esther R. Ram, Sam Bogoslawsky, Jacob Bogoslawsky, Max Bogoslawsky, and Ram Amusement Company, as operators of a number of theatres in the Aiken-Augusta area, for damages resulting from claimed underreporting of box office receipts. The court held that, in such suits, defendants' "allegations and defenses relating to the alleged anti-trust illegality of the contracts in suit" were "insufficient as a matter of law and should be stricken." The distributor-plaintiffs were represented by C. T. Graydon, Columbia, S. C.; T. Sam Means, Jr., Spartanburg, S. C.; Kenneth C. Royall, Dwight, Royall, Harris, Koegel, and Caskey, New York; and Sargoy and Stein, New York. The question of whether or not the statute of limitations applied was also brought out.

Cincinnati

Rumors are current here that live shows will be moved into the downtown Shubert with termination March 1 of the five-year RKO lease. It also is reported that the next-door Cox, now a legit house, will be taken over by WLW-TV for teleshows, although no lease contract has as yet been signed with the Shubert interests, owner of the house.

In a survey here by Oscar Doob, MGM, it was revealed that about 73 per cent of all girl teenagers and 51 per cent of boys in local high schools will flock to see the re-release of Greta Garbo in "Camille." The film was first shown in 1936, before any of the present teenagers were born, and the survey revealed that only four of those queried had seen any Garbo film. "They're curious because they've heard so much about her," commented a teacher.

E. B. Radcliffe, the Enquirer's movie reviewer, urged those interested in "good movies" to "lay it on the line" at any first-run downtown or suburban house. "There isn't a movie in any one of the eight first-run theatres unworthy of a look," he declared. . . . Many old-timers along Film Row and elsewhere here regretted the death in California of Trixie Friganza, the famed star of 37 silent movies of three or more decades ago and the lead in numerous smash stage shows. Born here as Delia O'Callahan, she took the maiden name of her Spanish mother when she made her stage debut as a shapely chorus girl.

Among those attending the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners convention at Columbus were Milton Gurian, Allied Artists branch manager; Philip Fox, Columbia branch manager; E. M. Booth, MGM branch manager, and the entire MGM sales force; William Bein, district manager, National Screen Service; Herbert J. Gillis, Paramount branch manager, and W. A. Meier, salesman; Lloyd Krause, RKO branch manager; Jack Finberg, UA branch manager, and Mitchell Blachschleger, Columbus salesman; Murray Baker, IFE area rep; Al Kolkmeyer, U-I city salesman, and William Blum, U-I Columbus salesman; Robert McNab, 20th-Fox branch manager, and Sam Weiss, Columbus salesman; James McDonald; Homer B. Snook, president, Midwest Theatre Supply; and James A. Conn, manager, National Theatre Supply.

Larry Leshansky, New York, Warners rep, was in, as were exhibitors George Turlukis, Hamilton, O.; Harry Wheeler, Galipolis, O.; John Gregory, Dayton, O.; Frank Yassenoff, Harry Schwartz, Jack Needham, and Ted Pekras, Columbus, O.; Moe Potasky, Troy, O.; Julius Silberstein, Huntington, W. Va.; Frank Mandros, Cabin Creek, W. Va.; Harold Moore and Julia Simon, Charleston, W. Va.; Harry McHaffie, Marmet, W. Va.; Charles Scott, Vevay, Ind.; Charles Behlen, Lexington, Ky.; J. B. Johnson, Nicholasville, Ky.; Raymond Young, South Shore, Ky.; Bertha Wolf, Owenton, Ky.; Walter Wyrick, Carlisle, Ky.; Kenneth Williams, Paintsville, Ky.; and Jack Smith, Warsaw, Ky.

Away on business were James A. Abrose, Warners branch manager, to Springfield, O., and Murray Baker, IFE rep, to Cleveland. . . . Equipment has been installed for lifting the big CinemaScope screen at the downtown Albee so live stage shows can be presented if and when. . . . Betty Turner, Paramount booker, is on a leave of absence, and Donald Berning, contract department, has taken over her duties, with William Robb replacing Berning in the contract department.

The Variety Club of Cincinnati has issued its first number of "The Barker." Editor in chief Jay M. Goldberg says the bulletin is being published to keep members informed of the club's activities and to keep their enthusiasm high. . . . The installation of officers of Variety Club of Cincinnati took place at Netherland Plaza. Herman Hunt and Herb Gillis were co-chairmen and International Chief Barker George Hoover was guest speaker. Mr. and Mrs. Abe Maius arranged for entertainment during the evening, with the event proving to be one of the highlights of the season for the local Variety Club and the local industry.

Cleveland

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio convention is over and done with but the effect of the MGM Workshop, conducted by Mike Simons, director of customer relations, lingers on. Most of the Cleveland exhibitors who attended came home full of optimism and enthusiasm. One exhibitor said it was a job well done and accomplished it's purpose of arousing them to dust off some of their promotion ideas and give them a new try.

In Akron, O., Mayor Bery proclaimed Feb. 20-26 as "Go To The Movies Week." Helping get the proclamation over were Millard Ochs, manager, Strand, and Harry Klotz, manager, Loew's. . . . Joe Shagrin, Foster, Youngstown, O., has left the hospital and is convalescing from surgery at his home.

Harold Bruce, a newcomer in the industry, has taken over the Majestic, Lima, O., and had March 10 as his opening date. The house has been closed some time. . . . Martin G. Smith, while attending the ITO convention in Columbus, was informed of the safe arrival of his second grandson named Andrew Martin Smith. . . . M. B. Horwitz, head, Washington Circuit, took first place as the first great-grandfather of the local film colony. The title was bestowed on him by his granddaughter, Mrs. Mercia Miller Kline, with announcement of the birth of a daughter, Susan Beth.

Regardless of the temperature, the drive-in season is officially open. Jack Gardner opened his Riverside Drive-In, Rayland, O., and George Manos opened his new Elm Lane Drive-In, Coshocton, O. . . . Mrs. Fred Barck, mother of Morris Barck, Park Auto Theatre, Alliance, O., and of Sam, former indoor theatre owner, died. She is also survived by two other sons and three daughters.

Jerry Gross, Universal-International booker in Cleveland, and prior to that employed in the U-I home office, has been promoted to the sales force in Detroit. His successor in Cleveland is not yet announced. . . . Oscar Edelman, National Screen Service head shipper the past 15 years and with Theatre Poster Rental Company before that, resigned to go into the automobile parts business. . . . Jack Sogg, MGM branch manager, was unable to attend Workshop in Columbus because he was ill with the flu. Dorsey Brown, MGM saleman, came home from Columbus, O., with a bad cold.

Columbus, O., Mayor Sensenbrenner, in welcoming exhibitors to Columbus, paid special tribute to I. J. Schmertz, complimenting him on his 50 years with one company and saying that any industry that can boast of such a record does not have to worry about the future. . . . Jack Ochs had automobile trouble en route home from Columbus. Near Medina, O., his new De Soto got temperamental and held up the journey home several hours. Jack's passengers were Lewis Horwitz and Sandy Leavitt.

Lieutenant Governor John Brown, who presented the safety scrolls to National Screen Service and the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, is a refugee from the movie business. He used to run a theatre in Wellston, O. . . . P. E. Essick, Modern Theatres, and Mrs. Essick left for their annual late winter vacation in Florida.

Detroit

A slim long legged thing with an oversized smile named Shirley Reed was picked winner at the Harper in the Federal Store-Free Press-United Artists contest. The contestants chosen are the ones most nearly matching Denise Darcel's figure as shown in "Vera Cruz." . . . Announcement was made this week of the ground breaking for Affiliated Theatres new 1,800 car drive-in. Modern equipment will be featured, said AT's president, Leonard Brooks.

The long line of Hollywood stars and near stars continues to parade through the city rooms. Latest, Randy Farr, bobbed her iron grey pony tail past here. Next week, Win Min Than, Burmese beauty, will be towed by Howard Pearl for United Artists. Pearl has a vestige of tan from his recent Caribbean cruise. . . . Hard on the heels of Governor Williams' declaration of March as movie month comes another from Detroit mayor Albert Cobo.

The Film Exchange Building elevator is back in the capable hands of Betty Robbins following her return from a bronchitis bout. . . . Newcomer from Glasgow is Margaret Baird, U-I contract department. . . . Herbert Rosen has passed his CPA exams. He is the son of Confection Cabinet head B. Roser.

Wile Takes Issue With Ohio Censor

COLUMBUS, O.—The motion picture industry cannot be held responsible for increases in juvenile delinquency, said Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Wile pointed out that the reported increase in juvenile delinquency in the state is evidence of the ineffectiveness of film censorship in combatting juvenile misdeeds.

Wile also took exception to statements recently made by R. M. Eyman, state director of education and chief film censor. Wile quoted a report on increases in juvenile delinquency made last year by John T. Ferguson, chief, Division of Juvenile Research, Classification, and Training of the Ohio Department of Welfare. The report stated that Ohio has a greater increase in such cases than the nation as a whole.

"Some of the assertions made by Mr. Eyman in his report on the past 12-year record of the censor division are thus disproved by other state agencies," said Wile. The Eyman report stated that only three features bearing the Motion Picture Production Code were banned by the Ohio board. Wile says that there were eight such code films banned during the 12-year period. In addition to "Born To Kill," "Kiss Tomorrow Goodbye," and "M," named in the Eyman report, there were also "The Outlaw," "The Great Flamarion," "Fall Guy," "Violence," and "Beyond The Forest."

"In addition," said Wile, "eight percent of all the pictures submitted had cuts made. About 30 per cent of these had Code seals and many of them were passed in their entirety in the other five states that had censorship. They were shown without cuts in the 42 other states."

The Ferguson study stated that one out of every 33 children in Ohio from 10 to 17 appeared as a delinquent in a juvenile court during 1952. The report added that one out of 50 children in the nation in that age bracket was referred to a court in the same year.

"There figures are appalling," said Wile, "but we emphatically disclaim any responsibility whatsoever for juvenile delinquency or its rate of increase. Juveniles who are caught in crime and seek an easy excuse will sometimes say, 'I saw it in the movies.' This is manifestly untrue because every motion picture shows that no crime goes unpunished. This is one of the tenets of the motion picture code."

Wile said that foreign films are not nearly the problem in Ohio that Mr. Eyman makes them. Wile said there are only four theatres in the state which play foreign films regularly. They are in Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, and Cincinnati. These theatres charge $1 for adults and have no children's price.

"All of the other pictures playing in Ohio's 900 theatres are made in Hollywood," said Wile. "The total audience for foreign films comprises less than one one-hundredth of one per cent of the weekly audience in the state. Every foreign picture shown was passed through the U. S. Customs, which prohibit the importation of obscene, lewd, or indecent films." Wile said that in the three months since Ohio censorship lapsed there has been no abuse of the "new-found freedom." He said more than 99 percent of all Ohio theatres show only pictures bearing the Production Code Seal. He said state laws applying to the showing of obscene and indecent films remain on the books and are being enforced and added there may be future violations, just as there have been some in the past.

Dallas

R. J. O'Donnell, Jimmy Gillespie, 20th-Fox, and Julius Schepps will arrange a gigantic banquet in the Grand Ballroom of the Adolphus Hotel, April 1, in which Variety Club of Dallas, Tent 17, will honor the champion New York Giants and Cleveland Indians and at the same time honor Ed Brannick, secretary of the Giants, on the celebrating of his golden anniversary with that team. The Giants and the Indians will be rushed to Dallas by chartered planes arranged for by Clyde Rembert, member of the Variety Club, from Houston, where they will play an exhibition game in the afternoon. Next day, the clubs play at Burnett Field, Dallas, in a nationally televised game. The idea for the banquet originated with Jimmy Gillespie, southern public relations director for 20th-Fox. Having grown up with Brannick in the Hell's Kitchen area of New York, Jimmy decided to see what R. J. O'Donnell thought of the idea. Since O'Donnell has been a life-long friend of Brannick, he saw immediately that it was a wonderful opportunity to honor two great ball clubs and a veteran in the sports field. Julius Schepps, past chief barker, Variety Club, was called in to lend a hand in making the necessary arrangements for the banquet.

Texans who have been in the film industry 25 years, or more, will be honored March 24, 1955, with a banquet given by the Dallas WOMPI chapter, said President Mrs. Maxine Adams. Those qualifying, who wish to attend, may send requests for reservations to Miss Sue Benningfield, Texas COMPO, 2008 A Jackson Street. Tickets will be $3.50. The banquet will be held in the Terrace Room of the Baker Hotel. Guest speaker will be nationally known film executive Ned Depinet, himself a pioneer in the Texas motion picture field. Program chairman, Miss Verlin Osborne, Paramount, promises a gala occasion with early-in-the-century photographs of Texas film folk, silent film star stills, pressbooks from the '20s, early hand-grinder picture machines, and other relics of younger days of the industry for the pioneers to become nostalgic over. WOMPI members will be dressed in various fashion styles of the decades of motion picture history. Invitations have been sent to Dallas WOMPI charter members Mary Pickford, Joan Crawford, Dorothy Lamour, and Edith Head, themselves all distinguished pioneers of the film industry. Other committee members are Mrs. Blanche Boyle, Frontier Theatres, in charge of seating arrangements, and hostesses Mrs. Orlean Hart, Interstate Theatres, in charge of invitations, and the decorations committee, Miss Susie Coleman, assisted by Mrs. Grace Folsom, both of Interstate. Minneapolis

A want ad for "amateur or professional" motion picture operators set off a new row between the independent theatre owners and the local projectionists union. The union has been negotiating with the theatre owners since its contract expired last Dec. 1. It has threatened twice to strike. Ted Mann, owner, World, and head of the employer negotiating group, said the independent owners had "rejected an ultimatum" from the union. The group's advertisement in the Minneapolis newspapers was intended to get non-union projectionists if necessary to keep the theatres open, should the union strike. A statement in the advertisement, "Not much experience necessary," raised the ire of the projectionists. About 140 men applied for the jobs following the ad's appearance in the newspapers. Meanwhile, negotiations are continuing between the theatre operators and the union.

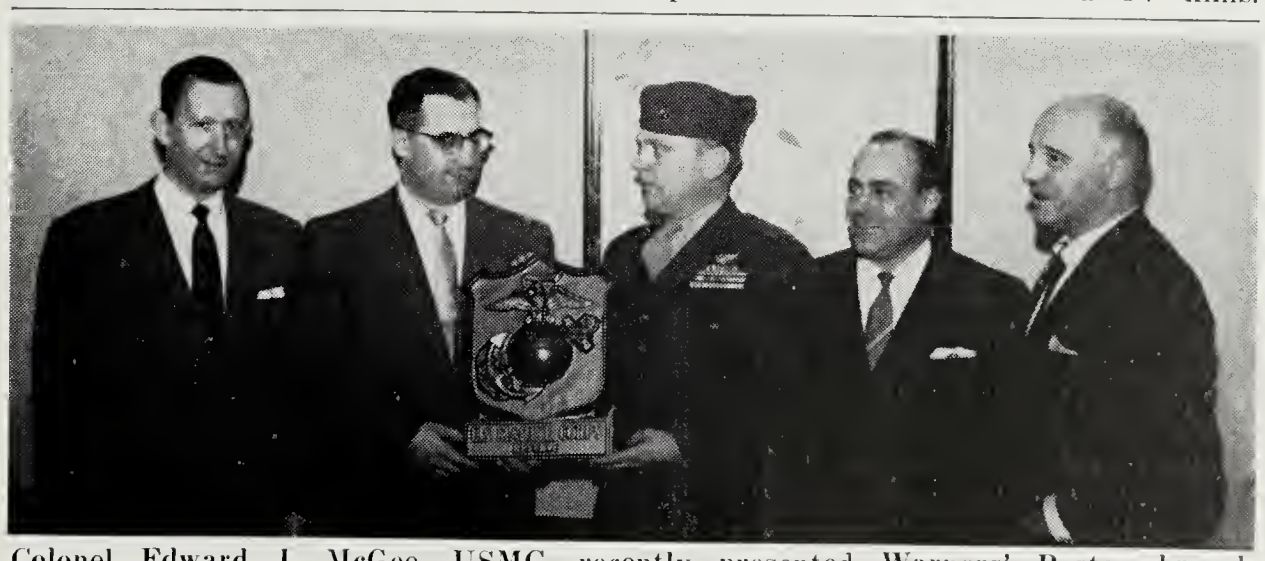
At their annual meeting in the Hotel Bradford's Oak Room, the Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, a unit of National Allied, threw themselves into the national anti-toll-TV fight. Any thought of a "wait and see what happens" policy was decried. Instead, immediate action in financial support of the national effort was strongly urged. Emerging from the closed meeting newly elected President Edward Lider, Yamins Enterprises, said that the immediate need was for money to pay for first class legal and public relations counsel and for carrying out its recommendations. Such money, he said, could be regarded as an investment in future security and prosperity for exhibitors. Later must come, he and other leaders of the organization agreed in informal discussion at a luncheon in the Glass Room, the determination to seize every opportunity to improve the quality of film presentation in theatres and to add all possible inducements for patronage. Among such inducements mentioned was provision of more parking space for patrons. There was talk, too, of ways to prevent abuse of the parking privilege by non-patrons. Albert B. Lourie, operator, Adams, Dorchester, Mass., and new secretary of the association, disclosed that space for 250 cars is in process of preparation back of his theatre, with a provision that no charge be made. In order to avoid use of the space by non-patrons going shopping in nearby stores, it is planned tentatively to require those who park their cars and then walk out through a street exit rather than going to the theatre entrance, to purchase a ticket for the show at the gate, whether or not they intend to use it later that evening. It was decided at the meeting to make every effort to get out as many exhibitors in the region as possible for the mass meeting called for 10:30 a.m. today (March 16) in the Hotel Bradford's Empire Room to consider the whole problem of toll-TV's threat. In addition to Lider and Lourie, other officers unanimously elected were Melvin B. Safner, first vice-president; Lloyd Clark, second vice-president; Julian Rifkin, secretary; Nathan Yamins, national delegate; Norman C. Glassman, chairman of the board; and for the executive committee, W. Leslie Bendsley, Roy Burroughs, Edwin Fideli, Henry Gaudet, Leonard Goldberg, Arthur Howard, Winthrop Knox, Frank T. LePage, Walter E. Mitchell, Daniel J. Murphy, Samuel Resnik, Theodore Rosenblatt, Andrew Tegu, and Robert Viano.

Alfred Starr, TOA officer, accepted the invitation of the New England joint committee on toll-TV to be a principal speaker at the March 16 mass meeting of exhibitors in the Empire Room of the Hotel Bradford. The program provided also for a general explanation of the intricacies of toll-TV systems and their probable impact on the industry, if adopted. Letters signed by the co-chairmen of the committee, Edward W. Lider, president, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, and Frank C. Lydon, executive secretary, Allied Theatres of New England, were sent out to theatre owners, managers, circuit executives, and film buyers throughout the New England area, in order to assure large attendance. A phone campaign was also carried on, with the results, said Lydon, that "enthusiasm was very evident."

Ann Miller, MGM dancer, headed an array of radio, television, opera, and night spot stars who participated in the Red Cross drive kickoff program in Symphony Hall. A special filmed message from President Eisenhower to the workers in the local drive was screened. . . . A four-day visit to Boston by Win Min Than, first stop on her first American tour, brought plenty of publicity for the Burmese star's first picture, the Technicolor "Purple Plain," filmed in Ceylon for UA. Joe Mansfield, UA publicist, arranged a press and radio luncheon at which women writers and radio interviewers were delighted with Win Min Than's candid comments on her own first view of herself on the screen, as well as with her Burmese hair-do, sarong, and sandals. The male section of the press and radio delegation were equally intrigued by her softly musical voice and her dainty charm. Photographs of the Burmese girl in a mink coat, putting on plastic covers over her sandalled bare feet, went out on the wire photo lines. Mansfield arranged various special visits including a meeting with 10 Burmese students attending greater Boston colleges. One of them had known the visitor in high school, before she went to England to study ballet. The whole party of 13 squeezed into a limousine to ride back to her suite at the Ritz-Carlton for Burmese music and dancing and American crackers. The following night the students invited Win Tin Than to a Burmese dinner and then to a concert by the Boston Symphony.

The winter's second major snowstorm greeted early-bird drive-ins in the greater Boston area with four days of snow, slippery slush, freezing rain and dank fog, followed by bitter cold. A few hardy patrons brushed the snow off the speakers, kept their motors running for heat and to operate the windshield wipers, and peered through the murky atmosphere as their cars slowly iced over.



John J. Berry, who started out as an usher in the Saint George, Framingham, Mass., and rose to the job of manager, has been appointed assistant manager, Smith Management's Cinema, in the Shoppers' World shopping center near that town. . . . George E. Landers, Hartford division manager, E. M. Loew's Theatres, invited area West Point alumni to attend opening night's performance of "The Long Gray Line" at the E. M. Loew's. Working through the Army Reserve Station here, Landers arranged a lobby weapons display, manned by an honor guard. . . . Deputy State Attorney General Joseph A. Adorno, a son of Sal Adorno, Sr., M and D Theatres, Middletown, Conn., has been elected president, Middletown Bar Association. Adorno formerly served eight years as state treasurer.

A "Jupiter's Darling" promotion photo, taken by enterprising Lou Cohen, Loew's Poli manager, landed on page one of The Sunday Herald the other weekend. Herald photographer John Vignoli invited Cohen to snap a shot of Vignoli chatting with MGM studio photographer Clarence Bull, visiting here on "Jupiter" promotion, and the result was a two-column splash in the local newspaper. . . . Herman Schloss, Columbia exploitation department, was in town for "The Long Gray Line." . . . Attorney Bernard E. Francis, counsel for the East Hartford and Meadows Drive-Ins, has moved his offices to the new Hartford Savings and Loan building. He is a vice-president, Elmwood Business Associates.

Censorship Bill Dies In Council Ruling

NEW HAVEN—A proposed motion picture censorship ordinance was killed by the Board of Aldermen by a roll call vote of 19 to nine. Introduced by Martin J. Griffin, president, St. Francis Holy Name Society, the ordinance would have banned the showing here of those films which fail to carry the stamp of approval of the Motion Picture Association.

The petition was reported unfavorably out of the committee on ordinances through its chairman Harry J. Cohen, Democrat. Corporation Counsel George W. Crawford had previously ruled the measure as unconstitutional.

Speaking in favor of the proposed ordinance and thus voting against the committee report were Democratic Aldermen James Slavin, Francin Gersz, and Thomas Dillon. Democratic Alderman Paul Falsey supported the ordinace, but voted against it since Crawford had ruled it unconstitutional. Falsey is a lawyer.

Tom Grace, Eastwood, East Hartford, Conn., had a novel East Hartford Shopping Days tieup with Anderson Jewelers, with latter store advertising, "During East Hartford Days, we will give away two theatre tickets, good any time for the Eastwood, with the purchase of a Speidel Watch Band." Store took two-column ads.

Sperie Perakos, Perakos Theatre Associates, had William Leslie, supporting player in "The Long Gray Line," in Perakos towns on advance promotion. . . . The Farmington Zoning Board of Appeals has granted permission to the Bristol Drive-In to maintain a sign advertising the location of the theatre at the corner of Colt Highway and Fienemann Road for the period of one year, when it must be removed. The sign is a four by six feet double-faced board. The applicants appealed for decision, requesting permission to maintain the sign for three years. The board felt that a year's advertising would in all fairness give the public adequate information on theatre location.

Ted Harris, manager, State, was a New York business visitor. . . . Bob Schwartz, Ville, Waterbury, Conn., advertising holdover of "Bread, Love and Dreams," noted, "The phone hasn't stopped ringing, so it's held over!"

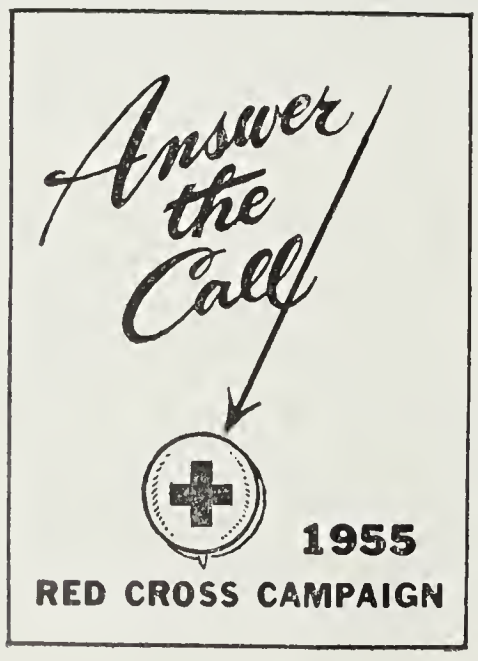
New England Governors Get Passes; and Other Events

S. H. Fabian, president, Stanley Warner Theatres, recently presented a circuit medallion to Connecticut's Governor A. A. Ribicoff at the State Capitol, Hartford, while Harry Kalmine, vice-president and general manager; Harry Feinstein, New England zone manager; James M. Totman, Feinstein's assistant; and Sam Rosen, executive vice-president, SW, beamed approval.

If Governor Edmund S. Muskie, Maine, ever gets the time to attend the movies he needn't worry about whether he has change in his pocket. Rudy Bergeron, manager, Haines, Waterville, Maine, is seen recently presenting the Governor with a gold pass entitling him to attend any of the 36 theatres of New England Theatres, Inc., as William Jones, assistant manager, looks on.

Newly elected at the annual meeting of Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England at the Hotel Bradford, Boston, were, left to right, Norman C. Glassman, chairman of the board; Ray Feeley, executive secretary; Albert B. Lourie, secretary; and Edward Lider, president.

S. H. Fabian, president, Stanley Warner Theatres, reminded a press luncheon last week that newly-noted stature for the writers and technicians in Hollywood can be attributed to the "fabulous attendance record chalked up by 'The Long Gray Line,' 'From Here To Eternity,' 'The Country Girl,' 'Vera Cruz,' and 'Battle Cry.'" Fabian, here on a one-day tour of area SW theatres, accompanied by circuit executives, added, "No longer is the actor or the director so supreme; it's the writer or the technician upon whom the studios are leaning more and more. The studio executives have finally learned that these two unsung heroes mean much to the overall production picture, and without them there is the sure certainly of mediocrity." He presented a circuit medallion to Governor A. A. Ribicoff, in appreciation of the Governor's proclamation of "Go to the Movies" month in February. "The film industry," he said, "needs friends like you. Your expression of good will was noted with thanks by a creative medium and made many take cognizance of the fact that when pictures put their best foot forward, they can be the greatest entertainment show business ever came up with." Accompanying Fabian were Sam Rosen, executive vice-president; Harry Kalmine, vice-president and general manager; Harry Feinstein, New England zone manager; and James M. Totman, Feinstein's assistant. Luncheon guests included David R. Daniel, publisher; Allen M. Widem, motion picture editor, The Hartford Times; Colonel John R. Reitemeyer, president and publisher; and H. Viggo Andersen, motion picture editor, The Hartford Courant.



Lou Brown, left, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, Loew-Poli Theatres, New Haven, and Joseph Jarvis, Gilbert Stuart, Riverside, R. I., attended the recent MGM Detroit Workshop held at the Statler Hotel with over 343 in attendance.

A measure proposing creation of a State Board of Review, with membership appointed by the governor, to aid local authorities "in reviewing movies and theatricals," was introduced into the State Legislature by Republican Senator Louis A. Lemaire, Jr., Norwalk, Conn. The Lemaire bill, referred to the Judiciary Committee, proposes, "On or before July 1, 1955, quadriennially and thereafter the governor shall appoint five electors of the state to serve as a Board of Review. Such five electors so appointed to membership on said board shall hold office for four years or until their successors shall be appointed and shall have qualified. Said board shall convene upon the request of the Superintendent of State Police or Chief of Police of any city and shall review and advise the Superintendent of State Police or the Chief of Police of any city on the censorship of any moving pictures, theatricals, or other public amusement offered to the public, and if said board by a majority vote, after such review, advises same to be indecent or that it would impair the morals of minors or the public in general, it shall render its opinion to the Superintendent of State Police or Chief of Police requesting such review with its recommendations thereon. Each member of the board shall receive $20 and necessary expenses for each day he shall attend the meeting of said board."

Attorney Joseph F. Stancik, Derry, N. H., is among drive-in theatre owners who voiced strong opposition at a recent hearing conducted by the New Hampshire Legislature on a measure to regulate the erection of drive-ins. The bill would require a permit from the State Commissioner of Public Works and Highways for building a drive-in with facilities to house at least 100 cars and located within 1,000 feet of a Class I, II, or III highway. State Highway Commissioner Frank Merrill reports that less than 10 percent of drive-in owners have consulted with him on access to the highway before going ahead and building their theatres. Meanwhile, opponents of the bill charged that there was no provision for appeal and that what the state really needs is a state highway zoning law.

The Roxy rolled out its red carpet yesterday (March 15) to a unique type of "distinguished" visitor — the really important "little people" behind the scenes of the motion picture theatres that are usually taken for granted—the ushers, doormen, cashiers, projectionists, stage hands, electricians, and porters. The occasion, the Roxy's 28th anniversary and in an unprecedented gesture, the management of the famous showplace has invited the employes of all the Metropolitan motion picture theatres to be its guests on a "busman's holiday" celebration. William J. Moclair, managing director, sent invitations to all theatre circuits and independent houses in the area, and expected to have close to 10,000 guests, in what will probably have been the largest birthday party on record. A huge birthday cake was to have been cut in the rotunda, where an enormous scroll was on display for the guests to sign. Celebrities were invited to be on hand during the day to greet the visitors and sign autographs for them. Regular Roxy patrons weren't forgotten by the management. Good luck shamrocks by Orchids of Hawaii, Inc., were presented to them. 20th-Fox's "Untamed" was the birthday film attraction.

Arthur Silverstone, 20th-Fox assistant general sales manager, and Mrs. Silverstone left aboard the the S. S. Mauritania for a West Indies cruise.

Hope Emerson, featured in 20th-Fox's "Untamed," arrived from Hollywood for the opening of the film at the Roxy.

Earl Wingart, 20th-Fox merchandising manager, left for a trip through the midwest and south for exchange meetings and to arrange preview screenings of "A Man Called Peter" for local religious figures.

Arthur J. Miller, managing director, Consolidated Film Industries' laboratory, a subsidiary of Republic, has resigned after 25 years of service. He also resigned as officer and director of Republic Pictures Corporation.

Sidney Kramer, general sales manager, RKO-Pathe, and his assistant, Alan Hartman, left for Toronto, Ontario, Canada, for the purpose of transacting a commercial film deal there.

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, Inc., held its annual legislative meeting at the Stacy-Trent Hotel, Trenton, N. J., on March 14. Many members and officials of the Legislative and Executive branches of the state government accepted luncheon invitations. The agenda centered around local problems, as well as national, such as toll-TV, decreased admissions and film prices.

"East Of Eden" Has Glittering Bow

NEW YORK—An all-celebrity world premiere was given Warners' "East Of Eden," Astor. The formal opening, which included a private after-theatre supper and all-star entertainment at the Sheraton Astor Roof, was held for the benefit of Actors Studio, a non-profit organization for the advancement of the dramatic arts, which received $34,000 from the affair. As the formally-dressed celebrities arrived at the brilliantly lit theatre, they crossed the red-carpeted sidewalk between crowds of onlookers and were greeted under the marquee by Martin Block, who interviewed them for a special WPIX live broadcast. Press and magazine photographers vied with TV and newsreel cameramen in their efforts to capture the glitter and excitement of the opening. Entering the theatre, another barrage of flashbulbs greeted the celebrities from a waiting battery of cameramen, a microphone manned by Robert Franc, French reporter and Voice of America commentator; and WRCA cameras.

Inside the theatre proper, the premiere-goers were shown to their seats by the most glamorous corps of usherettes ever to staff a motion picture theatre. First-nighters surrendered their $50 tickets to such well-known ladies as Marlene Dietrich, Marilyn Monroe, Margaret Truman, Celeste Holm, Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, Terry Moore, Eva Marie Saint, Arlene Francis, Marjorie Steele, Fleur Cowles, Ethel Linder Reiner, Anita Loos, Beatrice Straight, Maggi McNellis and Meg Mundy, all of whom volunteered their services for the benefit performance.

Jack L. Warner, executive producer, flew in from the coast especially to be present at the premiere. Elia Kazan, producer-director of "East of Eden," and John Steinbeck, author of the best-selling novel on which the picture is based, joined members of the "East of Eden" cast at the opening. Raymond Massey, who co-stars in the film with Julie Harris and James Dean, and Richard Davalos and Jo Van Fleet, who play leading featured roles, were among the first-nighters.

Immediately following the premiere, $50 ticket purchasers went to the Sheraton-Astor Roof where the private after-theatre supper and "stars-in-person" entertainment began about midnight.

The new picture marks the screen debut of a number of newcomers headed by James Dean, Miss Van Fleet and Davalos. Miss Van Fleet, distinguished stage and television actress who won both the Donaldson and Antoinette Perry Awards is a member of Actors Studio, as are Dean, Miss Harris and a number of other members of the "East of Eden" cast.

Rosalind Russell, star, "The Girl Rush," Frederick Brisson production for Paramount, arrived from Hollwood for a vacation. . . . Oscar A. Morgan, Paramount short subjects, newsreel, and special features sales manager, returned from a one-month tour of southern branches, bringing with him a citation bestowed by New Orleans Mayor de-Lesseps S. Morrison in recognition of Paramount News' contributions to civic and international causes.

William Campbell, who has a featured role in U-I's "Man Without A Star," arrived from Hollywood to aid in the advance promotion of the picture. He will make national TV and radio network appearances and give press interviews, and otherwise aid in the bally of the film set to open at the Victoria late this month.

One of the Fourth Estate's outstanding figures, William Randolph Hearst, Jr., editor-in-chief, Hearst newspapers, will speak on his recent trip to Russia and his interviews with its four ranking leaders at a civic luncheon in Sheraton-Ten Eyck Hotel on March 21, under the sponsorship of The Times-Union and Albany Variety Club. The affair, to which the public is invited, will be for the benefit of Camp Thatcher, operated by Albany Boys' Club and Tent 9 during July and August at Thompson's Lake. Tickets are $5. Publisher Gene Robb arranged Hearst's appearance in conjunction with Chief Barker George H. Schenck.

The latest closed and the earliest opened, that is the record established by John Gardner, Turnpike Drive-In, Westmere, N. Y., Gardner kept the theatre in operation weekends until November and scheduled a relighting on March 4. He returned from a vacation in Key West, Fla., with his wife and chief assistant, Harry Lamont, for the 1955 premiere. Mrs. Lamont, also a longtime invaluable aide of her husband, accompanied him. . . . Property Master Lewis A. Sumberg, Variety Club, served as ticket chairman for a concert by the Brown University Glee Club at Albany Boys' Academy. Sumberg is a graduate of Brown and Albany Law School.

A novel framework for the promotion of "The Country Girl" was created over the area's leading television station, WRGB, Schenectady, N. Y., by Edward J. Wall, upstate director of advertising and publicity for Paramount, with the gracious cooperation of star Bing Crosby and the active support of Edgar S. Van Olinda, film reviewer and columnist,

Albany Times-Union, the day before the picture opened at Strand. The entire half-hour of the "Eileen and Ernie" program was devoted to a recorded telephone interview with Crosby by Eileen Flynn and Ernie Tetrault and film clips, plus a commentary by Van Olinda and Mrs. Flynn. The 15-minute interview with Crosby, from his west coast home, was replete with interesting details on the production of the picture, observations about Grace Kelly, William Holden, and director George Seaton, revealing sidelights on his private life and sons, and nostalgic references to Der Bingle's annual visits to nearby Saratoga in the 1930's.

The traditional full treatment will be given Kirk Douglas when the most distinguished actor from the Albany area visits here March 21-22. He will serve as "King for a Day" and become a Variety Club member at a dinner-dance in Empire Room of Sheraton-Ten Eyck Hotel and will take part in press, radio, and television interviews. The next day, Douglas is to appear at Strand here, and Troy, Troy, N. Y., for teeoff screenings of U-I's "Man Without A Star." A civic reception for Douglas, native of not-distant Amsterdam, N. Y., is planned by Maurice Harris, U-I exploiteer, in cooperation wtih Tent 9 officers and others. The Times-Union is tied into the dinner-dance, because Douglas will make a contribution to the Big Brother Fund for Camp Thatcher, which the Hearst daily generously publicizes. A "Kirk Douglas Week" will be observed at the camp next summer, Chief Barker George H. Schenck said. The money donated by the screen star will be utilized for free vacations to selected needy boys that week. Guests at the dinner are expected to include Mayor Erastus Corning, four of Douglas' sisters, and old friends. Douglas, who received his stage name from Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Atterbury, former owners, Albany Playhouse, and one-time operator, Tamareck Playhouse, Lake Pleasant, has been a local visitor on various occasions since winning screen fame to visit his family. A cocktail party and reception in Rose Lounge will precede the big affair. Serving with former Chief Barker Jules Perlmutter are Norman Weitman, U-I branch manager; Jack Goldberg, MGM resident manager; and Gene Teper, Variety Club member.

Fabian's Palace, managed by Bill With, screened "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" six times Feb. 22—starting at 9:50 a.m. Admission prices ran: adults, 75 cents, from 9:30 to noon; $1, after 12 noon; children, 35 cents all day. The 25, 75 and one dollar scale held for the week's engagement, during which concession stand business boomed. "Jupiter's Darling," which Esther Williams trailerized in her one-day stage-show appearances at 3660-seat theatre last fall, was the headline follow up attraction at regular rates. . . . "The Little Kidnappers" gripped Delaware patrons for a second week. John Brousseau, manager, Stanley Warner art house, Delaware, now has a mailing list of approximately 6,900, 3,500 names of which are from Albany and the remainder from a 75-mile radius. Brousseau effected a tieup with the Cadby Candy Company to advertise "The Detective." An English confectionery concern is intertwined in the story of the picture.

A recent welcome visitor was Irene Smith, who served 14 years here as secretary to Charles A. Smakwitz and who now functions in a similar capacity with him in Newark, N. J.

A number of Variety Club members, appreciative of the boost given the annual Camp Thatcher drive via the Second Inter-City Championships staged last November at Mid-City Arena by an AAU committee, under the leadership of Phillip Schuyler High School vice-principal Ben Becker, joined in helping Becker to present another series of AAU bouts at the same place for the benefit of the March of Dimes.

A Supreme Court jury trial would be permitted where the Motion Picture Division, State Education Department, denied a license, if a bill introduced by Senator Fred G. Moritt, Brooklyn, became law. The measure, which provides for an alternative to the present appeal to the Board of Regents, states that if the court or a jury finds, after viewing a film, that it is "not obscene, indecent, or inhuman," an order shall be entered upon diecision of the court or on verdict of a jury, directing the Regents to issue a seal for exhibition "forthwith." It would take effect July 1. Senator Moritt, who is general counsel for MacDonald Pictures, New York City, and who sponsored a similar bill last year, said in an explanatory release that "trial should be by jury and producers should have the full right to present their side of the case to a court or jury. There is no other democratic or fair way to handle the problem. Chief Justice John Marshall gave us the key to immortality as a great nation when he enunciated the doctrine that so long as we remain a nation of laws, not of men, we would remain a free nation. To believe in democracy is to believe that in the long run, the combined wisdom of all the people is superior to the wisdom of any individual. Not to believe that is not to believe in democracy, but in supermen, tyrants, or censors."

Robert Wagner, star, 20th-Fox's "White Feather," recently met fan magazine representatives at a breakfast meeting held at the Sherry-Netherland Hotel, New York City.

Theatres, pinched by taxes and soaring overhead, might be caught in another expense vise if a bill by Senator Joseph R. Marro, New York City Democrat, were enacted by the Legislature. It authorizes the head of a municipal fire department to detail not more than two members of a uniformed force to each place of amusement or entertainment where "machinery or scenery" are in use "and one or more persons participate in an actual performance of a play, show, or other type of entertainment." Theatres would be required to pay for the fire fighters' services, at a rate equivalent to their salaries, for the time spent on the details. The money would be turned over to pension funds or retirement systems, where these exist. The bill also authorizes fire department heads to detail "as many additional members" as may be deemed "necessary" for duty in places of amusement or entertainment "at which any play, show, or other performance is witnessed by six thousand or more persons in any twenty-four hour period." There is an additional authorization for the detailing by police departments of two uniformed men to escort employees of any person, firm or corporation "carrying checks, currency, specie or Burglars, who cracked open a safe in the office of the SW Palace, escaped with $500, but overlooked $1,500 in the second steel door of the heavy strongbox. Police said entrance was gained by forcing a rear exit door and that the thieves moved the safe from the front office room, facing Market Street, to a rear room, where they forced open the first steel door, extracted the $500, and fled. The robbery was discovered by maintenance man George Dahlberg, who summoned the manager Ronald Moray.

Governor George M. Leader named a new Democratic State Board of Motion Picture Censors to be headed by Mrs. Louise M. John, West Chester, Pa. Mrs. John succeeds Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, veteran Philadelphia Republican figure, from the agency which she has headed for a number of years. The chairman's salary is $6,000 annually. Two other censor board members were appointed by Leader to replace Republicans. They are Mrs. Helen K. Massock, Washington, Pa., president, Pennsylvania Federation of Democratic Women; and Mrs. Clara Stevenson Black, Harrisburg, Pa., wife of Ramsey S. Black, state Democratic figure and former assistant postmaster general, and former state treasurer. Board members receive $5,000 a year. They replace Mrs. Jewel M. Frank, Pittsburgh; and Mrs. Beatrice Z. Miller, Germantown, here. The Board of Censors is charged by law to disapprove all motion pictures deemed sacrilegious, obscene, indecent, immoral, or tending to debase or corrupt morals. Mrs. Carroll issued the following report, "These have been interesting years in which the motion picture industry grew to be a tremendous international entertainment and economic force; slumped into a partly self-imposed state of recession and through its own initiative, energy and resource created new techniques to return to its place in the sun. Despite the years of administration, little is known about the actual process of censorship. It has served as an important moral agency making a definite contribution to the community and to the industry. The industry has matured and presented films of strong adult material acceptable because of the manner of production and direction. Such films draw a potential audience back to motion pictures while salacious, obscene, and indecent films repel." Mrs. Carroll has urged the adoption of amendments to the act so that it may meet the requirement of the courts.

SW Plans Spring "Movie Festival"

PHILADELPHIA — Ted Schlanger, Stanley Warner Theatres, recently closed a series of three meetings with the 52 managers in his zone, in which plans were outlined for the forthcoming Stanley Warner "Spring Movie Festival." This special celebration of the entire Stanley Warner Theatre circuit will be held from April 3 to July 2.

In the course of these meetings, Schlanger stressed that, despite the improvement in grosses, attendance is continuing to decline and that special emphasis must be made on efforts to improve attendance. Schlanger pointed out that certain pictures attract bigger audiences today than ever before in the history of the motion picture business, which, in his estimation, indicates that the public is getting continually more discriminating in their tastes for motion picture entertainment. Therefore, he said, we must devise ways and means of attracting more people "to purchase our wares" by doing the odd and unusual and getting outside of the set routine for the selling of motion picture attractions.

Schlanger laid particular stress on the subject of attracting bigger child audiences, pointing out that we are now in the era of what is known as the "TV Babies," those born since the advent of television and who have grown up continually exposed to this competitive medium. These children have now reached school age, and are available for motion picture theatre attendance, but they must be attracted to the theatre to see how much more the motion picture has to offer them. Many of these children, Schlanger pointed out, have never seen a motion picture, except on a TV screen, and the managers task is to attract these children to the theatre, as they are adult customers of the future.

Also present at the meeting were Lester Krieger, assistant zone manager; and district manager A. J. Vanni, Paul C. Castello, and John Flynn. Department hands attending included Ted Minsky, film buyer; Harry Kaplowitz and Bill Yurasko, bookers; Irving Blumberg, publicity and advertising; J. A former Air Force master sergeant from here who had asked the Rialto for help in obtaining airplane scenes from 20th-Fox's "12 O'Clock High," was arrested in New York and held in $1,000 bail on a charge of illegally wearing the uniform of an Air Force colonel. The man had requested the stills from the Rialto for use, he said, in a recreation room for his neighborhood. However, after checking with National Screen Service in Philadelphia, the Rialto wrote to him that no airplane scenes from "12 O'clock High" were available.

Chief U. S. District Court Judge Paul Leahy on March 7 signed an order fixing March 14 at 10 a.m. for hearing for the consideration of the confirmation of the plan for the reorganization of M and S Amusement Enterprises, Inc., (Brandywine Drive-In), the plan having been accepted by more than two-thirds of the creditors and by the stockholders holding all of the issued and oustanding stock of the corporation. At the hearing in the U. S. District Court Room, Wilmington, objections, if any, may be made to the confirmation of the plan. Upon confirmation of the plan proposed, creditors who have filed proofs of claim shall receive their distribution from the available funds in full satisfaction of their claims against the debtor and to the extent that any amount remains unpaid, creditors shall be forever barred from asserting any other or further claims or demands whatsoever against the debtor corporation. The debtor's attorney, Vincent A. Theisen, reported that pursuant to the court's order of Feb. 23, which provided that acceptances should be received up through March 4, creditors holding claims aggregating $72 288.42 filed 27 acceptances of the plan with the debtor's attorney prior to the deadline.

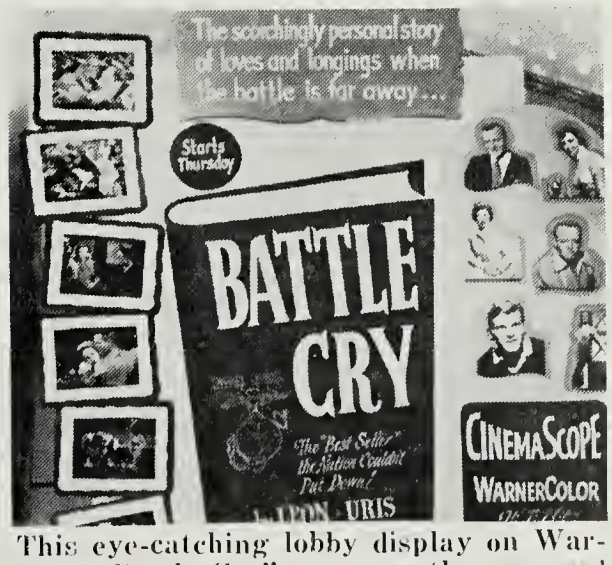
Chief Judge Paul Leahy signed an order in U. S. District Court classifying creditors and approving the plan of reorganization of M and S Amusement Enterprises, Inc., including the sale of the Brandywine Drive-In to the A. M. Ellis Theatres Company, Philadelphia, for $85,000, of which $60,000 is to be paid in cash and the balance in 32 non-interest bearing promissory notes of the purchaser. All creditors, stockholders, and parties affected by the plan may accept it in writing by filing notice with the debtor's attorney, Vincent A. Theisen.

Lancaster Junket Plans For "Saturday" Cancelled

LANCASTER, PA.—The scheduled world premiere of 20th-Fox's "Violent Saturday" at the Colonial, which threatened to turn the town into a small-scale Hollywood, was suddenly cancelled last fortnight.

Exactly what happened was still hazy as to detail, but Richard W. Wagner, general chairman of the local committee, confirmed that his group had definitely decided not to go through with the promotion.

"Some of us felt," he said, "that the picture itself, and the elaborate promotion that seemed to be expected, would not reflect any particular credit upon the Lancaster community."



In other words, there will be no personal appearance of Victor Mature, no banquets, no parade, no star-spangled tours of Lancaster County's Amish community, no live TV pickup, no newsreels, no bus loads of famous personalities from New York and Hollywood, no premiere, no nothing.

It was believed that the city fathers banned the premiere fearing it "might offend the Amish," who are known as "the plain people." 20th Century-Fox officials hastened to explain that there was nothing in the subject matter of the film too "sexy," as reported, nor was there any subject matter in it to give offense, even to the Amish, who are evidently "the most straightlaced people on earth."

Maryland

Baltimore

Jack Whittle, owner, Avenue, and chief barker, local Variety Club, is vacationing in Florida. . . . Clayton Atkinson is the new assistant manager, Mayfair, replacing John Wesley Jenkins. Atkinson formerly was with the Avenue. . . . Mrs. Marie King, Northwood's staff, is receiving congratulations upon becoming a grandmother again. Her son, Herman, Jr., is the father of a daughter born to his wife at Women's Hospital. . . . Sid Zinn was in town for advance promotion on Columbia's "Women's Prison."

This eye-catching lobby display on Warners' "Battle Cry" was recently arranged at the SW Warner, Reading, Pa., by manager Birk Binnard.

Jack Sidney, Century manager, had film actor Rodney Taylor here in advance for "Bad Day at Black Rock." . . . Miss Caryl Hamburger, manager, Film Centre, is receiving sympathy of friends upon the untimely death of her father, Mark Hamburger. . . . Mrs. Milton Schwaber, wife of the owner, Schwaber Theatres, is recovering from an illness.

Over 3,000 women packed the Stanley when the WBAL-TV feature "Quiz Club" was telecast from the theatre. Arranged by manager Rodney Collier, the feature provided generous promotion for the Stanley and its current attraction, "Battle Cry." Although the TV show did not start until 1 p. m. women were in line for admission at nine in the morning.

Porter Seiwell, owner, Towson, is vacationing in Florida. . . . Morris Mechanic, New and Keiths, and Mrs. Mechanic entertained several guests at the opening of "The Gold Cadillac" at Ford's Theatre. — G. B.

While in Philadelphia recently in connection with the promotion of Columbia's "The Long Gray Line," Harry Carey, Jr., took time out to visit the local exchange, where he is seen with the personnel.

"Battle Cry," Plaza, Lexington Park, Md. Opening ceremonies had top Marine and Navy officials attending. . . . Jack Fruchtman, owner-operator, Southern Maryland Theatres, Inc., visited area theatres and held several business sessions with his staff.

Pennsylvania

Coatesville

Max S. Schantzer, operator, Silver, died at his home. Funeral services were held at Raphael-Sacks memorial chapel, Philadelphia, with burial in Mount Sharon Cemetery. He was a veteran of the first World War, a member of the American Legion Post 64, and a Mason. He is survived by his wife, a son, a daughter, a brother, and four sisters.

Harrisburg

L. R. Golding, general manager, Fabian Theatres, was in recently. . . . The "Meet the People" telecast by WHP-TV each weekday from 3:45 to 4:30 from the lobby of the State continues to attract much attention. According to manager E. G. Wollaston, it is a terrific means of exploiting attractions. . . . Robert Fitzgerald, "Cinerama Holiday" publicist, was in from Philadelphia contacting newspapers, TV, and radio.

The State and Colonial are handling reservations for the showing of "Cinerama Holiday" at the Boyd, Philadelphia. . . . For "The Racers" showing at the Senate, manager B. J. Bispeck had on display in the lobby the champ midwest 1954 racing car driven by Wayne Doerstler. Several hundred postcards were mailed to sportsmen clubs throughout central Pennsylvania as a promotion with a local dealer in foreign cars, and the front of the theatre was gaily decorated with banners and penants to provide a racing atmosphere. . . . Marine cooperation was employed by manager E. Wollaston and his assistant, Spike Todorov, to ballyhoo "Battle Cry" at the State. On the opening night members of the Harrisburg Marine Detachment were guests.

The Broad is closed. Howard Kay, owner, recently died.

Appeals from decisions of the city board of tax revision and appeals in the case of two theatres were filed by Schad Theatres, Inc. They are the Astor, J. Lester Stallman, manager, and the Strand, Donald Hinkle, manager. Dr. Harry J. Schad, owner of the two theatres, is president of the company. The assessment on the Astor, downtown, is $331,000. The valuation for tax purposes of the Strand, large neighborhood house, is $86,000. Judge Warren K. Hess listed both appeals for an early hearing, possibly this month. The appeals are based on the claim that they are inequitable in comparison with most other valuations of business properties in their respective areas, and that, in general they are far above the 35 per cent of market value basis adopted last year for tax payments in 1955. Both valuations had been appealed to city authorities, the board of tax revision and appeals, and had been turned down. Action of the theatre owners on their valuations has not been announced by the board.

Seven hundred and fifty local and Berks County people paid approximately $11 each to travel by train to New York for an afternoon showing of "Plain and Fancy," Pennsylvania-German musical show about the Amish, a religious sect in Lancaster, and Berks Counties. Fifty-three other persons were on the train but only 750 bought tickets, price included in the $11, for the show as well as the ride. Another trainload is being arranged for April 2.

Mrs. C. E. Reckard, Mohnton, Pa., a Reading suburb, a dog fancier active in kennel clubs here, was shown on the Astor screen in a news reel, photographed at the annual Westminster Kennel Club Show in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Theatre managers here are looking askance at the Central YMCA boys' department, showing free movies every Saturday afternoon now, instead of only on Friday nights as in the past. These shows are in competition with the regular Saturday afternoon shows of theatres in city and suburbs. Saturdays are the only days when many parents permit their children to go to movies or sports events. The Y shows bring no tax revenue into the city treasury.

Scranton

In addition to his customary radio and newspaper advertising, when "The Long Gray Line" opened last week at the Comerford, manager Ed McGovern was aided by the national outdoor advertising campaign when the length and breadth of 28 towns in Lackawanna County were posted. In addition, two attractive 11 by five feet high cut-outs of the film flanked a truck which toured the valley for several days prior to the opening. In the Sunday Press, an eye catching teaser campaign of the film was effectively used.

The pre-Easter season was officially proclaimed in this city when the Easter Bunny arrived at one of the larger department stores welcomed by the city fathers, coincident with the showing of "Disneyrama." The 12 cartoons in CinemaScope delighted the throngs of children who witnessed the performance, accoring to manager Bill Kays

Tom Thomas, manager, Thomas, Taylor, Pa., has announced that the fourth annual Easter theatre party sponsored by the members of the R. and L. Civic Club will be held on April 11. William Feeney, general chairman, has selected the following residents to assist in the arrangements, Oliver Harris, Donald Bowen, Harry Steevers, William J. Ott, Louis Mulka, George Kohler, Michael Moran, and Thomas Jones. . . . The Second Ward Sports Booster Club, Dunmore, Pa., conducted a theatre party for the girls of the Ward in the Orient, of which Jim Edwards is manager.

Mary Maloney, for many years an employe of the Comerford Theatres, resigned to take a position as secretary in the office of the Governor, Harrisburg. Prior to her departure, a party was tendered Miss Maloney by her co-workers in the Blue Lantern Restaurant, when she was presented with a gift. There were 25 in attendance. . . . Tom Comerford became a grandfather again when his daughter, Ann Comerford Roche, gave birth to a baby boy, her fourth son. . . . Tom Carey, district manager, Comerford Theatres, Waverly, Pa., was a visitor here. . . . Mrs. Ann Healey, Comerford, is a surgical patient at the Mercy Hospital. Patsy Neary, Capitol, has taken over for Mrs. Neary in her absence.

York

James A. Carey announced that he will do his own buying and booking for the York and Elmwood.

Virginia

Salem

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McLemore, owners, Salem, announced the celebration this month of the 25th anniversary of the Salem. The theatre, the second especially designed for sound pictures in Virginia, opened its doors on March 24 1930, under the sponsorship of the Salem Kiwanis Club for the benefit of underpriviliged children. Manager Robert L. Carper now operates a gift and stationery store in Salem and will participate in this big anniversary celebration. Managing the all modern Salem now is Robert E. Harris, formerly of the Hedley in Texas.

MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

MARCH 23, 1955
VOLUME 53 NUMBER 21

A PLEA FOR ONE THEATREOWNER ASSOCIATION

PROBABLY AT NO TIME in the entire history of this industry has there been more reason for one, honest, objective, capably led, and 100 per cent representative theatre organization.

There was a day when only Allied represented the little fellow; when the Theatre Owners of America was producer dominated through the paying membership of the latter's theatre affiliates; and when the antipathy of these two toward one another bred many splinter groups, usually at local levels, of sincere theatremen who couldn't stomach the shenanigans of either. But much of that is changed. Through their locally sponsored and locally owned buying combines, Allied today bids fair to be called a combination of the big fellows. And the Theatre Owners of America, with theatre divorcement unshackeling the hands of some pretty aggressive younger bloods, seems to have become as liberal in their thoughts as Allied ever hoped to be.

If these two organizations, fostered by the wisdom and experience of their respective histories, and founded on an honest effort to serve all honest theatremen, should call a convention and unite as one powerful body of theatre executives, the splinter groups would join it willingly and enthusiastically.

On the national labor scene we have an impressive example of the power of unity. The gigantic A. F. of L. and the equally gigantic C. I. O. have found reason and need to forget the ambitions of their career executives and of their individual objectives and to join up as one united front of all organized labor. How much more important this could be to the relatively unorganized, harassed, and sick theatre industry.

Elsewhere in the motion picture field, each of the various branches have their one powerful organization. Studio technicians and labor have Dick Walsh's IATSE; actors have Actor's Equity; producers and distributors have Eric Johnston's MPA. Only theatremen, with the greatest single investment, with the cash boxes through which come the industry's income, and with the personal contact with the legislators, the newspapers, and the public, find themselves pushed around and subjected to dictation because there are so many exhibitor organizations that not one has the weight it should have.

So, let's think it over, men of exhibition. It is pretty certain that the way we are traveling, we're going from bad to worse. One organization could be a powerful protector and worth the effort.

If you agree, how about tearing out this page, initialing it, and sending it to the head of any organization to which you belong. If you don't belong to any, send it to one of the existing ones anyway. That will help them to guess at the increased membership they would have if they forgot their differences and got together.

MORE ABOUT NEWSPAPERS

WHILE IT IS an axiom of our industry that "A bad review never hurt a good picture, and a good review never helped a bad one," the "Egg-Head" critic who doesn't like anything Hollywood, or commercially successful, and who writes for his own tiny "Egg-Head" audience, is still one of the minor annoyances of most theatremen.

A case in point happened recently in Lancaster, Pa., a city of about 65,000, and afflicted with "One-Newspaperitis," so that any newspaperman could be the movie critic as well without fear of having his judgment ridiculed. The UA highly successful boxoffice picture, "Vera Cruz," starring Gary Cooper, Burt Lancaster, Technicolor, and Superscope, was booked into the Capitol. Not a critic's picture, but an obviously popular and commercial piece of entertainment, the alleged critic turned "Egg-Head" and panned it with the statement that Lancaster audiences didn't like it.

So what happened? The paper later was forced to admit:

> "Vera Cruz" Makes Good.
> Ouch! After taking a soft punch at "Vera Cruz" and saying Lancaster audiences did not take kindly to the film, what happened? The Capitol held it over just to prove it had confidence in the picture, and it did good business. Chalk that one up as a bad guess.

We choose to call it a bad review which would probably not have happened if there was another newspaper in opposition. Ho! Hum!

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

FRENCHMEN Jean Thevenot, general manager, Societe Nouvelle Pathe Theatres and consultant in Pathe distribution and production, and Lucien Nachbaur, managing director, Pathe Circuit in Paris and throughout France, arrived here recently for conferences relative to bringing Cinerama to France and to consult with Duncan MacGregor, Jr., president, and Lillian Gerard, vice-president of their American subsidiary, operators of the Paris and Fifth Avenue Cinema here.

KONECOFF

Cinerama will make its French bow at a former legit house known as the Empire on May 15 and rates will resemble those of the legit circuit, which is under $3.00 per reserved seat, on a three-a-day basis. The circuit is commencing the erection of a new theatre to be known as the Wepler with a 2,000 seat capacity. As plans stand now, it will be equipped to handle both Cinerama and CinemaScope product with research presently in the works so that the same screen might be utilized. Completion is expected in about a year.

All the houses in the Pathe Circuit, 30 in France, of which 13 are in Paris, and the remainder in the provinces; and three first runs in Brussels are equipped with CinemaScope with a total of about 500 in the country able to show films in that medium at present and those in the larger cities featuring magnetic sound. CinemaScope has aided business materially even doubling the take on the initial films with some houses able to amortize the cost of the equipment on engagements of "The Robe." There are no 3-D pix playing Europe, according to the pair.

Film business has picked up considerably this year and is about 15 per cent ahead of last year with 1952 being the

"Blackboard Jungle" Leads Pack

NEW YORK—Led by Loew's State, the Astor, and the Paramount, Broadway first-runs continued spotty over the weekend, although the theatres named were way out in front. According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Battle Cry" (Warners). Paramount held up well and was sure of $40,000 on the seventh week.

"Untamed" (20th-Fox). Roxy reported $16,551 for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with second session bound to top $32,000.

"Hit The Deck" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, tallied $78,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the third week expected to reach $110,000.

"The Country Girl" (Paramount). Criterion did $22,000 on the 14th week.

"On The Waterfront" (Columbia). Globe with this replay anticipated the first week at $10,000.

"Underwater" (RKO). Mayfair expected the sixth week to garner $9,000.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor reported a very good $52,000 second session.

"New York Confidential" (Warners). Victoria dropped to $9,000 on fifth week.

"The Long Gray Line" (Columbia). Capitol announced $29,000 for the sixth week.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). Loew's State opened to a top $90,000, great for the house.

MPAA Favors Flexible Damages

WASHINGTON—The Motion Picture Association of America is "stronger than ever" behind legislation to give federal judges discretion in awarding less than triple damages in private anti-trust suits, declared Kenneth Clark, vice-president, last week.

Commenting on a statement of House Judiciary Committee Chairman Celler, Democrat, New York, that he did not expect action on a discretionary damages bill soon and that "the motion picture people were the ones who were for it originally and they have discarded it," Clark said that "Mr. Celler has somehow been misinformed. Every day that passes exposes additional racketeering and chicanery resulting from the large damages that can be won under present law."

Noting that the Attorney General's special anti-trust study is reported to favor discretionary damages, Clark hoped that his recommendation would induce Congress to enact such legislation this year.

Paramount Readies For TV

NEW YORK—Barney Balaban, president, Paramount, revealed last week that the company's additional studio is being made ready for television production, although no decision has been made whether Paramount will use the studio to produce its own television films or rent the facilities to others or both.

UA Promises 90 Films In Three Years

Krim Issues Progress Report; Details Pacts With Stars And Estimates 1955 Budget Of More Than $40,000,000

NEW YORK—Arthur Krim, president, United Artists, last week presented another "progress report" of the company as associates, vice-presidents Max E. Youngstein, William Heineman, Arnold Picker, and chairman of the board Robert Benjamin listened in approval and Krim assured exhibitors that the company had every intention of improving its product as well as to supply a steady program of top quality releases.

In the immediate future, a period taking in the next three years, United Artists is expected to release at least 30 top pictures annually from a list of affiliates representing as strong a group of talent as has ever been assembled under one roof. More and more deals with top talent either in front of the cameras, who are becoming increasingly aware of the commercial aspects of the business, as well as with those in back of the cameras will be announced as they are completed so that the announced number may very well be increased by the end of this year. Added to this will be a number of other films classified as single picture deals and less expensive productions which are expected to round out the program of releases since exhibitors have expressed a definite need for medium pictures. This year will see the 48 features originally announced delivered at the rate of four per month. The total number for next year could not be estimated at this time.

The company has been able in the past to offer independent producers worldwide distribution facilities and financing of productions, and now a new phase of support in pre-production development can be offered which will take in the purchase of properties, hiring of writers to work on treatments and scripts, etc. By offering joiners a complete package with absolute freedom of expression in production, it is expected that more and more top talent will join the roster.

Krim assured exhibitors that long-range merchandising and long-range financial planning is possible in the company set-up, and as a result exhibitors can count on top pictures flowing at a steady rate for at least three to five years. The affiliated film makers are commercially-minded and are expected to relate cost to income with stars signed representing proven boxoffice attractions having contributed heavily to the well-being of the industry. These personalities will get a chance to make pictures which might never have been made on major lots, and usually their contracts with UA call for non-exclusivity so that they can still make outside pictures, and enhance or maintain their standing. It is estimated that the company will invest $40,000,000 in the production program in 1955 which is practically full financing of the picture line-up; and profits garnered will be re-invested in future films.

SCTOA Asks Distribs To Improve Bid System

LOS ANGELES—The board of Southern California Theatre Owners Association recently called upon the distributors of the southern California territory to model their system of bidding in line with that recently called for in an injunction of the United States District Court in Kansas City.

The Kansas City decision of Judge Albert A. Ridge enjoined distributors from using "any bidding system in Kansas City, Kans., that does not provide equal opportunity for any and all of the bidders to view or see the picture before submitting bids and which does not provide equal opportunity for all bidders to be present when the bids are opened and to inspect the bids upon opening."

The SCTOA further resolved that bidding procedure should provide for prompt awarding of bids, and that all bid letters should specify whether the bid is for a first or subsequent run.

TOA Switches Meet Dates

NEW YORK—The dates of the annual Theatre Owners of America convention in Los Angeles have been changed from Oct. 23-27 to Oct. 6-9, it was announced last week. The meetings will be held at the Hotel Biltmore.

TOA and two private organizations are negotiating to have the trade show conducted by an outside group. The Theatre Equipment Supply and Manufacturers Association trade show will be held with the Allied States Convention in Chicago this year.

Chesapeake Profit Slips

NEW YORK—Chesapeake Industries, Inc., last week reported a net profit of $1,001,486 for 1954, as against $1,031,080 for 1953. The board of directors also voted a current dividend of $1 on its $4 preferred stock and $1.50 on the $6 preferred, payable April 1 to holders of record March 22.

AA Launches Drive For Major Status

NEW YORK—Allied Artists, celebrating its 25th anniversary, took a huge stride forward in its determined effort to join major film companies last week as Steve Broidy, president; Morey Goldstein, vice-president and sales head; and John C. Flinn, advertising-publicity director, launched a whirlwind 14-city tour of "one night stands" in Dallas, Atlanta, Charlotte, and Philadelphia, where they were joined by adviser William F. Rodgers.

In each territory, the AA executives met with leading exhibitors, screened forthcoming releases, "Shotgun" and "An Annapolis Story," and hosted luncheons at which Broidy outlined future product plans. Broidy emphasized recent agreements between the company and John Huston, on an exclusive basis, and William Wilder and William Wyler on an alternating basis with Paramount, as signs of AA's production upsurge. He called attention to the present product shortage and asked theatremen to invest playing time in AA films.

The AA president also vigorously denied reports that the top films made by the aforementioned artists would be released by other major companies than his own. "We are going to make these pictures, and we are going to distribute them," he said. As examples of the quality of future AA product, Broidy pointed to a pair of CinemaScope color films already completed, "The Warrior," starring Errol Flynn, and "Wichita," starring Joel McCrea.

Exposition Funds Pledged

HOLLYWOOD—It was announced last week at a mass meeting called by Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president, Paramount, that the members of AMPP had subscribed $300,000 towards the planned Motion Picture Exposition and Hall of Fame.

Main speaker at the meeting, attended by about 1,800, was Edmund L. Depatie, president, Motion Picture Exposition; other speakers were Jean Hersholt, Don Hartman, and B. C. Duval, who promised that labor would do it's share. Other meetings are planned at Warners, Columbia, and 20th-Fox, the goal being the raising of $1,000,000.

Planned as a major public attraction and incorporated under the laws of California as a non-profit organization, MPE's debentures are offered for sale in units of $100, and will bear five per cent interest. No funds will be expended until the total or $850,000 has been subscribed.

Connolly Quits 20th-Fox

NEW YORK—James M. Connolly, 20th-Fox northeast division sales manager, has resigned from the company, it was announced last week. Connolly is joining John Donnely and Son, Boston advertising firm, as executive assistant to the vice-president. The four offices in the northeast division, Albany, Boston, Buffalo, and New Haven, will be temporarily supervised by Glenn Norris, eastern sales manager.

Anti-Toll Group Changes Name; Commissions Smythe For Research

NEW YORK—Dr. Dallas Smythe, director, Institute of Communications at the University of Illinois, has been commissioned by the Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV to conduct a series of research studies into the economic impact and implications of subscription television as compared to the "free airwaves" policy established by the government and in effect continuously since the birth of broadcasting in this country.

The Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, formerly known as the Joint Committee on Toll-TV, last week adopted its new title in order to clarify its policy and explain its aim to the public.

Dr. Smythe, professor of economics, University of Illinois, was chief of the economics division, Federal Communications Commission, from 1943 to 1948. He recently completed research studies on radio and television for the National Council of the Churches of Christ and the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters.

The Committee operates as a unit representing theatrical executives in the nationwide association which includes TV set owners, civic groups, parent-teacher associations, small businessmen, and other segments of the TV audience who are determined to preserve the present free system of broadcasting.

Continuing officers of the renamed Committee are co-chairmen Alfred Starr, Nashville, Tenn., and Trueman Rembusch, Franklin, Ind.; Philip L. Harling, New York, treasurer; and James Arthur, Los Angeles, secretary.

Starr Says Toll-TV Can Be "Staved Off"

BOSTON—More than 350 theatremen heard Alfred Starr, co-chairman, Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, address the first exhibitor meeting on the subject, held at the Hotel Bradford here last week.

Stating that "the seeming apathy of the big advertising agencies and the networks in not fighting with more vigor is incomprehensible to me," Starr expressed his confidence that "toll-TV can be permanently staved off," but pointed out that "Zenith is flooding the country with propaganda promising attractive programs and offerings on subscription TV. This company has the resources to hire able economists, legal talent, expert public relations counsel, and men of political stature, who can easily sway an unsuspecting public into buying the extra gadgets necessary for phonevision, at from $75 to $100. This must be told to the householder, particularly those who have just finished paying for their sets."

The 16mm. film, "Zenith Presents Phonevision," was shown to the group and analyzed by Starr. Edward Lider, co-chairman, New England committee, made a plea for funds to help put across to the public the arguments advanced by Starr.

Starr emphasized the dangers of the medium to both exhibition and the public and opined that more groups would oppose it when the facts were known.

The above is a general view of the recent meeting of industry leaders held at the Sheraton-Astor Hotel, New York City, by COMPO to consider theatre promotion projects.

Allied Clears Stand On COMPO Question

WASHINGTON—Allied States last fortnight issued a statement clarifying its position on the alleged misuse of the name COMPO by regional exhibitor organizations and denying any split between National Allied and Col. H. A. Cole.

The statement noted that COMPO's by-laws contained the proviso that "nothing in the foregoing shall be considered to authorize the Council to represent the members in matters pertaining to the licensing of films or to trade practices." Allied objected to the use of the name COMPO by Pat McGee, in a bulletin sent to the members of Rocky Mountain Council Of Motion Picture Organizations, in which McGee stated that his organization was engaging in bargaining with distribution.

Kyle Rorex, executive director, Texas COMPO, then issued a release beginning, "Answering National Allied charges that the COMPO name had been misused by state and regional units, Col. H. A. Cole . . . stated that Texas COMPO has established an enviable record." Since Col. Cole is one of the leaders of National Allied, and was present when the resolution was passed referring to Rocky Mountain Council Of Motion Picture Organizations, it should be apparent, said National Allied, that their resolution was not directed against the regional units of COMPO, and particularly not against Texas COMPO.

Starr Scores Toll-TV

ATLANTA—The annual meeting of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Georgia was warned by Alfred Starr, co-chairman, Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, and E. D. Martin, president, TOA, that the adoption of toll-TV would work hardship on exhibitors and everyone that owns a television set.

Stating that free television and toll-TV cannot exist together, Starr claimed that low income families would receive only inferior entertainment, since a few large syndicates would acquire the best TV programs for use on the pay-as-you-watch medium.

U-I Earnings Boost Decca Financial Report

NEW YORK—The net income of Decca Records for 1954 was $3,070,205, including undistributed earnings of Universal Pictures, in which Decca owns 72 per cent of the common stock, it was announced last week by Milton R. Rachmil, president, Decca and U-I. This marks a sizable increase over the net income in the previous fiscal year.

Profit is equal to $1.92 per share on 1,602,501 shares outstanding on Dec. 31, against $1.38 per share on 1,354,158 shares outstanding at the end of 1953. Income from Decca's record division came to $1,170,926 before taxes, compared to $1,109,006 in 1953. Dividends from U-I were $875,437, as against $703,894 in 1953. The equity in U-I undistributed earnings is $1,685,795 for last year and $621,828 in 1953.

Decca last year increased its U-I holdings from 600,075 shares, or about 60 per cent of the common stock, to 718,585 shares, approximately 72 per cent. The average cost to Decca of its U-I stock is $17.20 per share, while the closing price on the New York Stock Exchange was $31 on Dec. 31. Decca and U-I exchanged common stock in the amount of 251,343 shares in 1945.

Rackmil predicted a good year for Decca in 1955, saying that it "occupies a secure position in two important segments of the entertainment field and must benefit through continuation of favorable conditions surrounding them."

The statement also listed management's objections to the resolution proposing cumulative voting for Decca, recently proposed by minority stockholders. Rackmil said that at the stockholders' meeting next month he would vote all proxies not indicating a contrary direction against the proposal.

Five present directors of Decca will be up for reelection, Rackmil; Leonard W. Schneider, executive vice-president; Robert W. Lea, Harold I. Thorpe, and Samuel H. Vallance. All except Schneider are directors of U-I.

The salary of Rachmil as president was $42,500.12, plus $80,002 received from U-I as president; Schneider received $39,999.96. All directors and officers as a group received $180,763, and as directors of U-I, their compensation totaled $95,002, it was reported.

Fox Court Order Attacked

NEW YORK—Two trustees of the old Fox Theatre Circuit last week filed a petition in New York Federal Court for a show cause order why a 1933 Court of Appeals order disposing of certain properties and assets should not be declared void.

The petitioners are Kenneth Steinhardt and Leopold Porrino, represented by attorney Robert Aronstein. The respondents are Chase National Bank, Chase Security Corporation, Daniel O. Hastings, General Theatre Corporation, General Precision Equipment Corporation, Skouras Theatres, Harvey B. Newman, and others.

The two trustees want an accounting of the properties, their return or re-assignment to the petitioners, or a satisfactory cash settlement.

Exhibs Win Reduction In Admissions Tax

TORONTO—Some exhibitors in Ontario are "reasonably" happy with the announcement by the Province of Ontario of a 20 per cent shaving of the amusement tax in the province.

The reduction was announced by Premier Leslie Frost in his budget statement to the Ontario Legislature.

All taxes were removed on admission tickets up to 25 cents, although exhibitors had requested that 50 cents be the ceiling. The admission tax was reduced from 12½ per cent to 10 per cent.

The exhibitors feel that the Premier was a little out of step when he suggested that the savings be passed on to the patrons. As one man put it, "I am now losing up to $200 a week. If I pass on the saving to the patrons, I will continue to lose $200."

Other observers saw in the reduction a subsidy by the Government to the industry. "A cost of $1,500,000 a year is subsidy?" ask industryites.

In making his announcement, the Premier felt that the lower prices would result in increased attendance and revenue.

An affiliation between the Theatre Owners Association of Quebec, Inc., and the Theatre Owners of America will be discussed in a meeting in Montreal on March 23. TOA executives will take part in a discussion which will be highlighted by a dinner-meeting in which Alfred Starr, past president, will speak in French and English. The new Quebec group headed by E. N. Tabah, already has 60 members with more signing every day. Tabah and J. H. Strauss, both Montreal exhibitors, held discussions with the TOA executives at its recent mid-winter meeting in Washington when they were assured of every cooperation. Among the possibilities of such an affiliation is the establishment of a non-profit booking office. So far it has managed to obtain cheaper public liability insurance premiums for quite a few of its members and has been testing its mass-bargaining position in other ways.

Canadian Comment

A total of five persons in British Columbia are eligible for the 25 Year Club of Famous Players this year. They include Harry Black, manager, Capitol and Totem, Prince Rupert; Albert Foster, projectionist, Civic, Nelson; Dorothy Smyth, cashier, Capitol, Pentictor; Fred Simmons, projectionist, Capitol, Vernon; and Ellard Williamson, assistant manager, Capitol, Vernon. Clarence and Ernest Marshall, Capitol, North Battleford, Sask., will also become members in 1955.

A bylaw is before the Metropolitan Council of Toronto to prohibit projecting business signs, to be effective in January, 1960. The bylaw contains a number of restrictions concerning illumination of advertising displays as well as a ban on billboards or posters beyond the building line. The colors of yellow, orange, or red, alone or in any combination would be prohibited if a sign is within 300 feet of a traffic light and conflicts with the traffic signal. The illumination of signs within the 300 feet by means of flashing lighting, reflector buttons, or luminous paint would also be banned if the bylaw is made effective. Signs of the facial type cannot be projected more than 18 inches over the street line, it is also stated.

Vittorio Mattea, RKO manager for Italy, recently received a special gold medal award from the Italian trade press citing him as "an outstanding personality in the field of film distribution." Italian screen star Sophia Loren presented the award at a reception given by the Italian trade press at the Grand Hotel, Rome.

Belgium

Belgium will consider having American companies make color prints for release there when other European countries begin the practice, it was reported last week by David Opochinsky, head, New York office, Titra Film Laboratories. The color print problem is seen as academic at present, since Belgium has not perfected its color print work yet. However, it is expected that any future deal will include the other Benelux countries. It has been reported that Belgium seeks to give its labs the same proportion of color work that they now enjoy in the black and white field, 80 per cent.

New York Senate Okehs Breakage Bill; Harriman Signs As Expected

ALBANY—The State Senate gave unanimous approval last week to a previously passed Assembly bill legalizing the collection of fractions one-half or more on the five per cent admissions tax now levied in New York, Binghamton, and Elmira. The measure is retroactive to June 30, 1954, when the New York City impost law became effective.

It was sent to Governor Averell Harriman for his action, favorable as was expected in view of a bi-partisan agreement among legislative leaders to pass the bill, and of Mayor Robert F. Wagner's advocacy. The Conference of Mayors also supported the measure, which would affect two per cent sales taxes in several upstate communities.

With the proposal now placed on the statute books, the expectation was that counsel for metropolitan exhibitors and for the City of New York would file with the Court of Appeals supplemental briefs on New York's appeal from an Appellate Division decision that collection of major "breakage" is illegal.

The state's highest tribunal heard arguments when Stanley Buchsbaum, representing the City of New York, suggested that both sides have the privilege of submitting additional memoranda as to the effect of the bill on the court case. Exhibitor sources alleged that the measure attempted to circumvent the pending litigation and a possible adverse ruling by the Court of Appeals.

RKO Meetings Held

HOLLYWOOD—Regular routine board meetings of RKO Pictures Corporation and RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., respectively, were held last fortnight in Los Angeles with J. R. Grainger, president, presiding. Board members attending for RKO Pictures Corporation were Noah Dietrich, J. Miller Walker, and E. L. Walton. Board members attending for RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., were Dietrich, Walker, and Dee Simpson, Houston. C. J. Tevlin, vice-president in charge of studio operations also attended.

Jacon Sees Product Lack As Top Exhibitor Problem

NEW YORK—Returning from an 11-week tour of all exchange territories last week, Bernard Jacon, vice-president in charge of sales, IFE, said that the two big problems facing exhibitors throughout the country are insufficient program changes and the necessity of giving current product lengthy runs far beyond the picture's earning capacity.

Calling the problem especially acute on weekends, Jacon said he found that many theatres were forced to carry mid-week shows over the weekend into the following week, instead of breaking their program in the middle of the weekend.

Jacon said he found that the public "is tired of seeing the same faces in one film after another," and he called for more diversification in pictures and a better talent development program to attract patrons.

Jacon added that three American language pictures have been set for national distribution by IFE during April, "Wayward Wife," "Too Young For Love," and "City Stands Trial." "Love In The City" will be set for pre-release engagements in several cities during April.

Kalmenson Pact Extended

WASHINGTON — Warners informed the Securities and Exchange Commission last week that the contract of vice-president Benjamin Kalmenson as general sales manager had been extended till 1959.

The agreement takes effect on June 30, 1956, when his present contract was due to expire, and calls for the same weekly rate of compensation, $1,750, as his present contract. The new agreement also continues the payment of $250 a week entertainment expenses and extends the provision for Kalmenson's employment as adviser at a weekly rate of $500 for five years after he ceases to be sales manager.

Salesmen, Distributors Reach Crucial Stage

NEW YORK—Negotiations between the committees representing the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen and the major distributors have moved into the third and crucial stage, David Bartell, Colosseum general counsel, said last week.

In a report to the membership, Bartell said that the distributors have seemingly selected a new theme for heir current negotiations, "strangulation of a salesman."

The distributors in rejecting the film salesmen's proposal for an increase in salary and expenses said that it was in the "thinking of top management to limit the salaries of the film salesmen to $100 per week," but offered to continue the present agreement for an additional two years. We have here, Bartell said, a "spectacle of the film industry, enjoying the highest profits in its history, belittling the efforts of its salesmen, stifling their enthusiasm, and destroying their efficiency by failing and refusing to accord to them the consideration commensurate with their importance to the industry."

He added that the placing of a $100 limit on the salary of a salesman would mean the decimation of its sales force, the exodus of high calibre, hard-hitting salesmen to other fields of endeavor.

Terre Haute Suit Drags On

WASHINGTON—Consent decree negotiations in the government's Terre Haute anti-trust suit collapsed last week and the case is expected to go to trial sometime in May.

The case was originally set for trial on March 21, but consent decree negotiations have been going on for many months, and their last minute collapse will probably necessitate a postponement of the trial.

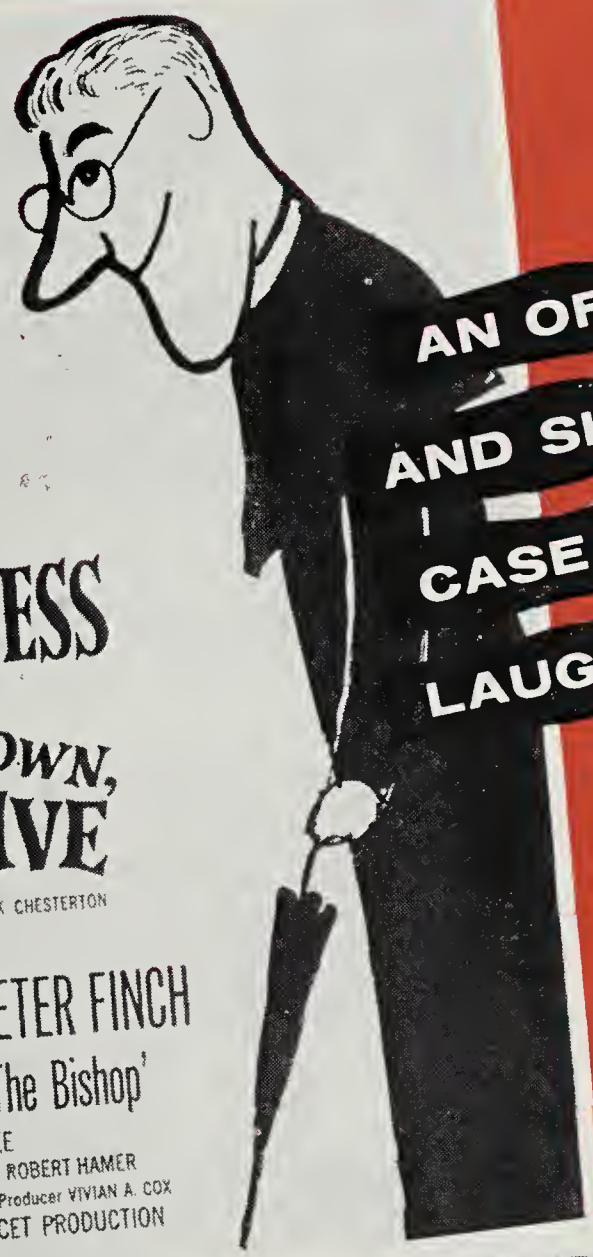
The government has charged five theatre chains with conspiracy to monopolize first-run exhibition in Terre Haute, defendants being Alliance Theatre Corporation, Chicago; Fourth Avenue Amusement Company, Louisville; and Grand Theatre Corporation, Terre Haute Amusement, Inc., and Tri-Theatres Corporation, all of Indiana.

Republic Salaries Revealed

NEW YORK—Directors and officers of Republic received remunerations totaling $387,275 in the year ending Oct. 30, it was revealed last week in the notice of the annual meeting of stockholders, to be held April 5 in the home office.

Individual amounts paid included Herbert J. Yates, president, $168,887, and Richard W. Altschuler, vice-president and president, Republic International, $40,210.

Stockholders will elect four directors for three-year terms, management's nominees being John Petrauskas, Jr., William N. Saal, Edwin Van Pelt, and Douglas T. Yates, all presently members of the board.



Kramer Sells Two To Astor

NEW YORK—Stanley Kramer sold the rights and negatives of "Champion" and "Home Of The Brave" to Astor Pictures Corporation last week, for a reported amount exceeding $175,000. The pictures were the first two made by Kramer for United Artists, having been released in 1949.

Texas D-I Owners Join Battle On Toll-TV

DALLAS—The annual convention of the Texas Drive-In Theatre Owners Association last week heard William C. Gehring, general sales manager, 20th-Fox, filling in for Spyros P. Skouras, who was sick, urge exhibitors to "organize and use the screen to tell the people what is being foisted upon them under the guise of pay-as-you-see television."

As spokesman for 20th-Fox, Gehring declared that the firm would not release any of its products to any other medium "unless forced to do so by due process of law. If the Federal Communications Commission licenses toll-TV, we're beat," warned Gehring.

President Jack Farr and Carl D. Levy, general counsel, Jefferson Amusements Company, further called upon the 400 exhibitors to join in the fight against toll-TV.

The convention elected Charles Weisenberg, president, Weisenberg theatres, Dallas, as new president of the association. Also elected were vice-presidents Edward Josephs, Joseph Theatres, Austin; J. L. Durst, Fredricksburg exhibitor; and G. S. Hill, Leon Drive-In Theatres, Abilene. Don Douglas, Rowley United Theatres, Dallas, was named secretary, and Tim Ferguson, Downs Drive-In, Grand Prairie, was elected treasurer.

Starr To Debate Issue

WASHINGTON—Alfred Starr, co-chairman, joint committee against toll-TV, and Dr. Millard C. Faught, Zenith economic consultant on Phonevision, will debate the toll-TV issue at the National Press Club on either April 12 or 14.

The battle will take place at a press club luncheon and is expected to draw one of the largest attendances of the year, including interested members of the House, Senate, and FCC as well as Washington newsmen.

It is expected that both Starr and Faught will have 20 minutes to present their cases, and a 30-minute question period will follow. Jack O'Brien, chairman, Press Club arrangements committee, is handling the debate details.

Reade Raps "Feast Or Famine"

NEW YORK—The present "feast or famine" system of releasing product was blamed recently by Walter Reade, Jr., board chairman, on distribution, especially in small town situations.

He pointed out that theatres in many towns which used to change their bill "three or four times per week" are forced to change programs once or twice a week because of product shortage and the policies of distribution in not providing a continuity of big and good films.

Lardner Review Denied

WASHINGTON—The Supreme Court last week refused to reconsider its earlier decision refusing to review a lower court decision against Ring Lardner, Jr., screen writer, in his damage suit against 20th-Fox. The suit resulted when the studio dismissed Lardner under the morals clause of his contract for refusing to answer questions of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Foreign Earnings Are Estimated At Record $200,000,000 For '54

WASHINGTON—United States motion picture earnings abroad are estimated to have reached a record high of $200 million in 1954, the U. S. Department of Commerce reported in a special survey analysis released recently.

Rising exports of high quality productions coupled with expansion of theatre facilities overseas have been largely responsible for the increase, according to an article appearing in the Feb. 28 issue of Foreign Commerce Weekly, official publication of the Department's Bureau of Foreign Commerce.

Prepared by the Scientific, Motion Picture, and Photographic Products Division of the Business and Defense Services Administration, the survey shows that the largest increase in theatre facilities occurred in Europe where rehabilitation of exhibition places destroyed by the war and building of new theatres have resulted in considerable growth in seating capacity in recent years.

New large screen projection techniques, now being introduced in foreign countries at an accelerated rate, also have been a contributing factor in the increased business for U. S. films abroad, the article states.

The article points out that the film industry is highly dependent on its foreign receipts in maintaining its high quality of production. Producing more than 300 feature films annually, the best of which are exported to all the free countries of the world, approximately 40 per cent of the industry's revenues comes from foreign showings.

It is generally admitted, the report states, that competition from foreign-produced films has greatly increased in recent years, especially in Italy, Germany, the United Kingdom, and France, whose steadily growing production is offering more competition not only in their own markets, but also to some extent in the world market. Although some playing time may have been lost to these foreign-produced films in recent years, the article estimates that U. S. films accounted for approximately 68 per cent of the feature films shown throughout the free world at the beginning of 1955. This is a six per cent decline from the 74 per cent estimated for 1951, the last time such a survey was made.

In a current survey of the foreign market for U. S. film production, the article estimates that on Jan. 1, 1955, there were 108,537 motion picture theatres in operation, exhibiting 35mm. films in some 120 countries and territories throughout the world. This is an increase of 8,994 units, or about nine per cent higher than the 1951 estimate of 99,543 theatres. Seating capacity as of January 1, 1955, existed for 56,745,451 persons, compared to 54,107,671 on the same date in 1951.

Indicative of the growth in facilities throughout the world, the survey states, is the fact that the ratio of seats to the world's population now is one seat for every 42 persons, compared with one seat for every 44 persons in 1951. Based on population statistics of the Bureau of the Census and on overseas sources, the ratio of theatre seats to population in the United States is one seat for every 14 persons. In the United Kingdom this ratio is one to 12; in France, one to 16; Italy, one to 11; while for all of Europe it is approximately one seat for every 20 persons. In South America this ratio is one to 26.

The most complete theatre coverage is in Australia and New Zealand, where there is an average of one seat for every 7.5 persons. In Canada, the theatre building program has kept pace with the growing population, and the ratio of seats to population at present is one to 13.

Musicians Ask Tax Slice

NEW YORK—James C. Petrillo, president, American Federation of Musicians, last week sent an open letter to President Eisenhower asking for relief from the 20 per cent federal admissions tax, stating that the "revival" of the motion picture industry is due to the 10 per cent reduction obtained by the industry from Congress.

TNT Gets Marciano Bout

NEW YORK—The Marciano-Cockell heavyweight championship fight scheduled for May 16 will be theatre televised coast-to-coast by Theatre Network Television, Inc., it was announced last week by James D. Norris, president, International Boxing Club; Nathan L. Halpern, president, TNT; and Jimmy Murray, who is promoting the fight in cooperation with the International Boxing Club. The broadcast will originate live from Kezar Stadium, San Francisco, and through the TNT network will be projected bigger than life size in theatres throughout the country. The state of California will be blacked out.

COMPO Salutes Beloit, Wis.

NEW YORK—The 39th in the series of COMPO ads in Editor and Publisher shows how Beloit, Wis., merchants joined with a local circuit in promoting a special 12-page movie supplement to The Beloit Daily News to stimulate their own business. The ad emphasizes the point made by COMPO several times previously that other retail businesses profit from the proximity of busy movie theatres.

Snaper Asks Increase In Children's Pictures

NEW YORK—Wilbur Snaper, president, New Jersey Allied, reporting last week on a recent meeting of his unit at Trenton, N. J., presented a gloomy account of theatre business in that territory. The consensus of the more than 50 attending exhibitors at the Trenton conference was that a drop in attendance over the last six months seemed evident in their theatres. This drop was principally in the children's category, the blame in part being traceable to the distributors. Snaper argued that the lack of suitable children's pictures aggravated the situation, causing attendance at Saturday matinees to be practically nil. He went on to say that many pictures could not be obtained at all, only one print being available for the entire country.

Another criticism made by Snaper of the distribution companies was that of excessive charges for film rentals. Tax alleviation has not helped to ease the situation, while the boost on film costs are resulting in tighter financial squeezes for Jersey exhibitors.

In regard to the anti-toll-TV campaign, definite action was taken by the Allied meeting when they voted to advance a substantial amount of money for the fight, this sum to be repaid by individual members. Snaper spoke to many state senators and representatives concerning the toll-TV question, but a general indication of official feeling could not be derived.

Snaper discussed a suggestion brought to the attention of the assemblage at the last COMPO meeting, that of having a junior price range esablished in theatres.

UA, Stars Sign Pacts

NEW YORK—Arthur B. Krim, president, United Artists, announced last fortnight agreements with the independent companies of four stars to produce a total of 17 features to be distributed by United Artists.

Robert Mitchum's DRM Productions has agreed to make five pictures during the next five years, with Mitchum starring in three. Frank Sinatra's independent production group has made a similar agreement. Joan Crawford has agreed to make six pictures in six years and star in three of them, while Cornel Wilde has agreed to produce and star in "Storm Fear," a Theodora production.

"Waterfront" Tops Critic Poll

NEW YORK—The 14th annual poll by the Film Critic's Circle of the Foreign Language Press released the following results last week: best picture in all categories and winner of the award for the best American film of 1954, "On The Waterfront," Columbia; best import from England, "Genevieve," a J. Arthur Rank production released here by Universal-International; best film in a language other than English, "Gate Of Hell," produced in Japan by Daiei Productions and distributed here by Edward Harrison; best actor, Marlon Brando, "On The Waterfront"; best actress, Grace Kelly, "The Country Girl"; best producer, Sam Spiegel, "On The Waterfront"; best director, Elia Kazan, "On The Waterfront."

Jack L. Warner, executive producer, Warners, is interviewed by Martin Block at the recent all-celebrity premiere of Warners' "East Of Eden," Astor, New York City.

SW Launches Spring Drive

NEW YORK—A meeting of Stanley Warner zone managers and home office executives was held last week by Harry M. Kalmine, vice-president and general manager, to launch the company's Spring Movie Festival through April, May, and June. Samuel Rosen, executive vice-president, addressed the meeting. Among those present were zone managers Alex Halperin, Chicago; M. A. Silver, Pittsburgh; Harry Feinstein, New Haven; Charles A. Smakwitz, Newark; Ted Schlanger, Philadelphia; George A. Crouch; Washington; and Ben H. Wallerstein, Hollywood. Home office executives, S. Aarons, N. Alben, J. M. Brennan, N. D. Fellman, G. Gagliardi, H. Goldberg, H. M. Maier, W. F. Marshall, L. Isaac, W. S. McDonald, C. Siegel, L. Siegel, D. Triester, B. Wirth, F. J. Kiernan, D. Fogelson, N. Lapkin, and A. Rosen were also present.

Goldbeck Heads Charity Group

HOLLYWOOD—Willis Goldbeck was elected president of the Permanent Charities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry last week, succeeding Regis Toomey. Goldbeck, representing the SDG, moved up from the vice-presidency under an established policy which provides that the top office be filled in rotation by representatives of various industry groups. The new slate of officers also includes Lawrence A. Weingarten, SPG, vice-president; F. E. Witt, chairman, Studio Colonel's Committee, reelected treasurer; and Carl Cooper, chairman of Labor's Executive Committee, reelected secretary.

Lichtman Against 2-D Trailers For C'Scope

NEW YORK—Results of a recently-completed field survey of CinemaScope equipped theatres in the United States discloses that in many situations 2-D trailers are being programmed by exhibitors to advertise CinemaScope pictures, 20th-Fox revealed last week.

In a letter to division and branch managers, director of distribution Al Lichtman urges that this practice be immediately corrected, terming the condition as "using a midget to sell an entertainment giant."

Lichtman said, "This situation can and should be rectified immediately. Projectionists can easily change lenses during a program of standard films. While they are showing a regular picture on one of their two projection machines, they can set up the CinemaScope trailer on the other one. Showmanship in theatre programming all the way down the line should be standard operating procedure. An exhibitor should be as concerned with the type and quality of trailers he throws on his screen as the feature pictures themselves. Constant vigilance must be maintained to see that the level of theatre entertainment be the highest of all entertainment media. To accomplish this, every and all techniques of showmanship must be utilized. It was showmanship that made the movies great. It can become even greater if we do not forget this truth."

Autry, Davis Honored

WASHINGTON—The President's Prayer award for patriotic service in the Savings Bonds program was presented last week to Gene Autry and Gail Davis by Earl S. Shreve, national director.

Autry, in addition to many past services to the Savings Bond cause, has now donated a short film for theatre and television use to encourage school children to participate in the school savings program and weekly stamp days. Miss Davis, in her television character of "Annie Oakley," appears in a trailer on the same subject now being shown on television. Donation of the services of the stars, the production and prints for nationwide showings was arranged for by Jacob Mogelever, promotion manager, Savings Bonds Division, through Mitchell J. Hamilburg, associated with Autry in the Flying A Productions.

Chicago Suits Filed

CHICAGO—Three anti-trust suits against the major distributors were filed in the District Court of New Jersey last fortnight by former Chicago theatre operators who are no longer in the business or whose theatres are now closed.

Plaintiffs in the suits are Frank Gordon and Marion Gordon, former operators, Wicker Park; John and Helen Gordon, who operated the Chopin; and the trustee in bankruptcy of B. P. R. Corporation, former operator, Royal, Banner, and Paulina, all in Chicago.

The B. P. R. suit asks for $300,000 single damages, while the other two suits name no specific damages.

"Peter" Gets

World-Wide Whirl

SHOWMANSHIP is going forward along a broad front in the 20th-Fox campaign launching "A Man Called Peter" in CinemaScope, the company's Easter holiday attraction. The promotional campaign, both nationally and internationally, is one of the largest and most comprehensive undertakings in many years.

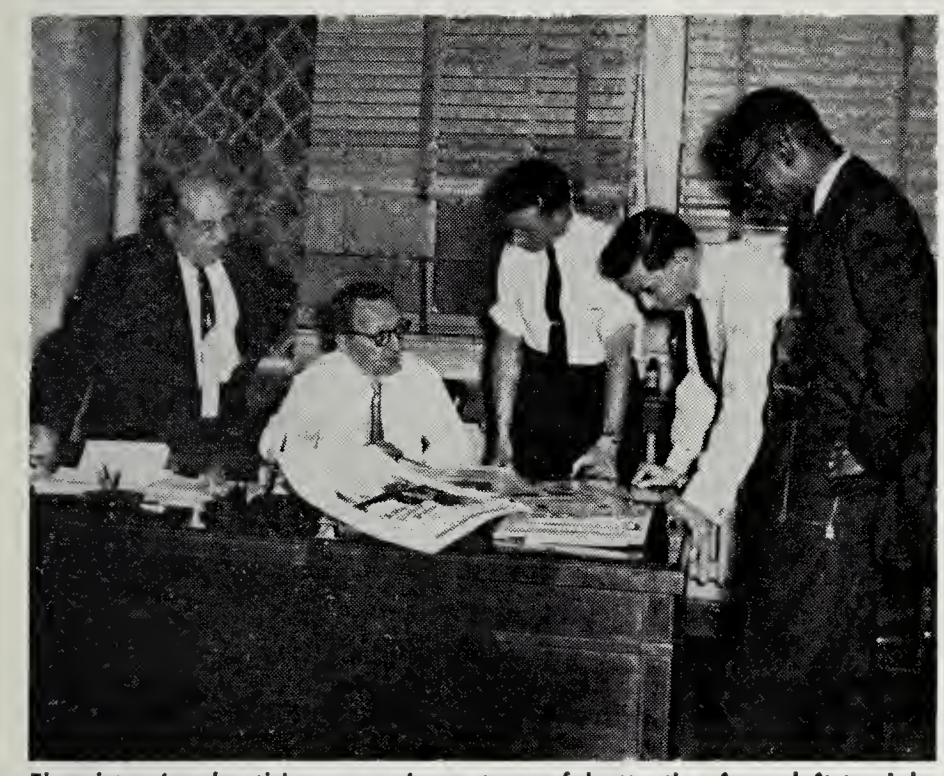
Under the direction of vice-president Charles Einfeld, the company is pulling out all the stops to pre-sell the filmization of Catherine Marshall's best-seller to the widest possible audiences. To this end, $500,000 has been appropriated.

Launched months ago when Samuel G. Engel went into production with a cast headed by Richard Todd and Jean Peters, it is currently reaching a resounding crescendo in all parts of the nation and abroad.

Two-color ads will be featured in the April issues of a brace of leading national magazines. Hitting the news stands in March, insertions were set to appear in the Saturday Evening Post, Life, Look, Redbook, Seventeen, Woman's Home Companion, and Family Weekly. This national campaign is being supplemented with advertisements in Sunday newspaper magazines including This Week, American Weekly, Parade, Pictorial Review and five locally printed newspaper magazine sections in Atlanta, Louisville, Denver, Omaha, and Oklahoma City. Full-page ads in The Christian Herald (two issues), Presbyterian Life (two issues), Christian Advocate, Forth, The Lutheran, and The Club Woman, publication of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, also will spread the word.

A quartet of advance run-of-the-paper teaser ads are being used in daily newspapers in 85 key centers throughout the country in conjunction with page-dominating and full-page insertions keyed to playdates of the film.

Television and radio will supplement the newspaper teaser campaign to blanket the country. Importance of the film for its spiritual as well as entertainment values is underscored by a full-scale campaign launched by the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States and its many affiliated denominational offices. Thousands of leading clergymen, lay church figures and opinion makers will see the picture in more than 60 key cities this week as part of a unique public relations program set by 20th-Fox.



A team of 11 film industry figures, headed by Arthur DeBra, community relations director, Motion Picture Association of America, will cover the 60 cities.

Also in motion in the film's behalf is a comprehensive promotional campaign set by McGraw-Hill, publishers of Mrs. Marshall's celebrated book. A national newspaper advertising campaign and expanded point-of-sale promotion in thousands of department and book stores will create an even larger audience for the film.

"A Man Called Peter" is set to have simultaneous world premieres on March 31 in New York, London, and Glasgow, Scotland.

International promotion is discussed by Leslie F. Whelan, director, advertising and publicity, 20th-Fox International Corporation, and his assistant, Herbert Jaffey. A Glasgow premiere is also set for "A Man Called Peter," as well as one in London.

the Union Internationale de l'Exploitaion Cinematographique in Paris, April 20-22. CEA's general secretary, W. R. Fuller, and treasurer E. J. Hinge will attend this meeting. They have been informed that 20th-Fox CinemaScope subjects were available for showing in America at 1.75 to 1, but not available in the Unitd Kingdom. American exhibitors have been queried about this, but no replys have been received. CEA's delegates to the convention have been instructed to interview MGM, Warners, and 20th-Fox about the situation.

Associated British Pictures Corporation has become the fifth major motion picture company to adopt Perspecta Stereophonic Sound, according to cabled news received from London by Perspecta Sound, Inc., in New York.

Scotland

In tribute to Peter Marshall, who was born and spent his early years here, unprecendented Glasgow civic plans are being formulated for the world premiere of "A Man Called Peter," 20th-Fox's CinemaScope filmization of the famed minister's life story. The event, to take place early in April, will mark the first premiere of any CinemaScope production simultaneous with openings in the United States. In attendance will be a galaxy of dignitaries from the civic, political, social, and business world, and leading clergymen of all faiths. Sir Alexander King, prominent exhibitor and producer, is serving as head of a special premiere committee which is mobilizing citizens from all walks of life to participate in honoring the memory of the native son who rose to international prominence as chaplain of the United States Senate. Special efforts are being made to have Mrs. James Hutton, a sister of Marshall who resides here, her husband, and members of Marshall's family attend the gala invitational event, expected to be one of the most glittering in Glasgow history. Official recognition of the premiere of "A Man Called Peter" is anticipated with a proclamation from the mayor along with a host of other events heralding the picture.

Italian Color Print Problem Reported Solved

NEW YORK—The Italian color printing problem was reported satisfactorily solved last week with the Italian Government agreeing to the release of the import permits which have been witheld under Italian insistence that American companies agree to the turning out of such prints in Italian labs.

The agreement provides that American companies negotiate individually the percentage of color prints to be made in Italy. It was worked out in Paris by G. Griffith Johnson, MPEA vice-president, with Dr. Nicola De Pirro and Dr. Eitel Monaco of Italy.

Military Theatre Plan To Get One-Year Trial

WASHINGTON—Tentative agreement was reached last week between the Defense Department and representatives of exhibition on a one-year trial plan to help small town theatres in the regions of military bases.

The trial plan embodies restricting the showing of pictures at post theatres until 14 days after the local theatre has shown them, provided that the local theatre showed the picture within 30 days after it opened in the key city in the local exchange area. It also provides for relaxation in the rules for admittance to post theatres, allowing families of service men to go to post theatres without being accompanied by the serviceman, and allowing the serviceman to take a limited number of guests with him without the necessity of obtaining the permission of his commanding officer.

Four Navy installations have been added to the list of 95 Army and Air Force post theatres, originally sent to the Defense Department. The agreement would only affect those local theatres in the areas listed.

The areas of agreement will be listed in a "letter of intent," which must then be submitted to the four services and to exhibition and distribution for their approval. It is expected that exhibition and distribution will approve the agreement immediately.

low. 1953 saw the gross receipts split along these lines: French films accounted for 48 per cent, American films for 35 per cent, English films four per cent, Italian films eight per cent, miscellaneous five per cent. 1954 had French films taking in 49 per cent, American films 34 per cent, English product four per cent, Italian films six and one-half per cent, miscellaneous six and one-half per cent.

Pathe has completed one picture in CinemaScope and may make others in that medium depending on the results. They make about 10 pix annually almost all in co-production deals and they are seeking more such deals with companies interested in making films in France. They are also seeking to enlarge their distribution to a world-wide basis instead of merely working locally and would take on American-made films for distribution in France, Belgium, and North Africa. About 100 features have been made in France in 1953-1954, and it looks as though this year will see a similar amount.

Contrary to some belief, it was reported that French producers, who spend on an average of $300,000 per film, can get back their money via distribution in France; but in order to receive a profit, distribution abroad is in order with the best market for French films today being Belgium and Germany. Shooting time has increased and more attention is being paid to quality to please audiences which have become more discriminating. Costs top have risen about 20 per cent.

Television doesn't affect theatre attendance since the number of sets owned by the public is limited, with under 40,000 sets in use today; and they didn't think that the type of competition encountered by American theatres with the medium will ever develop in that country. Exhibitors are utilizing the medium to help sell films in theatres via advertising in the form of trailers.

The average first-run admission price in Paris is about one dollar with half that being asked in the suburbs and included in this rate is a 33 per cent admissions tax. Incidentally, this tax is paid the same day it's collected so the government gets its share right away. About 20 per cent of the French films are classified as "For Adults Only" and adherence is strict with license loss in the offing if the law is broken.

THE METROPOLITAN SCENE: William Moclair, managing director, Roxy, reported that 10,475 employes of the metropolitan motion picture theatres were guests of the theatre in celebration of the 28th anniversary. They were greeted by Gloria Swanson, star of the Roxy's first film "The Loves Of Sonya," who also cut the birthday cake. . . . The March 20th issue of the New York Sunday Mirror magazine section had a two-page spread in the center, plus a cover, on the film "Oklahoma." . . . The March issue of Ladies Home Journal had a full-page four-color tieup ad on "Lady And The Tramp" with Pard's Dog Food. More such are forthcoming in the future with other manufacturers. . . . A special screening of "Man Without A Star" was held for officials of the New York Public library. Star Kirk Douglas does no reading at all in the film, nor does anyone else; but they do a lot of other interesting things. . . . U-I is sending out a pretty slick promotion piece on their two-reel musical "A World Of Beauty." It becomes a one-sheet for lobby or other use. . . . Okeh pressbooks are out on "Three For The Show," "The Long Gray Line," "Tarzan's Human Jungle," and "The End Of The Affair." . . . Gina is coming back to New York, but not in person. Instead, a painted reproduction of a full-length photograph measuring 1,219 square feet was scheduled to rest above the marquee of the Globe to announce the arrival of Lollobrigida's latest film, "The Wayward Wife," an IFE release. That corporation wants it known that, contrary to some customs elsewhere, Gina posed for the picture and that no substitutions were made anywhere in the foto.

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Jack Wodell, manager, Paramount, Denver, recently developed two terrific stunts in connection with the showing of U-I's "The Far Country." One, left, had gold panning on the sidewalk in front of the theatre with the winner getting a free vacation trip to the "far country" where the film was shot; and the other, right, a sourdough pancake baking contest in the foyer with the prizes donated from cooperating merchants and Quaker Oats, which co-sponsored the event. The stunts sure whipped up plenty of attention for the theatre and the film.

Reade Houses Use "Oscar" Contest Stunt

OAKHURST, N. J.—Walter Reade Theatres in Monmouth and Ocean Counties, in New Jersey, have tied in with The Asbury Park Press, a daily newspaper with over 30,000 circulation in the populous North Jersey Shore area, to conduct a contest in which the public has been invited to guess the winners of the forthcoming Academy Awards.

Walter Reade, Jr., circuit president, said that the nine theatres currently operating in the two counties will post $500 in cash prizes to be split among the winners. The contest is the same one that COMPO of Texas has conducted for several years, and now has made available to exhibitors throughout the country.

The Asbury Park Press is running an entry blank daily in which the public will be invited to guess the winners of the best picture, best actor, best actress, best supporting actor, best supporting actress, and best director. Nominations will be sent to the theatres and the theatres will tabulate results daily, so that the paper will carry daily results of the poll right up through the awarding of the Oscars on Wednesday, March 30. The theatres will then pick the winning entries that night so that results will be announced in the paper the next day.

The newspaper has assured full news coverage, including publication of pictures of the contenders and virtual day-by-day stories on the progress of the balloting.

Theatres participating are, in Asbury Park, Mayfair, St. James, Lyric, and Savoy; in Long Branch, Paramount; in Red Bank, Carlton; in Freehold, Strand; in Eatontown, Eatontown Drive-In; in Toms River, the Community. The theatres are running trailers and have large lobby displays promoting the contest.

Reade said that the contest should stimulate tremendous public interest, not only in the movies themselves, but in the Academy Award contest and in pictures in which contenders appear or directed.

NSS Has Easter Ideas

NEW YORK—National Screen Service has issued a booklet packed full of screen and display promotions to bring exhibitors big Easter profits. These range from merchants' Easter screen ads and Easter show trailers to spring fashion show ideas and 40 x 60's on Easter show displays and Easter greeting displays. Also available are go-to-church trailers, and Easter vacation kiddie show trailers. All should prove money-making trailers and displays that can make Easter at the average theatre one of the biggest boxoffice events of the spring season.

Airways Tieup For Guinness

NEW YORK—Alec Guinness in a scene from his first Technicolor comedy, "To Paris With Love," will be featured in a series of full-page ads in connection with a Pan-American World Airways forthcoming travel promotion, it was announced last week by Frank Kassler, president, Continental Distributing, Inc.

The promotion was developed by Miss Jeraldine Cooper, Continental, together with the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency and Pan-American World Airways.

Earl W. Barlow, manager, Alma, Vancouver, B. C., Canada, recently arranged this effective display, featuring two femme members of the staff in appropriate jungle safari costumes, as bally for MGM's "Mogambo." It was mighty cold outside with plenty of snow, so the contrast proved all the more effective.

Bally Variety Is Key For "Purple Plain"

NEW YORK—A solid all-media promotion program combining coloring contests, spectacular street bally, armed forces participation, and a book tie-in has been set in behalf of United Artists' "The Purple Plain," it was announced last week by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation for UA.

Designed to give maximum backing to both key openings and smaller situations, the campaign will be implemented on the local level by United Artists' recently-expanded field staff, in cooperation with participating merchants, newspapers, and distributing organizations.

Pegged on Gregory Peck's starring role as a World War II bomber pilot fighting in a critical Burmese jungle campaign, "The Purple Plain" military exploitation will draw support from Air Force, Army, and Marine Reserve units in colorful salutes to veterans of the China-Burma-India theatre. Parades and lobby presentations honoring decorated heroes of some of the war's most famous Asian actions will highlight openings.

Small fry will be brought into the comprehensive campaign with coloring contests keyed to an outline drawing depicting Peck and Burmese beauty Win Min Than in one of the romantic adventure's action sequences. A special comic-strip serialization of the story will provide five consecutive days of newspaper coverage slanted to both youngsters and adults.

Impressive street bally to hypo round-the-town interest will send massive floats with giant blow-ups of Peck and Win Min Than in advance cruises of shopping districts and suburban areas.

Wide-ranging penetration will come from special displays of the Bantam Book edition of "The Purple Plain." Special aids for the radio-TV program include telops and slides, video featurettes and trailers, and recorded spot announcements, interviews and lobby records.

P. J. Nichols is new owner of the drive-in at Apalacicolo, Fla.

In Nashville, Tenn., a bill now in both Houses of the Legislature and unopposed would authorize county courts to legalize Sunday movies at drive-ins outside incorporated towns or cities. Another measure that would have completely outlawed fireworks in the state has been defeated. Outside of an increase of two to three per cent sales tax on sales over 14 cents, motion pictures have been untouched by adverse legislation at this session.

The Orlando Drive-In, Orlando, Fla., claimed to be the first drive-in to be built in central Florida, is celebrating its 15th anniversary. . . . The Princeton, Princeton, N. C., seemed to have its signals mixed up when it scheduled "Smoke Signal." About an hour before the show started, flames swept the theatre causing damage estimated at $18,000. . . . Lightman, Jr. There will be a remodeling job on the concession stands and some changes in equipment. This will make eight Malco local theatres. . . . The try at single bill features by the suburban houses in Memphis was short-lived. However, Mike Maceri, Zer-Mac Theatres, who has the Lamar, says, "We will continue to show nothing but the finest available films, and for at least two or three more weeks, we will show them on single bills. We've had nothing but favorable comment. People like to come in, see the feature they want to see and get home at a decent hour. And, unless a change is expressed by the patrons, we will not go back to double bills."

Robert F. Blank and G. L. "Jack" Mitchell, owners, Tri-State Theatre Supply Company, have taken to the air to give exhibitor accounts fast service. Recently they installed an electronic direction finder in one of their aircraft. This device is known as the poor man's automatic direction finder inasmuch as it costs less than $200, compared to $1,000 for the ADF.

Claiming an "unlawful combination and conspiracy" under the Sherman and Clayton Anti-Trust Acts, the Arch Street has brought suit in U. S. District Court for $1,000,000 against eight major film distributing corporations. Defendants are Warners, Paramount, Loew's Inc., 20th-Fox, U-A, U-I, and Columbia. Owners of the theatre are Baruch S. LeWitt and Margaret L. Glacken. The plaintiffs claim that since before 1938 the defendants "licensed their films on national or territorial release date availability to the first-run theatres in Hartford affiliated with the defendants Warners, Paramount, and Loew's, and to a theatre controlled by a large independent circuit; and refused to allow them to be exhibited in New Britain until after they had been shown first in said Hartford; and the defendant distributors have licensed their product first-run in New Britain to the said Warner theatres, the Strand, Embassy, and Capitol, with long and unreasonable periods of protection or clearance over second and subsequent runs, including the Arch Street." The defendants allege they receive films after their vaule as public attractions has been substantially impaired and have been compelled to pay excessive and unreasonable prices for features. They also claim the theatre has lost profits and suffered damage to its good-will.

Full House Hears Broidy At AA Lunch, Screening

PHILADELPHIA — Braving an unseasonal snowfall, more than 150 exhibitors from all over the territory responded to an invitation tendered by Allied Artists branch manager Maxwell Gillis and attended an AA screening of "Shotgun" and "An Annapolis Story" and a luncheon at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel.

The luncheon was designed to tell the AA story of forthcoming quality films and dealt with top names in direction, production, and acting. Company president Steve Broidy and Morey "Razz" Goldstein, vice-president, currently on a 14 city tour presenting exhibitors with AA's silver anniversary message, appealed for a theatre investment in playing time for AA films in view of the current product shortage. They were accompanied by John C. Flinn, director of advertising and publicity, and William F. Rodgers, company adviser.

Sam E. Diamond, branch manager, 20th-Fox, and publicist Hal Marshall held a merchandising meeting at the RKO screening room for invited executives, exhibitors, and publicists of the area, at which it was pointed out how they might tie-in with the weekly magazines and the Sunday magazine supplements advance advertising on "A Man Called Peter." Giving details on the tremendous penetration of this type of advertising were representatives from the Saturday Evening Post, Life, Family Magazine, and Parade. It was also explained by Marshall that local screenings of the film were being set up for area Protestant leaders, ministers, and others. One thing those present certainly carried away with them was the scope of this advertising and the number of persons claimed to be reached by each medium.

New Jersey Messenger Service announced that its platform service and garage has now been completely removed from 250 North Juniper Street to 2137 West Jefferson Street. The telephone number is POplar 5-9400. The new office of the company is now at 235 North 13th Street, where the telephone number is LOcust 7-4822.

The unveiling of a stone to mark the grave of Percy Friedman will take place at Mount Sharon Cemetery at 1 p. m. on March 27. Friends are invited to attend.

The Motion Picture Associates held a membership meeting at the RKO Screening Room, at which it was reported $6,000 had been the profit from the recent dinner in honor of Al Boyd, Ben Amsterdam, William C. Hunt, and Abe Sablosky, which was tied in with the dedication of William Goldman's Nickelodeon at the Benjamin Franklin Institute. Honorary life memberships were voted Goldman and Stanley Warner's Lester Krieger for their outstanding efforts in making the affair a success.

Edmund C. Grainger, Republic sales manager, was in for conferences with Norman Silverman, branch manager of the company.

State Rewriting Censorship Law

PHILADELPHIA — It was learned last fortnight that the State administration is preparing to rewrite the 40-year-old motion picture censorship law, declared unconstitutional by the Court of Common Pleas here last September.

Meanwhile, the current status of censorship has been thrown in doubt by the action of the Attorney General's office in consenting to the withdrawal of a supersedeas which prevents the Common Pleas judgment from being enforced.

"In my opinion it leaves the Commonwealth without a censorship law," said Abraham J. Levy, former special deputy Attorney General, who appealed Judge Edwin O. Lewis' ruling last September to the State Supreme Court.

However, Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman, Board of Censors, asserted that "we are going ahead with our duties," and that so far as she was concerned "nothing can be shown without a seal."

The order withdrawing the supersedeas was signed a fortnight ago by Judge Maurice W. Sporkin, after it was agreed to by Mrs. Lois G. Forer, Melrose Park, Pa., a new deputy Attorney General, who replaced Levy as counsel to the board, and Edwin P. Rome, lawyer representing Hallmark Productions, Inc., producers of a film entitled "She Should 'A Said No."

While the supersedeas was withdrawn, the appeal from Judge Lewis' ruling remained on the record, and is now scheduled, after many postponements, to be heard here next month.

Rome said his clients were "anticipating that they would be able to show the film soon," but added it would not be shown without the board's seal of approval. This indicated that he expected Mrs. Carroll to issue a seal, but she insisted firmly, "I did not fight this film to the Supreme Court to issue a seal in the last days."

The film, it is claimed, is a revised edition of a subject outlawed here some five years ago. It deals with the menace of marijuhana and its effect on teenagers.

Meanwhile, Governor George M. Leader has appointed a new Board of Censors, but they do not become official until the nominations are confirmed by the Senate. This has not yet been done. The new scheduled chairman is Mrs. Louis Moses John, West Chester, Pa.

Senator R. D. Fleming, Republican, Allegheny, asked for the recall by the Governor of the three nominations for membership on the State Board of Censors. Recent decisions by the U. S. Supreme Court, Fleming told the Senate, had stripped the board of its powers in deciding which motion pictures should be withheld from the public, and it therefore had no duties. No action was taken.

Dave Brodsky, the theatre decorator, has filed for City Council on the Republican ticket from the Fourth District.

Eastern Pa. Allied Backs Toll-TV Action

PHILADELPHIA — The 17th annual meeting of Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Inc., at the Broadwood Hotel passed a resolution to support the industry action against toll-TV, and devoted the afternoon session to an analysis of the film situation, company by company and picture by picture.

A recent MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR editorial, "A Man With His Hat In His Hand" (issue of March 9), was favorably commented upon.

Sidney E. Samuelson, president of the group, indicated that efforts will be made henceforth to prevent nonmembers from gaining further benefits accruing through Allied's efforts. In other words, an attempt will be made to get rid of the "free riders."

An election of officers was postponed until the next meeting, which has been set to be held at Hershey, Pa., early in June.

Delaware

Dover

A civil rights bill to forbid anyone from barring persons to motion picture houses and other public accommodations because of their race, creed, color, or national origin was introduced in the House by Representative Paul F. Livingston, Democrat. Criminal liability would include a fine of from $100 to $500 or jail up to 90 days. Civil liability to the aggrieved person would include damages up to $1,000 from the violator, plus legal fees of from $50 to $200. Similar measures have been introduced in recent legislative sessions of the General Assembly. Under the existing Delaware law (Title 28, Section 902, Delaware Code of 1953), "the proprietor of a theatre or other public place of amusement is not obliged to receive into his show, or admit into the place where he is pursuing his occupation, any person whose presence there would be offensive to the major part of his spectators or patrons, and thereby injure his business."

Cumberland

Cumberland experienced one of it's largest and most respected funerals when Oscar A. Eyerman was laid to rest. Eyerman, aged 77, practically saw the city "grow-up and become of age." He was, at the time of his retirement in 1947, Chief of Police. Eyerman served in this capacity through both World Wars, three major floods, and numerous big downtown fires. Sympathy is extended to his son George R. Eyerman, Hollywood, Calif., on the technical staff in the laboratories of Republic.

First drive-in oening for the season was the Potomac Drive-In. The operation will not install any of the new processes, according to Paul C. Owens, owner-manager. Owens has contracted, however, to have his Super 40 equipped for both CinemaScope and wide-screen. The Super 40 is located in LaVale, Md.

Board Of Education Raps MGM's "Blackboard"

PHILADELPHIA—It was learned last week that the Board of Education had recommended through Parent Teacher Associations that children be forbidden from seeing MGM's "Blackboard Jungle."

The film, which the Board claims defeats its purpose in exposing juvenile delinquency in the schools by vividly illustrating how acts in this category may be consummated, has been passed by the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors and bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

MGM's local public relations man, Ed Gallner, stated that although invited to a screening, the local police heads had refused to look at the picture, although, he added, they should be interested in the matter through their own efforts in curbing juvenile delinquency through the Police Athletic League and the recent curfew for teen-agers which has been in force in the city for the past month after its passage by City Council. Gallner added that City Council members had also been invited to a screening of the film, as well as local Catholic organizations, and others interested in the juvenile delinquency problem. Despite the controversy, the film opened as scheduled at the Arcadia with a preview on March 22, and on a regular showing basis on March 23.

Trenton

Featuring a giant new CinemaScope screen and extensive remodeling, Walter Reade Theatres' Lawrence Drive-In, on Brunswick Pike two miles north of here, will reopen for the sixth season on March 25. The new screen will enable the drive-in to present all attractions in the wide aspects. It will be over 100 feet in width and one of the largest in the east. Completely new projection machines have been installed and the sound system, carried into each car by individual speakers, has also been refurbished and modernized. The first drive-in in Mercer County, the spot will reopen with a special celebration which will include corsages for the ladies, boutonniers for men, balloons for children, and free popcorn to all. Additional playground equipment has also been ordered and the animal zoo, which was such a favorite last year, will again be open. Walter Reade's second drive-in in the area, the Trenton Drive-In, located on Route 130, between Robbinsville and Yardville, N. J., will reopen on April 8. The Reade organization will operate a total of eight drive-ins this season in addition to more than 30 conventional theatres and including a new drive-in, the 1,000 car Absecon Drive-In, near Atlantic City, which is scheduled to open on Decoration Day.

The State Internal Affairs Department reports 390 municipalities in 54 counties are levying an amusement tax under the so-called tax-anything law. While many exhibitors claim the tax is a burden and has driven some marginal operators out of business, it means an annual total income of more than $4,000,000 to the communities. Pittsburgh reports it collected more than a million dollars in 1953 via a 10 percent levy. The department says the 1947 tax is most popular in Allegheny and Luzerne counties. Thirty-eight municipalities in each have imposed the measure. Other counties where many communities are levying the tax are Schuylkill, Washington, Westmoreland, Montgomery, York, Berks, Bucks, Beaver, Cambria, Dauphin, and Delaware. The maximum 10 per cent rate is used by 236 of the 390 local governments employing the tax, according to the department.

A bill to limit the exhibition of a first-run film to no more than six weeks in one theatre was introduced in the Pennsylvania State Legislature. The bill was sponsored in the House of Representatives by Vincent F. Scarcelli and Louis J. Amarande, Philadelphia Democrats. It would affect only Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The bill provides a fine of $50 for each day a picture is held over six weeks.

Earl Fitlinger, formerly with Loew's here and in Wilmington, Del., is now assistant at the Embassy.

Paul E. Glase, manager, Embassy, and owner of the Glase theatrical library, received a letter from a friend, reviving the controversy of more than 30 years ago as to Sarah Bernhardt's birthplace. The letter asserted that old newspaper records say the French actress was born in Emaus, later called Emmaus, Lehigh County, near Allentown, Pa., going to France in the early 60's. Glase points out that Bernhardt's family name was Bernhard and that it would have been next to impossible for her to have been born in America, when she made her stage debut in Paris at a very early age, after well-authenticated records of schooling in Paris.

Dr. Robert Braun, Pottsville Third Brigade Band organizer and director, died after a stroke. Scranton

Invitations have been issued to the forthcoming wedding of Miss Phyllis Woloszyn, daughter of Mrs. Elias Woloszyn, to Edward J. Karpinski, this city, to be held April 23 in St. Peter's and Paul's Church, West Scranton. Miss Woloszyn, who for the past few years has been secretary to Tom Jones, Paramount city manager, here, has been feted at several parties and showers including a buffet supper party at the Blue Lantern Restaurant recently tendered the bride-elect by her co-workers. Miss Peggy Connolly and Miss Jean Dick, both of the Strand, were in charge of arrangements. Miss Connolly, who will be replaced by Angela Scaramuso, is scheduled to succeed Miss Woloszyn as secretary to Jones.

Two special screenings of "Gangbusters," set for opening at the Strand, were held for area policemen, FBI men, state troopers, plainclothesmen, detectives, etc., as announced by manager Tom Jones. Both WGBI radio and television are saturated with spot announcements on the film which promises to be successful if pre-release enthusiasm can be used as a barometer. A special citation will be given over WGBI-TV to Scranton Chief of Police Leo Ruddy in appreciation and recognition of an outstanding police force as a tie-in with the film.

Mike Suppy, Capitol, a one time prize fighter known professionally as Mickey Chapin, observed his 50th birthday when he was host at dinner to a few co-workers and friends in the Blue Lantern Restaurant. Climaxing his day, Suppy was a guest on WGBI-TV when he was queried by sportscaster Hoppy Scanlon. Suppy retired from the ring in 1926 and has been associated with the Comerford organization for the past several years.

Harry Spiegel, Comerford advertising department, was toastmaster at a Purim dinner at Congreation B'nai Israel in observance of the tercentenary of Jews in the United States. . . . Bob Murrin, former assistant manager, Comerford, has joined the staff of WGBI radio where he is to become a special services representative. . . . A nephew of Scranton's Mayor Hanlon, Corporal Tom Hanlon, formerly of the Comerford, who has recently been transferred from Fort Dix, N. J., to Fort Slocum, New York, where he is attending a special service school, was a visitor to this city. . . . Bob Thompson, a native of England, and Comerford auditor, proudly became a citizen of the United States in the court of Federal Judge John W. Murphy.

The Oak Hill Drive-In opened with "Bridges at Toko-Ri" as the initial attraction. The Oak Hill Amusement Company has installed the huge CinemaScope screen and is reputed to be the first drive-in in the area to purchase the Koll Morgan lens. During the past winter season several electric in-car heaters have been installed in an experiment to equip the drive-in for next winter. . . . A new policy has been adopted where family films will be shown, and children to 14 will be permitted entrance free.

Dial Red O (5509)

MELODRAMA
62M.

ESTIMATE: Okeh lower half entry.

CAST: Bill Elliott, Keith Larsen, Helene Stanley, Paul Picerni, Jack Kruschen, Elaine Riley, Robert Bice, Rick Vallin, George Eldredge, John Phillips, Regina Gleason. Produced by Vincent M. Fennelly; written and directed by Daniel B. Ullman.

STORY: Veteran Keith Larsen escapes from a hospital where he is undergoing pyschiatric observation to try and see his wife, Helene Stanley, who has notified him that she is divorcing him. His escape is noted by the police who seek him, bearing in mind that he could turn violent. The Stanley apartment comes under the jurisdiction of Bill Elliott. She is out with Paul Picerni, ex-service buddy of Larsen's, with whom she has been having an affair, and when they return, she tells him the divorce is final and that she can now wed him, especially since she is going to have his baby. When he refuses to divorce his wife, she threatens to expose him in the papers, etc., and he kills her using judo. He tries to set up an alibi at his office and implicates Larsen, who drops in to chat. Larsen is picked up and jailed on suspicion. From the way she was killed, Larsen deduces that Picerni is the killer and escapes from jail while Elliott, too, finds several clues that point to Picerni. He arrives in time to prevent Larsen from killing Picerni.

X-RAY: A well-made little film following a logical pattern and yarn that is interesting throughout, this entry presents Bill Elliott in a switch from westerns and he does fine. The cast is good and the direction and production are in the smart and efficient category. It should make a neat addition to the program. Maximum aspect ratio: 1.85-1.

AD LINES: "In Emergencies . . . 'Dial Red O'"; "It's Murder Any Way You Look At It"; "A Psycho Who Could Turn Killer Is On The Loose And Citizens Who Spot Him Are Urged To 'Dial Red O'."

Seven Angry Men (5511)

90M.

ESTIMATE: Names and angles will help well-made entry.

CAST: Raymond Massey, Debra Paget, Jeffrey Hunter, Larry Pennell, Leo Gordon, John Smith, James Best, Dennis Weaver, Guy Williams, Tom Irish, James Anderson, James Edwards, John Pickard, Smoki Whitfield, Jack Lomas, Robert Simon, Dabbs Greer, Ann Tyrrell, Robert Osterloh. Produced by Vincent M. Fennelly; directed by Charles Marquis Warren.

STORY: In the days when Kansas was tottering between becoming a slave state or a free state, Raymond Massey, as fanatical John Brown, gathers his sons Dennis Weaver, John Smith, Guy Williams, James Best, Larry Pennell, and Jeffrey Hunter. The latter falls in love with Debra Paget, daughter of a shopkeeper in town. A raid by the slave supporters on the town as a warning to Massey to desist in his efforts to free slaves, and Paget's father is among those killed while many homes are burned. Massey leads a retaliation raid. The slave supporters, led by Reverend Leo Gordon, kill Smith, in cold blood. Fed up with the bloodshed, sons James Best and Dennis Weaver leave and later are joined by Pennell and Williams. Massey is left with Hunter, who finally marries Paget, who disapproves of Massey's methods. Kansas votes to be free and Massey returns to his home in Ohio. He gets fresh funds for his crusade, and with Hunter and the youngest brother, Tom Irish, they go to Harper's Ferry, Virgnia, where they store arms and make plans for a revolt of the slaves and a decisive battle with federal troops. On the designated day, no slaves appear to be freed, and Massey and a few followers try to take the town and the government arsenal but are trapped and quickly brought in under arrest by the soldiers. Hunter, elsewhere, sees the scheme falling apart and is persuaded to go home to Paget. Massey is arrested and sentenced to be hung.

X-RAY: A highly dramatic entry is this tale of a fanatic, John Brown, and the result is an interesting film slightly offbeat. The story of John Brown has been related many times and has even been sung about with the result that the film may prove quite an attraction to many types of audiences. The drama is intense, earnest, grim, and sometimes violent, and the characterizations are ably handled by the cast as a whole and particularly by Raymond Massey, who makes Brown live. The direction and production are good. This can play in either standard houses or art and specialty spots with the proper selling. The story and screen play are by Daniel B. Ullman, and there is no lightness or comedy relief. Maximum aspect ratio: 1.85-1.

TIP ON BIDDING: Rates depend on situation.

AD LINES: "The Story Of John Brown . . . Man With A Crusade"; "A Thrill-packed Page Torn From History"; "It's Been Told In Books And On The Stage . . . Now For The First Time See The True Story Of John Brown Told On The Screen."

(Technicolor)

WESTERN
87M.

ESTIMATE: Better than average western.

CAST: Randolph Scott, Forrest Tucker, Mala Powers, J. Carrol Naish, Edgar Buchanan, Kenneth Tobey, Howard Petrie, Myron Healey, Ralph Moody, James Hayward, Guy Prescott, Mike Ragan, Phil Chambers, Richard Garland. Produced by Nat Holt; directed by Tim Whelan.

STORY: Outlaw brothers Forrest Tucker, J. Carrol Naish, and Myron Healey are caught while attempting a surprise robbery on a bank and one brother, Richard Garland, is killed. When they return to their hideout they learn that detective agent James Hayward, posing as a bartender, had passed on their plans, and the outlaws eliminate him. Randolph Scott and Kenneth Tobey are named to infiltrate the gang, by having the outlaws think that they are also outlaws. A fake train robbery is staged, and word gets around that Scott did the job. This results in Scott being asked to join the gang by the crooked law officers headed by Judge Edgar Buchanan. He agrees and goes along to a minor robbery. Mala Powers, sister of the outlaws, meets Scott and a budding romance ensues. She quickly rejects him when she discovers that he has joined her brothers in their criminal activities. Time passes and Scott completely convinces the other gang members that he is one of them. He then reveals a plan to rob another train. Members of the law swoop down and do battle with the outlaws. Most of the gang are killed with the brothers being taken prisoners. The townspeople, determined that justice will be done, organize a lynching party for the imprisoned criminals. Scott tries to intervene, but his attempts are in vain. With law once again restored and Scott's true detective identity revealed. Powers returns to the hero.

X-RAY: A good western, this should appeal to the action-fans, with the Scott name being as good a draw as ever. The film contains the usual supply of gunplay and fisticuffs, and performances, production, and direction fall into the good category. The screen play is by Horace McCoy and it holds interest on high pretty much throughout.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

Yellowneck

MELODRAMA
83M.

(Trucolor)

ESTIMATE: Okeh for the lower half.

CAST: Lin McCarthy, Stephen Courtleigh, Berry Kroeger, Harold Gordon, Bill Mason. Produced by Harlow G. Frederick; directed by R. John Hugh. An Empire Studios production.

STORY: During the end of the Civil War, Colonel Stephen Courtleigh, Sergeant Lin McCarthy, and young Bill Mason, who idolizes and follows McCarthy into disgrace, become "Yellownecks" or deserters. They are joined by crook Berry Kroeger and his English pal, Harold Gordon, interested only in killing Kroeger to get the money he has stolen from an army paymaster. They expect to meet a Seminole half-breed guide, who will lead them through the Everglades to the sea, where a boat is to meet them and permit their escape to Cuba. The guide is delivered to them dead, and the men are faced with the problem of fighting their way out of the jungles. Beset by storms, unfriendly Seminoles, and eventually defeated by personal fears, the men, one by one, meet a defeat worse than the one from which they are fleeing. One is shot by a Seminole arrow, another is attacked by a rattlesnake; another is killed by an alligator; and a fourth perishes in a quicksand. Mason, the only survivor, finally realizes that survival depends upon standing and facing whatever comes rather than running away.

X-RAY: This lower half meller with a cast of unknowns is pretty repetitious with the long, long walk getting monotonous between thrilling death sequences, particularly that of the rattler attacking a man. The photography and color are good. The films "message" is obscure. Screen play is by Nat S. Linden, with original story and dialogue by R. John Hugh. The film was actually filmed in the Florida Everglades. There are no women in the cast.

AD LINES: "Yellownecks—Cursed Term For Confederate Army Deserters"; "Actually Filmed In The Florida Everglades In Beautiful Trucolor"; "Thrills And Action Such As You Never Saw Before."

(Joyce-Werker)

ESTIMATE: Okeh programmer.

CAST: Richard Basehart, Phyllis Kirk, Stephen Elliot, Russell Collins, Charles Waggenheim, Richard Hale, Alan Wells, Tommy Cook, William Pullen. Produced by William Joyce; directed by Al Werker.

STORY: Mountain sections of the west are being combed by prospectors seeking uranium and one such is Richard Basehart, who is approached by prosperous Stephen Elliot and offered a partnership deal if he stakes him to supplies and equipment. Basehart turns him down. Basehart does, however, listen to a deal from professor Russell Collins who wants to hire him as a guide. Daughter Phyllis Kirk goes along and they dislike each other. Collins is forced to return because of an injury but agrees to let Basehart use the equipment and supplies on a partnership basis. Kirk insists on going along. Another member is Alan Wells, Navajo Indian friend of Basehart. Elliot hires unscrupulous prospector Charles Waggenheim to follow them. They strike it rich after some searching, and Waggenheim kills Wells who was heading towards town with the samples and traps Basehart and Kirk in the cave after wounding Kirk. Basehart escapes and goes for help. Waggenheim reaches town, informs Elliot, and they return to make sure there are no survivors. The father and brother of Wells track them down when his horse returns. They kill Waggenheim and Basehart kills Elliot.

X-RAY: Using a different theme and locale this entry emerges as an interesting one for the program. The cast is good, as is the direction and production, while a duel between a man on the ground and a flying helicopter is a different twist. The original story and screen play are by Emmett Murphy and Leonard Heideman. Maximum aspect ratio: 1.75-1.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "There's Millions In Uranium To Be Found In The Mountains Of The West But Back Up Your Claim With A Ready Gun"; "An Action-Packed Story Of The Modern West"; "A Duel Between A Roaring Helicopter And An Armed Man On The Ground Is Just One Of The Many Thrills To Be Found In This Tale Of The New West."

ESTIMATE: Okeh programmer.

CAST: Broderick Crawford, Ralph Meeker, Reed Hadley, Randy Farr, William Talman, Lon Chaney, Charles Bronson, Peter Vetrian, Roy Roberts, Willis B. Bouchey. Produced by Aubrey Schenck; directed by Howard Koch.

STORY: At a camp for boys, Peter Vetrian runs away when nurse Randy Farr wants to give him an injection to ease an asthma attack, and the rangers of the National Park in Colorado are called out in the search. He is found by Ralph Meeker, who offers to take him to his father. The lad's father, Willis Bouchey, receives a call from Meeker demanding $200,000, which he pays and which Meeker buries. The boy falls from the tower, and Meeker makes sure he is dead by dropping him off a cliff. The FBI is summoned, and a search is set up. Meeker is caught with some of the money and insists he had nothing to do with the child but just took advantage of the situation to ask for the money. He is convicted of extortion and sent to prison for five years. Broderick Crawford is boss among the convicts, and associated with him are Lon Chaney, Charles Bronson, and William Talman, who are planning an escape. Farr is questioned by FBI agent Reed Hadley and she confesses she was in league with Meeker. Before Meeker can be re-arrested for kidnapping, he is forced into the prison break by Crawford and the others, who plan on sharing his loot. One of the crooks is killed and Meeker's things planted on him to throw police off the trail. It doesn't work, and a gun battle results with most of the crooks killed. Farr gets a prison term for her part. The boy's body is never recovered.

X-RAY: Interest runs pretty much on high throughout this meller, which has a number of unpleasant situations such as the death of the youngster, unwarranted killings by the gangsters, etc. The cast is good and the direction and production are efficient. The settings and surroundings in the Colorado National Park are pleasing. It should do okeh as part of the program, and with a little selling could possibly emerge better than average. The screen play is by John C. Higgins. Maximum aspect ratio: 1.85-1.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "He Wanted $200,000 Or Else . . . "; "He Eluded Police But Couldn't Escape His Own Kind"; "The Men At The Big House Had A Way Of Taking Care Of Kidnappers; Don't Miss The Thrill-Packed Result."

Cult Of The Cobra (523)

MELODRAMA
82M.

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory horror show for the program.

CAST: Faith Domergue, Richard Long, Marshall Thompson, Kathleen Hughes, Jack Kelly, Myrna Hansen, David Janssen, William Reynolds, James Dobson, Leonard Strong, Walter Coy. Produced by Howard Pine; directed by Francis D. Lyon.

STORY: Back in 1945, six GI's about to leave Asia, sneak into a temple where secret rites are conducted by a cult who worship cobras and who believe snakes can change into human beings and vice versa. James Dobson takes a flash picture, and he and the others are forced to run for their lives amid a threat to kill them all one by one. Dobson is struck by a snake and while in the hospital recuperating is struck again and dies. Richard Long, Marshall Thompson, William Reynolds, David Janssen, and Jack Kelly return home. Kathleen Hughes, an actress, who both Long and Thompson love, announces her choice to be Long. Thompson finds solace with Faith Domergue who moves in across the hall. Janssen dies when a cobra strikes him while he's driving. Kelly is next and he falls from his apartment window. Long and Reynolds are suspicious of Domergue. Reynolds accuses her and is found dead of snake bite. Long tells his suspicions to the police while Domergue and Thompson, who refuses to believe ill of her, go to the theatre for the opening of Hughes' new show. Domergue tries to kill Hughes as a snake and Thompson arrives in time to rescue her and force the snake out the window. The body of Domergue is found below by Long and the police.

X-RAY: There's enough horror, mysterious atmosphere, etc., to give some audiences thrills and chills. The story is interesting enough for its type, and the cast, direction, and production are efficient. The screen play is by Jerry Davis, Cecil Maiden, and Richard Vollins, based on a story by Davis.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates:

AD LINES: "The Cobra Strikes And Four Ex-GI's Are Dead"; "Mystery. . . . Danger . . . Murder . . . A Look Into The Great Unknown"; "Was She Snake Or Woman? Could He Touch Kill? The Secrets Of The 'Cult Of The Cobra' Revealed At Last."

Revenge Of The Creature (3-D—521) (2-D—522)

82M.

ESTIMATE: Meller has angles, especially in 3-D.

CAST: John Agar, Lori Nelson, John Bromfield, Robert B. Williams, Nestor Paiva, Grandon Rhodes, Dave Willock, Charles Cane. Produced by William Alland; directed by Jack Arnold.

STORY: Robert B. Williams and John Bromfield of an oceanarium in Florida head an exhibition to the Amazon to capture a creature, part fish and part man. They return with him to Ocean Harbor. Scientist John Agar and science student Lori Nelson are among those who turn up to study the creature. Their working together brings on romance, and the creature seems strangely attracted to Nelson. He manages to free himself from his underwater chains and escapes. Agar and Nelson go by launch up the river to Jacksonville, with the creature following. At a hotel dance, he makes an appearance and kidnaps Nelson. A search is started and they spot him with Nelson. When he puts her down a hail of bullets seem to hit him and he disappears underwater. Nelson and Agar are reunited and things look brighter for the future.

X-RAY: Youngsters and meller fans who appreciate this type of fare should be entertained by the proceedings, and if there is a desire to show this in 3-dimensional form, it can be had in that medium. There are no outstanding gimmicks that necessarily demand the medium but it's available for additional thrills. The story is fairly routine but interesting enough, and the cast, direction, and production are about average. It can receive an assist from its predecessor, "Creature From The Black Lagoon," and where that played well, this should receive similar reaction. There could be another sequel should there be a demand. The film should make up well as part of the program in most situations. Martin Berkeley wrote the screen play, based on a story by William Alland.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

AD LINES: "The Creature Strikes Again"; "Terror Stalks The Florida Countryside As The Creature Breaks Loose Seeking Revenge"; "Thrills . . . Chills . . . As The 'Creature From The Black Lagoon' Strikes Terror Throughout The Countryside."

MELODRAMA

(Filmakers)

ESTIMATE: Prison-break meller sustains interest.

CAST: William Bendix, Arthur Kennedy, Luther Adler, William Talman, Gene Evans, Marshall Thompson, Beverly Michaels, Gloria Talbot, Adam Williams, Percy Helton, Melinda Markey, Chris Olsen, Adele St. Maur, Edward Clark, Tom Dugan, Morris Ankrum. Produced by Hal E. Chester; directed by Lewis R. Foster.

STORY: Convicts William Bendix, Arthur Kennedy, Luther Adler, William Talman, Gene Evans, and Marshall Thompson make good their escape and hide out in a cave, where Bendix, although wounded, takes leadership, promising to split a cache of hidden money. A doctor is lured to the cave to treat Bendix, who orders Talman to kill him, but Arthur Kennedy insists no action be taken without consent of all. They next ditch the doctor's car, hold up a roadhouse for food and clothing, steal another car, and Talman runs over a state trooper. The officer shoots Adler as the rest speed off. A roadblock forces them to abandon the car, and they board a train, where Thompson gets friendly with Gloria Talbot and decides to get off at her stop. At a signal from Bendix, Talman puts a knife in his back. The remaining four take over a farmhouse, where Beverly Michaels sees something fine in Kennedy, knowing he is an escaped convict. Adam Williams, a neighbor, is taken as a hostage as the convicts plan a getaway in Michaels' truck. He hurls an oil lamp that makes Evans a human torch. Bendix, Kennedy and Talman flee again, and a blizzard is encountered on the way to Bendix's hidden cache. Bendix urges Talman to kill Kennedy so there will be only a two-way split; but Talman turns on Bendix, who shoots him. At the hiding place, Kennedy digs up the cash box and Bendix fires at him point blank, but the revolver is empty. They grapple and Bendix beats Kennedy in a fight, but perishes in the storm. Kennedy trudges across the snow, past Bendix's frozen body, as police await his descent.

X-RAY: This has William Bendix at his best as the killer leader of a prison escape group. There are daring exploits, tense situations, rugged fights, intrigue, and even romance, all the way. The film maintains a rapid pace and sustains interest. This was written for the screen by Hal E. Chester and Lewis R. Foster.

AD LINES: "The Desperate Cry Of Caged Men Who Go Over The Wall!"; "The Rock 'Em, Sock 'Em, Blood And Guts Story Of Killers On A Rampage"; "Killers On A Furlough From Hell."

Death Tide

MELODRAMA
69M.

(Beverly)

ESTIMATE: For the lower half.

CAST: Ken Buckridge, Frank Silvera, Jean Alexander, Betsy Palmer, Lisa Loughlin, Marvin Grieve. Produced by Charles Vetter and Marvin Grieve; directed by Victor Komow. A Perigord Pictures, Inc., production.

STORY: Photographer Ken Buckridge and his wife, Jean Alexander, poke their noses into the diamond smuggling activities of Frank Silvera and his henchmen. Before Silvera and several of the other baddies are killed, accidentally and otherwise, the escapes of Buckridge and Alexander are quite harrowing. However, they manage to collect the diamonds and get the reward money, and after paying their income tax, buy themselves a boat for a leisurely journey to South America.

X-RAY: This action meller written by Komow, who also was photographer and director, and Vetter, one of the producers, seems amateurishly done and is headed for the duallers. The film, for the most part, was filmed on the New York waterfront and the photography is okeh, although there are plenty of dark nighttime stretches. There are no marquee names in the cast, although the performers do their hectic bits adequately.

AD LINES: "Million Dollar Gem Smugglers In Action"; "Violence And Thrills High Point 'Death Tide'"; "Actually Filmed On The New York Waterfront."

BIG TOP CARAVAN. RKO—Pathe Special. 16m. Shown is the story of a French circus setting up the show in a different town or city each day. Circus life involves back-breaking work, tremendous detail, and a matter of every-day logistics as the show is set up or moves on from the daily stand. FAIR. (53105).

ONE REEL

Color Cartoon

BACK ALLEY OPROAR. Warners Blue Ribbon Hit Parades. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of March, 1948, it was said: "As Porky Pig is climbing into bed in preparation for a restful night, he is interrupted by an alley cat in the midst of a rendition of "Figaro." Porky throws everything but the kitchen sink at the pesty cat, but the later keeps turning up. The cat out-thinks Porky at every turn, until the pig blows them both up with dynamite, only to find that he is still annoyed in heaven. FAIR." (2306).

CONTRASTS IN RHYTHM. RKO—Walt Disney Cartoon Reissues. 8m. Edited from the Disney feature, "Melody Time," reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of 1948, this is in two parts. The first, "Bumble Boogie," is a visualization of a bee's nightmare. The musical number, "Bumble Boogie," is an adaptation of the classic "Flight Of The Bumblebee" by Rimsky-Korsakoff. The instrumental is by Freddie Martin and his Orchestra. The second part is "Trees," Joyce Kilmer's poem set to music by Oscar Rasbach and poetically interpreted in motion and color, the accompanists being Fred Waring and his orchestra and choristers. The animation carries a great oak tree through various seasons of the year. GOOD." (54106).

LAKE TITICACA. RKO—Walt Disney Cartoon Reissues. 7m. Edited from the Disney feature "Saludos Amigos," reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of 1942, this has Donald Duck, a tourist in the Andes Mountains. He succumbs to altitude fever, takes off in a boat and gets a dunking in the lake when it disintegrates. Next, Donald rides a llama through the mountains. He tries to cross a narrow bridge, which falls apart, landing him in the waters below. EXCELLENT. (54105).

THE PELICAN AND THE SNIPE. RKO—Walt Disney Cartoon Reissues. 9m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of January, 1944, it was said: "Monte, the pelican, and Vedio, the snipe, live atop a lighthouse in Uruguay. The pelican is a sleepwalker that the snipe protects to the extent that he loses so much sleep he is dopey all day. Seeking a device to prevent the pelican's nocturnal wanderings, the snipe decides upon a heavy anchor. Next night, the pelican promptly does a nose dive to the bottom of the sea. Angered, he breaks off with the snipe, who leaves broken hearted. Next night, the pelican, again sleep-flying, imagines himself a plane, and is caught in a dive bombing practice raid by real planes. He sees the snipe sleeping upon the target, saves him from a direct hit, and they again become pals atop the lighthouse. This is not very funny. The off-screen voice explaining the fable is that of Sterling Halloway. FAIR." (54104).

NATURE'S SHOWCASE. RKO—Pathe Screenliner. 8m. Interior scenes of the American Museum of Natural History in New York are shown. Display cases containing reconstructed outdoor life can be seen, as well as skeletons of dinosaurs and other prehistoric animals. We are taken to the museum's research division and on archeaological field expenditions. The Hayden Planetarium is viewed at one of its wonderous star shows. FAIR. (54207).

Sports

CHAMOIS HUNT. RKO—Pathe Sportscope. 8m. The film takes us on a chamois hunt in the Tyrolian Alps. The animal is sighted, browsing on its craggy habitat and the hunt is on. The animal moves higher and higher ahead of the stalking hunters but is finally brought down by a gun with a telescopic sight. FAIR. (54307).

HERE'S HOCKEY. RKO—Pathe Sportscope. 10m. The film tells the story of Canadian hockey, from the community rinks to the major league tournaments. Scenes are shown of a NHL game between the Detroit Red Wings and the Montreal Canadians. Small-town hockey is filmed during a league playoff game between Smith Falls and Thurso. GOOD. (54308).

"PRODIGAL" SHOWMANSHIP

BIG PROMOTION THAT SELLS M-G-M's GIANT SHOW

Sneak Previews in San Francisco and Berkeley, California, gave audiences the first viewing of M-G-M's mighty attraction. From the enthusiastic reaction in both cities it is obvious that this tremendous show which was two years in the filming and which cost a fortune to produce is destined to be a field day for showmen and public alike. M-G-M has used every resource of promotional showmanship to launch it with the bigness it inspires.

ARMOUR'S BIG $100,000 PRIZE TIE-UP

One of the most extensive publicity tie-ups in film history. $100,000 Prize Contest. 50,000 Special Kits for Armour & Company dealers spanning the nation. Kits contain special 1-sheet for window display, streamers, data on contest. The First Prize, a completely equipped home, will be shown for 17 days on NBC-TV's "Home Show." Six Dodge cars for weekly prizes offer continuous Dodge dealer tie-ups. Contest advertised in Life and many other top circulation publications, as well as on TV and radio and in newspaper co-op ads locally. 3,000 Armour field men will cooperate with theatres in promotion. Many other angles are described in "Prodigal" press-book.

LEFT: This gorgeous painting is seen on posters, lobby murals, in ads, and many other selling aids.

LIFE-SIZE LANA TURNER CUT-OUT

Seldom such an opportunity for cut-out in lobby or other tie-ups as this eye-catching life-size Lana Turner photo in the much discussed bead costume.

ADVANCE VISUAL SELLING

M-G-M sent special "Color Photo-Viewers" to 300 newspaper contacts and 300 TV outlets together with sets of color slides to acquaint the nation's best publicity sources with the magnitude of the attraction and the exotic appearance of Lana Turner. Additional slides are being sent to maintain the interest.

TEASER 1-SHEETS MONTHS AHEAD

In many lobbies throughout America a special 1-sheet has carried the message: "1955 Is The Year of 'The Prodigal'."

LUX NATIONAL CAMPAIGN

A Lux tie-up with "The Prodigal" is carried to millions of homes by way of full page ads in the four big Sunday Magazine Supplements, This Week, Pictorial Review, American Weekly and Parade.

GENERAL MILLS 250,000 PACKAGES

Enclosed in 250,000 Kix Cereal boxes is a "Prodigal" tie-up sponsored by General Mills.

LUSTRE CREAM IN NATIONAL MAGAZINES

Full page ads in Life and 19 leading national publications give terrific circulation to "Prodigal" in the Lustre Cream tie-up.

COSTUME TEASER FOR EDITORS

One of many space-getters in newspapers was sending one bead from Lana Turner's costume in a small box to editors from Coast to Coast.

"HUMAN WHEEL OF FORTUNE" FLOAT

One of the most unusual and most expensive travelling promotions ever to attract the throngs is the M-G-M float "Wheel of Fortune" with its beautiful girls. Inspired by the exciting episode from the picture, it will cover 35 to 40 key cities of America, disseminating its publicity in wide circles therefrom.

MEMBER AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

VOLUME 53 NUMBER 22

CURIOUSER . . . AND CURIOUSER!

FROM CANAAN, N. H., comes a most unusual, and seemingly crack-brained, approach to movie advertising. A theatre that shall remain nameless hit the local newspaper with the following copy: "Kerima, the She-Wolf . . . This is not a condemned picture . . . but we do not recommend it for we think it is one of the most sinful pictures ever made, . . . and are only showing it because of popular demand."

Shades of Barnum!

But we don't think the great showman would ever have "talked down" his freaks. His were sins of exaggeration.

We wonder if even "popnlar demand" persisted in the face of such underselling.

BACK IN JANUARY, 1950, on page 2785 of our "pink" Servisection, we reviewed an "Okeh outdoor entry for juvenile action spots" titled "Davy Crockett, Indian Scout," and distributed at the time by United Artists.

We can understand that stories about the great Davy are in the pnblic domain; and that following the Walt Disney three time televising of "Davy Crockett," and the Hit-Parade achievement of Disney's song accompaniment, anyone is entitled to reissue such Davy pictures as they own. Disney himself has announced that he intends to edit the three television shows into a movie feature, and he is entitled to do that, too! But for anyone, either exhibitor or distributor, to palm off that five year old picture as the television sueeess by doubling it with a bundle of Disney shorts put together and sold by RKO as "Disneyrama," is just plain snbterfuge and misrepresentation in advertising.

And this is what has happened—and is happening!

We don't believe that RKO is involved or has fostered the idea in any way. We know that United Artists reached the end of their distribution period many months ago and is completely clear. But there are some "fast buck" boys who, in their advertising and in their sales efforts, advocate that there is plenty of money to be made through sneh a double bill and such an association of titles.

Maybe there is. But there is plenty of trouble also in such misrepresentation.

Critics of this industry have always pointed to the exaggerations and misrepresentations in its advertising as signs of its kinship to the outdoor carnival and the circus. As permanent rather than transient enterprises we have tried hard to live down and correct this impression. Right now the public is sympathetic to us because of the new techniques and better entertainment values. Will they remain sympathetie after they have bought a tieket expecting to see one thing—and find that they are seeing another?

To legitimately book "Davy Crockett, Indian Scout" at this time may be smart showmanship; but, oddly enough, one of the biggest circnits that should know better was first and foremost in dropping those words, "Indian Scout," to a size that strained the eyesight, and in placing "Disneyrama" just as close as possible to "Davy Croekett." We wonder if their auditors won't find that they paid less for this pieture five years ago when it was new than they have now when it is possible to gyp the public with a "gimmick"?

Crime may not pay—but it probably increases the price!

TRY THIS ON FOR SIZE

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE to operate a theatre in Reading, Pennsylvania, pay relatively high real estate taxes, and collect Uncle Sam's 10 per eent and a local city 10 per cent from every patron that crosses the threshold—while dozens of vacant stores, lodge halls, veterans posts, and fire houses in the city and for miles aromnd stage illegal Bingo at a cost "per card" that is just abont the same as your net adult admission?

They have no big investment in a one-purpose building! No admissions taxes! No percentage pictures! No film scarcities! No battles with film salesmen! And they're doing so well that according to a recent newspaper item some 26 of them met recently and formed a trade association.

They even rnn display ads in the local press (see page 9 of this issue); and don't let those "merchandise orders" fool yon!

How would you like to operate a legal enterprise in Reading?

I'll sell you one!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Mr. Emanuel:

Your timely editorial (MAN WITH HIS HAT IN HIS HAND) was just read by me a few moments ago. It prompts me to write a "fan" letter which is a new experience for me. The increasing demands being made by most of the companies with which I do business makes me want to put on my hat and walk out of the business . . . but here I stand, still with hat in hand. We have not been allowed to keep any of the tax money . . . a relief primarily intended for the theatres . . . the film companies have taken it all. Have you ever seen such an array of 50 per cent pictures as have been forced down our throats during the past year? Your thought of a "theatre men only" meeting is excellent. Not a meeting run by lawyers or producers, but by theatre men. I have a firm feeling that if a 50 per cent picture was refused playing time by all exhibitors it would soon cure many of our ills. Thus speaks a man who only yesterday bought "Battle Cry" at 50 per cent for extended playing time. I could get along without the picture but towns surrounding me are meeting the terms. The famous words, "United we stand, divided we fall," have a meaning for the theatre man of today. The question is what method or means can we use, legally, to stop this attack on our bank balance? It must come as a united effort.

"Hat In Hand" Garners Heavy Exhibitor Response

In addition to stimulating an unusually heavy response from exhibitors everywhere, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR'S editorial, "A Man With His Hat In His Hand" (March 9 issue), has been adopted by some groups as a battle cry.

An Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana bulletin referred to the editorial at length in a discussion of current distributor practices, and Allied of Western Pennsylvania exhibitors were informed by their executives to come with hats on head to that organization's convention, which concluded last week in Pittsburgh.

Nor was the editorial's appeal and and the reader's sense of identification restricted to exhibition. Steve Broidy, addressing 110 theatremen in Philadelphia last fortnight in an Allied Artists' bid for major status, characterized his company as having approached exhibitors through the years with its "hat in hand" in vain efforts to secure playing time for AA films.

One eastern exhibitor went so far as to enter a film company exchange while booking with "his hat in his hand." The effect of his gesture on rental terms was not immediately discernible.

—The Editor.

Gentlemen:

In reply to your editorial, A MAN WITH HIS HAT IN HIS HAND, you have hit the nail on the head; but the trouble with this business can be cured with a few more old sayings. For instance, Shakespeare said, "The plays the thing" and he was right. After a wide-screen and CinemaScope installation I find that the play is still the thing that brings them in. Also, Teddy Roosevelt said, "Speak softly but carry a big stick." After trying to buy film, play on availability, and get adjustments on poor grosses for five years, I find that I am trying to fight a tiger with a buying power equal to a match stick. As of today I am going to join a booking outfit that has a big buying power. I want to join the one with the biggest stick so that when they just tap a distributor, they will raise a bump maybe a foot high. As a small grass roots exhibitor, I find that the film agents can not help much, so it goes up the line to main office. The main office sets the scales and make the decisions that affect us. I say let the buying be done in the main office by a representative for the exhibitors, or, as this would be very impractical, two or three big combines of booking bureaus. If we little fellows don't get together, we are going to be taking a licking from now on. My advice is join the biggest stick as soon as possible.

ROBERT THOMPSON
Eagle Theatre Building
Montgomery, Pa.

Dear Sir:

I read with a great deal of interest Jay Emanuel's editorial of March 9 that rings so true of exhibition's position within the industry today. The theatreman today is not only nothing more than "an owner of some rather expensive one-purpose real estate," but, as a general sales manager once said awhile ago, "The exhibitor is nothing but a cashier for production and distribution." More exhibitors every day are lining up in front of the film exchanges with, as you say, "hat in hand," asking for a few crumbs from the banquet tables of production and distribution. This is not a healthy situation and is one which an exhibitor cannot long endure. All exhibitors, instead of carrying their hats in their hands, should hang them on one rack and sit down intelligently to approach and seek an answer to our common problems.

E. D. MARTIN
President, Theatre Owners of America
New York

Dear Mr. Emanuel:

As an exhibitor of forty years' standing I have just read one of the most refreshing and authentic editorials that it has ever been my pleasure to read in any trade magazine over this long period of time, the editorial, namely, "A MAN WITH HIS HAT IN HIS HAND." This editorial carried me back through all the period of years, step by step from the five cent days in vivid detail to the present unhealthy condition of our business. I lived all over again my young life in the business as your story unfolded, and enjoyed every entrancing moment of it up until the present headache. I know every vicious angle that the distributors fight you with. I have already closed one house and I am going to have to close another one. The repeal of the admissions tax helped the exhibitor very little. The distributor got the most of this, as you well know. I have a certain marked respect and admiration for a man who has the fortitude and the "guts" to put his opinions and his convictions in print. If the industry had more men like you, with the courage of their convictions outspoken, we would be in far better shape than we are today.

L. E. BREWER
President
Brewer Amusement Company
Pauls Valley, Okla.

Dear Sir:

Thank you and congratulations for your tremendous editorial. As an exhibitor of long standing I have experienced the very things you complain of and feel that it is about time the exhibitors do something about it. May I suggest a mass meeting be arranged in Philadelphia for the eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey area where the complaints can be discussed in the open and it is just possible that a meeting of minds may come up with something of value in the problems the exhibitors have with the distributors.

Confusion Over "Bingo" Grows In Many States

On Feb. 16, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR commented editorially on "The Strange Position Of Bingo," and on March 16 this editorial was reprinted in its entirety in The Camden Courier-Post's "Voice Of The Press" section.

New Jersey recently legalized "Bingo," creating a Legalized Games of Chance Commission whose chief estimates that games are now running at the rate of about 16,700 per year, and the New York legislature appears close to taking a similar step, despite warnings from some representatives that passage of such a bill could cause the closing of many small town and neighborhood theatres and the resultant loss of business to other merchants.

The position of "Bingo" gets stranger and stranger, however, with the keystone state of Pennsylvania a prime example (see editorial page). It becomes harder all the time to determine what the law is, let alone who's breaking it.

THE ABOVE DISPLAY of advertising is reduced from approximately one-half page in a recent edition of The Reading Times. Every Saturday, such a concerted advertising campaign screams for attention from everyone except the law enforcement officers and cover every conceivable angle of "Bingo" gambling.

Note the ad at lower left, calling for a special meeting of the People's Club of Berks County. This organization, composed of "Bingo" palace operators, recently came into being with the ostensible purpose of making sure that the "game" was played for entertainment only, not for cash prizes.

The "Bingo" question was recently discussed in an editorial in MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, Feb. 16 issue, "The Strange Position Of Bingo." The question, in Pennsylvania at least, remains unresolved; the legality of the game itself remains open to question; and all that appears evident, at least until steps are taken by state governmental agencies to dispel the legal ambiguties that surround the "Bingo" problem, is that theatres are being subjected to competition which seems unfair.

The final disposition of what is admittedly a knotty problem remains an unknown factor. The exhibitor, plagued by lack of playable product, unreasonable rental terms, and the spectre of toll-TV, has another headache.

PREFACE: This "joke" is so "good" that we couldn't hold it until later in the story but just had to give it to you fast. New York City exhibitors will particularly appreciate this humor. While we were up in Albany, one of the legislative aids told us about the fun Governor Harriman and his aides had with the New York City legislative representative and Mayor Wagner over the recent bill that was passed which permits the city to keep the breakage collected along with the city admissions tax. They told them they were thinking of not signing because the bill was unconstitutional and when city officials were about ready to do something drastic Harriman signed it. Funneeeee.

KONECOFF

LAST WEEK we traveled to Albany to sit on the city's two-day celebration in honor of the homecoming of Kirk Douglas along with, coincidentally enough, the opening of his latest film, "Man Without A Star," a U-I release. He was accorded all kinds of honors.

We arrived in time to attend a cocktail reception and dinner given in his honor by the Variety Club of Albany which was attended by dignitaries, friends, relatives, and industryites. It was a touching affair as friends and associates as well as family were introduced and accorded their proper place in his rise to fame. His reply and credit to all concerned was heart warming and sincere and will long be remembered by those who attended the function at the Ten Eyck Hotel.

Not only were he and his talents recognized by the city which through Mayor Erastus Corning named the days in his honor and issued a scroll in proclamation, but also he was made a member of the Variety Club and inducted by Harry

"The Glass Slipper" Fits The Bill

NEW YORK—Led by Radio City Music Hall, Loew's State and the Astor business in the Broadway first-runs perked up a bit over the weekend. According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Battle Cry" (Warners). Paramount continued to hold up with $33,000 expected on the eighth week.

"Untamed" (20th-Fox). Roxy reported $12,650 for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the third, and last, week down to $22,000.

"The Glass Slipper" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, opened to $100,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the first week sure of a fine $155,000.

"The Country Girl" (Paramount). Criterion did $13,500 on the 15th week.

"On The Waterfront" (Columbia). Globe expected this replay to do $9,000 on the second week.

"Underwater" (RKO). Mayfair expected the seventh week to hold at $9,000.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor reported a good $42,000 for the third week.

"Man Without A Star" (U-I). Victoria opened to a substantial $27,500 on the initial stanza.

"The Long Gray Line" (Columbia). Capitol dropped to $24,000 on the seventh week.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). Loew's State continued to do sensational business with a sure $62,000 in sight for the second session.

Bassler Lauds Foreign Filming

NEW YORK—At a press conference last week, Robert Bassler discussed United Artists' first CinemaScope musical, "Gentlemen Marry Brunettes." Bassler, executive producer of the independent production, recently returned from Europe where the film was shot on location.

Bassler stated that his British and French production staffs were as good as their Hollywood counterparts, but difficulties arose due to lack of sufficient technical equipment. The insufficiency includes proper sound transcribing devices and even wide-screens for viewing the film while in production. Bassler went on to say that he believed the authentic settings of the film would aid in Continental audience attraction.

In regard to working in a CinemaScope medium, Bassler said he found it no more difficult than conventional filming and in actuality it created a superior overall production.

The question of toll-TV was brought up and the producer reasoned that it would have no effect on the industry since the average person will always prefer seeing a picture within a theatre among an audience, rather than viewing it on a TV screen. Certain pictures, particularly spectaculars, cannot possibly be appreciated when shown over television.

Broidy Blames Exhibs For Product Shortage

Western Pa. Allied Hears Rembusch Promise Three-Way Fight On Toll-TV, Hits Theatre Release Of TV Films

PITTSBURGH — Trueman T. Rembusch, chairman, Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, told the Western Pennsylvania Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners' 33rd annual convention last week that the fight against toll-TV must be waged before the FCC, Congress, and the public. Speaking via a tape recording, Rembusch explained that the committee is not against toll-TV per se, but against the free use of the air waves by toll-TV.

Horace Adams, regional vice-president, Allied, upbraided the exhibitors present for being neglectful of the threat of toll-TV, and also spoke of a "monopoly of eight major companies bringing about a shortage of film and forcing exhibitors into deals."

Steve Broidy, president, Allied Artists, forcibly told the assembled exhibitors that the blame for the present product shortage must rest squarely with the exhibitors. He claimed that a few years ago, exhibitors said, "give us fewer pictures, but make them bigger and better," and that the studios took the cue. "As we all know," he continued, "not every picture that is planned as a blockbuster hits its mark." He defended the actions of the other major companies, who, he said, must be operated with the interests of their stockholders at heart. He predicted that if the companies are not supported now, product would become still shorter, and that soon deals will carry a 90-10 split with a floor of 50 per cent.

The convention resolved to avoid theatre screenings of films that had been released on television, following an announcement that "Davy Crocket," Walt Disney's telecast on ABC-TV, was being tailored for exhibition in the country's theatres. The delegates also voted to oppose the discrimination in the enabling act against state admission taxes and passed another resolution to fight toll-TV.

Charles R. Blatt was reelected president by the convention. Other officers reelected included Ray Woodward, vice-president; and Harry Hendel, secretary-treasurer. Directors elected were Ted Manos, Ernest Stearn, Fred Fisher, Geoge Tice, Rudy Navar, and Ted Grantz.

U-I Income Rising

NEW YORK—Universal Pictures and subsidiary companies made a net income of $1,136,928 during the quarter ending Jan. 29, 1955, after deducting $11,015,000 to provide for federal income taxes, it was reported last fortnight.

After dividends on the preferred stock, this is equivalent to $1.08 per share on the 998,349 shares of common stock outstanding at that date. For the 13 weeks ending Jan. 30, 1954, the company's earnings were $772,979, after providing for taxes of $800,000. This was equivalent to 70 cents per share on the 1,010,449 shares of common outstanding at the time.

Outside Support Mounting In Battle Against Toll-TV

WASHINGTON—An all-day session of the Pay-As-You-See TV last fortnight considered the FCC's request for information on toll-TV and also revealed that it has been joined by organizations with memberships estimated at more than one million, including business interests with millions of dollars which will be affected in various degrees.

Among the organizations opposed to toll-TV are the Hospitalized Veterans for TV Committee, organized by the New York chapter of the American Legion and spreading out through the country. The largest group, numerically, to support the Committee in its effort to stop toll-TV is the "Shut-Ins for free TV," recruited from the millions of viewers who are incapacitated or for other reasons confined to their homes or to hospitals. The "Downtown Boosters" has placed its nationwide membership behind the committee. It represents Chambers of Commerce, merchants, restauranteurs, night clubs, and other organizations dependent to some degree on the motion picture theatre to attract people downtown.

"Oklahoma" Bow Delayed

NEW YORK—The world premiers of "Oklahoma," first feature production in the Todd-AO process, has been switched from May to July, it was announced last week.

The premiere was delayed, it was said, because the picture took longer to make than had been anticipated, and also because it was thought wiser to open in July or August than in early spring. The Rivoli, New York, will probably remain closed until the "Oklahoma" run, partly because of the shortage of proper first-run product. The theatre is operated by United Artists Theatre Circuit. The lease on the theatre expires in two years, and UATC is at present negotiating for a 15-year lease from landlord Louis B. Mayer.

Mature To UA

NEW YORK—Arthur B. Krim, president, United Artists, announced last week that Victor Mature has formed an independent production company that will make six films for United Artists over a five-year period, with Mature starring in at least three of them.

Penna. Censors Upset On Narcotics Picture

PHILADELPHIA—Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman, Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, stated last week that pursuant to the rejection by the Board of the Narcotics film, "She Should 'A Said No," appealed by Hallmark Production, reversed, and appealed to the State Supreme Court by the Censor Board, Judge Edwin O. Lewis has issued the following court order:

"I have been informed by counsel for Hallmark Productions that a method of procedure has been worked out whereby the argument of appeal from my decision declaring the Pennsylvania Motion Picture Statute unconstitutional has been continued in order that the Commonwealth may attempt to draft and seek the passage of new legislation. Counsel for the Commonwealth and the motion picture distributor have stipulated that the supersedeas heretofore granted in the case shall be withdrawn. Under these circumstances, there can be now no stay of the operation of my decision. The Censorship Board should issue a seal of approval for the film, "She Should 'A Said No."

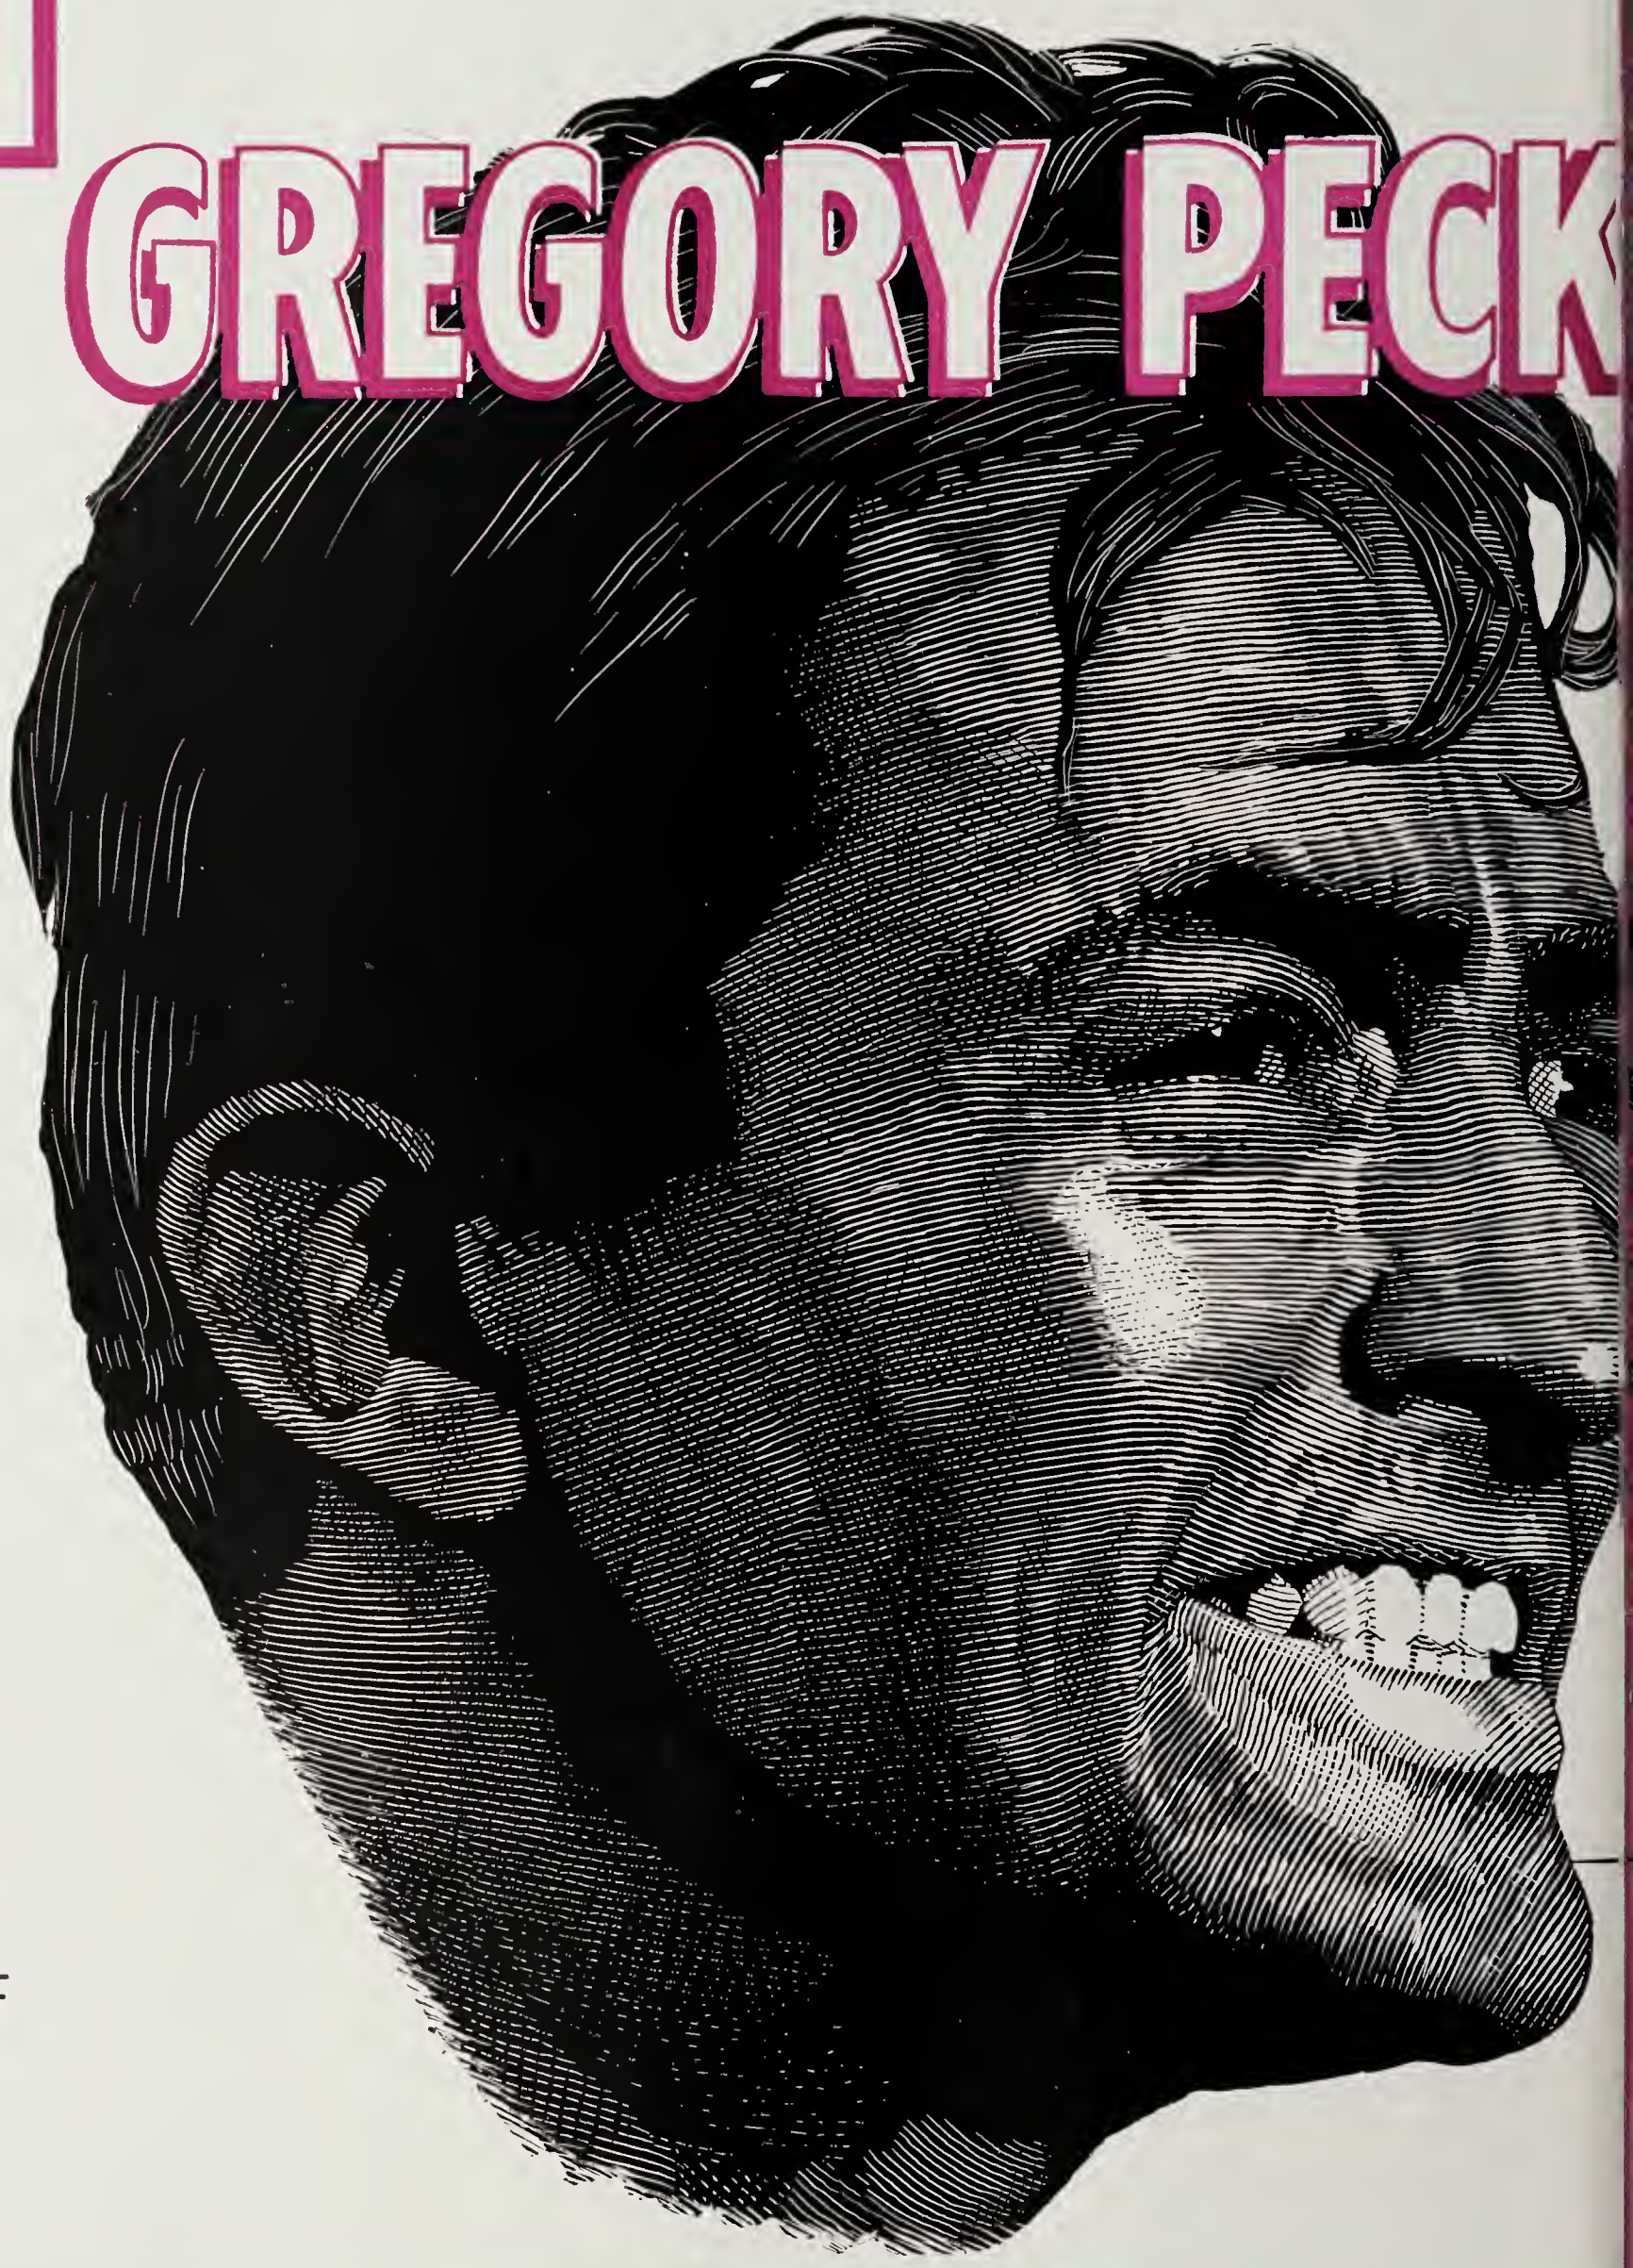
Mrs. Carroll has consistently maintained that the Board would not issue such seal of approval without a court order. With the order in hand, the seal must be issued.

"However," Mrs. Carroll continues, "this unique arrangement with counsel for Hallmark, Edwin P. Rome, indicates some conflict in Administration policies. In Senate Bill 237, introduced by Senators Dent and Bart, they sponsor legislation which will require the Board to reject films which are 'obscene or incite to crimes of violence or advocate the use of narcotics or habit forming drugs.' The Board rejected this evil film for those reasons."

The Democratic Censor Board recently named by Governor Leader have not been officially confirmed by the Senate.

Ohio Solons Debate Censorship; Rap Actions Of "Fast Buck Buys"

COLUMBUS, O.—The judiciary committee, Ohio House of Representatives, held the first hearings on the three bills for film censorship pending in that body last week.



Representative Andrew Putka, Democrat, co-sponsor of one of the three bills, claimed that activities of "fast-buck boys" has increased the necessity for film censorship. He claimed that use of narcotics has increased in areas where "She Should 'A Said No" has been shown and pointed to the herald for "Mom And Dad" as an example of undesirable film advertising. He claimed that elimination of newsreel censorship had not reduced admission prices or lowered film rentals.

Other supporters of film censorship bills pointed out the courts have never closed the door on laws regulating films, and the committee chairman said that film censorship and comic book regulations are inter-related because of recent United States Supreme Court decisions.

A J. Arthur Rank Organization Presentation

UA Sets Record Ad Budget For '55; Aims For Bookings In All Houses

Los Angeles—A three-day series of meetings of United Artists western division sales personnel, headed by division manager James R. Velde, last week heard Max E. Youngstein, vice-president, announce a record $6,000,000 ad-publicity-exploitation budget for the next 12 months.

Youngstein called the record outlay, topping the 1954 budget by $1,200,000 "a clear guarantee to exhibitors that every United Artists feature will be supported by the strongest ad-publicity-exploitation campaigns in our 36-year history. Every single feature will be backed by a tailor-made campaign that will guarantee the strongest possible long-range penetration both in key runs and smaller situations." Youngstein also promised that there would be a great increase in national merchandising tie-ins and co-ops.

William J. Heineman, distribution vice-president, announced United Artists' "Blueprint For Tomorrow," a selling program aimed at placing United Artists releases in every theatre in the United States and Canada in 1955. Heineman said that UA will release features during the next 12 months at an average of four a month. He pointed out that since 1951, when Arthur Krim took control, United Artists' grosses increased from $19,900,000 to $43,100,000 in 1954, making the company one of the industry's top suppliers of quality product.

The Los Angeles conclave will be followed by a convention at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, on April 1-3. The get-togethers are United Artists' first nationwide sales conventions since the 35th anniversary conferences last April and May.

RCA Does Record Volume

New York—Radio Corporation of America recently announced that it did a record volume of business in 1954, sales of its products amounting to $940,950,000. This figure is 10 per cent more than the previous all time high of $853,000,000, established in 1953, and was triple the volume of business done by the corporation only seven years ago, announced Brigadier General David Sarnoff, board chairman.

Net profit before federal income taxes in 1954 was $83,501,000, and after taxes, $40,525,000. This amounts to $2.66 per share of common stock. Figures for 1953 were $72,437,000, $35,022,000 and $2.77 per share.

Salesmen Talks Recessed

New York—Negotiations for a new agreement between the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen and the distributors were recessed last week "on call" by J. R. Mandelbaum, commissioner, Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Mandelbaum said that the negotiators will meet again at some time and place mutually acceptable to all parties.

Mandelbaum asserted that both sides felt that a little more time for additional exploration would prove very helpful. Former meetings in Chicago and Cincinnati have failed to solve the dispute.

Goldenson Audience Plan Carried To Hollywood Studios

NEW YORK—Leonard H. Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, and Robert W. Coyne, special counsel, Council of Motion Picture Organizations, were scheduled to leave for Hollywood last week to place before studio heads the COMPO-approved plan of audience development proposed by Goldenson at a recent meeting.

The plan calls upon Hollywood to produce more pictures for young people and to create more young stars, "with whom young people can grow up."

The studios are said to be especially receptive to the idea of building new stars at the present time, for they have been complaining lately that they are at the mercy of the agencies as regards major casting, and contract rosters are currently at a minimum.

Writers Honored

Hollywood—The screen writers branch of the Writers Guild of America recently gave its annual awards at a dinner dance attended by 1,000 members. The "Laurel Award for achievement," given to the writer who, through the years, has advanced the literature of the motion picture and has made outstanding contributions both to his industry and profession, was given to Robert Riskin, writer of such films as "It Happened One Night," "Mr. Deeds Goes To Town," "You Can't Take It With You," "Lost Horizon," "Meet John Doe," "Broadway Bill," and "Lady For A Day."

Billy Wilder, Samuel Taylor, and Ernest Lehman received the award for "best written American comedy, for Paramount's "Sabrina"; the award for best written American drama went to Budd Schulberg, Columbia's "On The Waterfront"; and best written American musical was won by Francis Goodrich, Albert Hackett, and Dorothy Kingsley, for "Seven Brides For Seven Brothers," MGM.

At a recent New York trade press conference, United Artists president Arthur B. Krim, at desk, announced the extensive series of independent production deals set by the company and which will add approximately 90 important features to the UA release roster in the next three years.

RKO Theatres Seek Stock Retirement

New York—RKO Theatre Corporation stockholders will be asked to approve the retirement of 583,977 shares of common stock, according to a proxy statement sent last fortnight announcing the annual meeting to be held April 8 in Wilmington, Del.

Retirement of the shares would give them the status of authorized but unissued stock, and would reduce the amount of issued capital stock from 3,914,913 shares to 3,330,936 shares, including 88,400 held under the stock option plan.

Effect of the retirement would be to reduce the amount of issued capital stock by $1 per share, or $583,977, to reduce the capital surplus by $2 a share, or $1,167,954, and to reduce the earned surplus for $3.347 a share, or $1,954,848.

Directors and officers of RKO Theatres last year received a remuneration of $258,091. Individual amounts paid included Sol A. Schwartz, president, $78,000; William W. Howard, $40,000; and Thomas F. O'Connor, $32,500.

All of the company's present directors will be proposed for reelection. They are Theodore R. Colborn, David J. Greene, Dudley G. Layman, Albert A. List, A. Louis Oresman, Edward C. Raftery, and Sol A. Schwartz.

GPE Profit Up

New York—General Precision Equipment Corporation reported last fortnight net sales for 1954 of $123,332,634 and profit after federal taxes and all other charges of $5,488,089, equal after preferred dividends to $6.49 per share on 797,121 average number of shares of common stock outstanding during the year. This compares with net sales in 1953 of $87,763,925 and profit of $3,436,349, or $5.09 per share.

Profit before federal taxes was $11,725,089 for 1954 compared with $7,840,349 in 1953. The sales and profits include those of Link Aviation, Inc., only from April 30, 1954, the date of its acquisition.

Get Them Out

New York—Newspapers should print more news to get people out of their homes, it is asserted in the 40th of the series of COMPO ads, which appeared in the Editor and Publisher last week.

Referring to a retail drygoods merchant who said that a theatre near his store had been of enormous help to his business because it attracted people to the neighborhood, the ad quotes him as saying: "That's what the paper should be doing. They should be influencing people to go out of their homes. They can do this by creating an atmosphere that there are a lot of interesting things going on downtown and that everybody should get out of the house and enjoy life."

Staub Producing Variety Film

Hollywood—Ralph Staub, producer-director-cameraman of Columbia's "Screen Snapshots" fame, who has made 777 short subjects in 25 years and has been three times nominated for Academy Awards, is now producing a two-reel subject for Variety Clubs International, it was learned last fortnight. The film will portray the "heart" activities of all of the Variety Club Tents.

Nothing succeeds like CINERAMA

On Sept. 30, 1952 when "This Is Cinerama" pioneered the motion picture revolution and gave the screen a new dimension inspiring the many technical improvements that have contributed to the re-birth of prosperity at the nation's box-offices, Cinerama assumed the well-known penalty of leadership. When a motion picture grosses $20,000,000 in only 14 theatres (9 runs continue) . . . when one engagement in New York plays to a gross of $4,500,000—what can you do for an encore!

Now that critics reports (see opposite column) and the early S.R.O. box office returns are in . . . this second Cinerama presentation: Louis deRochemont's "Cinerama Holiday"—provides proof it will be even more fabulous than the first.

With Cinerama's unique power to "put you in the picture"—to impart extraordinary emotional impact and the sense of actual physical participation by the audience—it is a writer's, director's, producer's dream.

Standard motion pictures in all aspect ratios come and go . . . but month after month in the great cities of our land . . . and in every world metropolis where we have opened . . . Cinerama defies all box-office experience; creating new patrons and reviving the interest in motion pictures of the "lost" audience. Thus Cinerama is not in competition with the established industry . . . but a new entertainment power . . . a once or twice a year deluxe show for the entertainment-loving millions of the globe.

Showmanship Pays In Circuit Contest

TORONTO—Dan Krendel's highly successful campaign to put his managers on the showmanship train is paying off.

Each month the 18 managers in Dan Krendel's district, known as District "B" of Famous Players, are rated for their efforts on behalf of showmanship.

Just recently Dan announced the winners in his district. The district, it should be pointed out, is divided into two sections, making up those theatres which are larger, and the smaller theatres.

Group "A" first prize was taken by Mel Jolley, manager, Century, Hamilton, followed by Art Cauley, Paramount, Peterboro.

In Group "B," Olga Sharabura, Orpheum, Sault Ste. Marie, graces the winner's circle, while Len Gouin, Capitol, Peterboro, picks up second place.

Each week, the managers turn in to Dan examples of what they are doing in the way of promoting the pictures booked into their houses. They range from window displays to cooperative pages of advertising to street parades.

None of the stunts are new, according to Dan. They are just the old ones done over in a new fashion.

In Windsor, six theatres are holding their own "Oscar" race, inviting their patrons to fill out a list of selection of Hollywood winners on entry blanks. The entry blanks, which show six groups of Academy nominees, are being distributed by the Capitol, Tivoli, Park, Palace, Vanity, and Centre. The competition closes four days before the contest winners are announced. Prizes are passes.

A blow was struck at Saskatoon drive-in operators when City Council refused to revoke its recent decision to have the two ozoners located in the city collect amusement tax for the municipality. The drive-ins were incorporated along with other businesses when the city took over several fringe areas. The Council imposed the amusement tax regulation and a business tax rate of $1.25 per speaker placed. This compared with the previous rate of $2.

The fifth annual benefit show in aid of Variety Village was held by the Niagara Peninsula Theatre Managers' Association at the Palace, St. Catharines. Master of ceremonies for the occasion was Monty Hall, Toronto Variety Club. St. Catharines and district theatremen worked hard to make the show a success, with the local group comprised of Vern Marriott, Vern Hudson, Wilf LaRose, Harry Rosenberg, and Roy Miller.

Alberta exhibitors had their hopes raised when members of the legislative opposition introduced a motion to drop the amusement tax. The leader of the opposition contended that the tax was not an important source of income for the government in view of its large revenues from oil and other sources. He claimed that the tax, which brings the government about $1,100,000 annually, was a "holdover" from the times when the province had to seek revenue sources. He felt that abolition of the tax would encourage a great number of cultural activities. In Alberta the tax is scaled from one cent on admissions of 10 cents and under to 25 cents on admissions over $2.

Six theatres in Ontario have changed hands recently, it is reported by W. D. McPhee, assistant director, theatres branch, Board of Censors, Treasury Department of Ontario. Three of the transfers were in Toronto, where Luigi Cardone and Pietro DeNicolais have taken over Sonia Lipton's 460-seat Adelphi, and Rick Theatres, Ltd., has acquired the Brock and Kenwood. The latter company is headed by Fred Fink, who already operates the Astor and Gay, Toronto. New owners of P. Fingold's Capitol, Meaford, are E. D. and G. E. Rowe, while in Tecumseh, C. E. Foreman has acquired the 424-seat Rex, formerly owned by Ruth Hooper and Vance Hardy. James Harrison is operating the National Theatre Services' 225-seat Roxy, Walkerton.

Tariff Pacts Seen As Ignoring Film Plight

WASHINGTON—The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, agreed to last week in Geneva, failed to make two changes requested by the motion picture industry.

The Motion Picture Export Association had requested that State Department negotiators in Geneva should seek changes in the agreements that would permit the use of screen quotas to protect infant industries only, and that import quotas to protect the balance of trade of a country should not be used against motion pictures.

The industry claimed that many countries were putting quotas on the importation of films not to protect their balances of trade, but to protect their film industries.

One other provision in the new agreement might harm the motion picture industry. It is the provision which allows underdeveloped countries to use import quotas to protect infant industries or industries going through a difficult financial period. The language of the provision is slightly broader than before, although it is conceded that if a strict construction is put upon the word "underdeveloped," no trouble should ensue.

BUENOS AIRES—A swing to CinemaScope exhibition and film production in Central and South America stimulated by the outstanding success of "The Robe" and other films was disclosed last week by Murray Silverstone, president, 20th-Fox's International Corporation, in a cabled report to president Spyros P. Skouras. Silverstone disclosed that here alone "The Robe" has returned a rental figure of $500,000 (6,750,000 pesos) as it completes its first year at the Broadway. Meeting with government officials, leading theatremen and film producers in eight countries, Silverstone revealed that installations are past the 800 mark and that this figure is expected to double by the end of the year.

IFE Playdate Drive Honors Division Heads

NEW YORK—IFE Releasing Coropation's "3-24-55 Sales—Playdate—Collection Drive," with $25,000 in prize money, began last week, announced Bernard Jacon, vice-president in charge of sales. "The drive," he stated, "is a testimonial to our three new division managers Seymour Schussel, eastern division; Glenn Fannin, central division; and Alex Cooperman, western division.

"This drive offers a dramatic means," he continued, "to emphasize to our many exhibitor friends the strength and diversity of IFE films which makes them outstanding entertainment for all types of theatres and drive-ins."

Pointing out the drive's many unique features Jacon said, "The title indicates more than the opening date. All the figures have additional significance. The '3' refers not only to the three new division managers, but also indicates the three eight-week heats encompassed by the drive. Last, and perhaps most important, it stands for the three prizes that will be awarded within each of the three heats. This gives every sales representative and sales office an equal opportunity to take the big money not once but three times.

"The '24,' of course," he went on, "is the opening day of the first heat and also the total number of weeks that the drive will last. And '55' refers to 1955, IFE's banner year, a cornerstone for a greater year in 1956."

Theatremen Rapped By Zenith

CHICAGO—The annual report of Zenith Radio Corporation, devoting three pages to a description of the expected company benefits from toll-TV, last week told company stockholders that "movie theatres represent the only segment of the entertainment industry that has openly opposed toll-TV."

The report went on to state that movie producers have not joined the committee against toll-TV and that "numerous far sighted motion picture exhibitors are applying to Zenith for franchises to operate Phonevision in their local areas."

112 Theatres Have TV

NEW YORK—Nathan L. Halpern, president, Theatre Network Television, reported last week that 112 theatres throughout the United States have installed equipment for closed circuit television.

Pickford-Goldwyn Suit Starts

HOLLYWOOD—The Pickford-Goldwyn suit, in which Mary Pickford seeks approximately $500,000 from Samuel Goldwyn on the grounds that he used and rented their jointly held studio for six years without making an accounting, and in which he seeks the same amount on the grounds that she did not contribute her share to the maintenance of the studio, went to trial last week.

Richard Polimer, Pickford vice-president, and Edward Stotsenberg, CPA, were the principle witnesses. The trial was expected to run for 15 days.

Republic Loses Court Fight

NEW YORK—New York Supreme Court Justice Matthew M. Levy ruled last fortnight that there cannot be an attachment on an attachment, and denied motions by Republic and Bernard Reich, California attorney, to restrain the sheriff of the City of New York from returning monies attached by Horizon Enterprises, Inc., in the latter's suit against United Artists.

It is expected that the Republic and Reich actions will be cancelled, but the Horizon suit against United Artists will remain.

"Cinerama Holiday" Nears Million Dollar Gross Mark

NEW YORK—"Cinerama Holiday" will reach the million mark in grosses within a few days. This was the announcement last week of a Stanley Warner spokesman. The latest Cinerama attraction, which is now running in New York, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Detroit, and Philadelphia, was reported to be ahead of its predecessor, "This Is Cinerama," in advance ticket sales for a comparable period of time. This fact can be attributed in part to the greater efficiency in handling mail-order business.

As to the actual impact of Cinerama on the public, the spokesman stated that "Holiday" is not only drawing people who have not seen a Cinerama presentation previously but also people who saw the first Cinerama entry. It was pointed out that a Cinerama house has a 150 mile radius to work with and large groups of people have come longer distances.

At present there are 15 cities within the U.S. and one in Canada showing Cinerama subjects. By May 15 there will be Cinerama houses in Tokyo, Osaka, London, Milan, Rome, and Paris.

Record Ad Budget Set For Four AA Films

HOLLYWOOD—Allied Artists will spend $700,000 on advertising, the biggest appropriation in its history, for four films to be released between now and July 1.

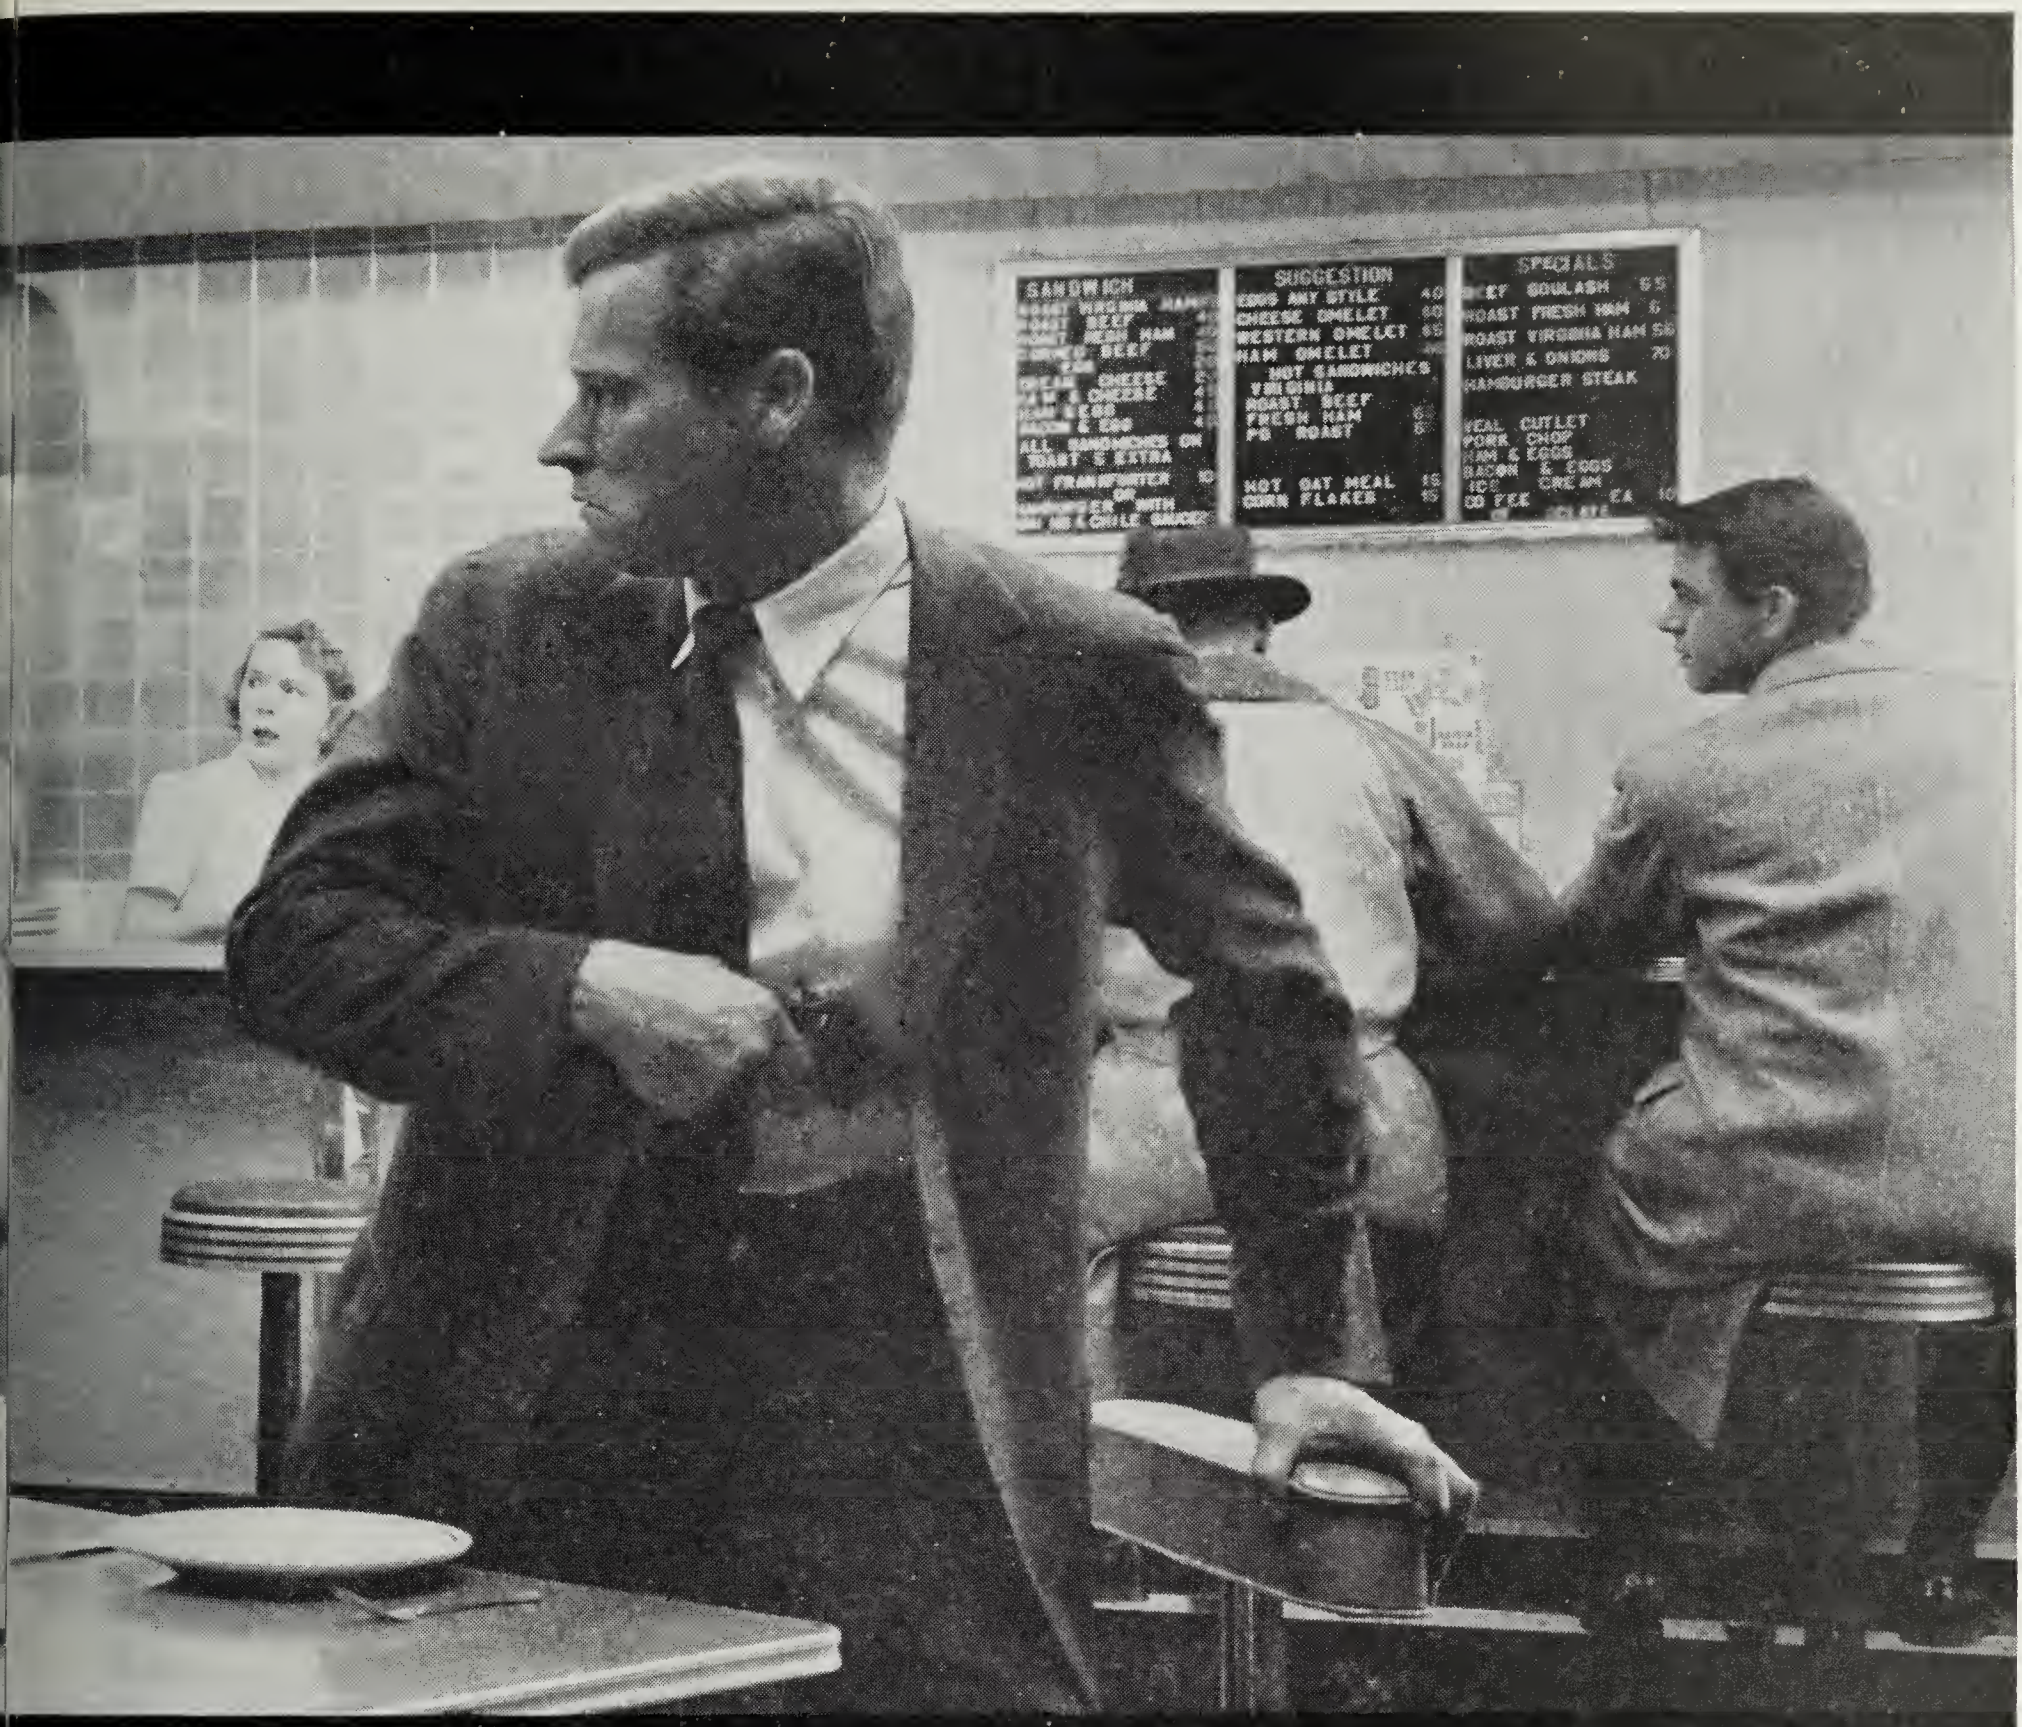
The pictures set for intensive merchandising are "The Big Combo," "Seven Angry Men," "An Annapolis Story," and "Shotgun," each of which will be given a wide-scale launching with saturation bookings.

The $700,000 ad budget will be allocated to newspaper, trade publication, television, and radio advertising, according to John C. Flinn, director of advertising and publicity.

The first to go into release is "The Big Combo," starring Cornel Wilde, Richard Conte, Brian Donlevy and Jean Wallace. It has been set to open on March 24 at the Paramount and Fenway, Boston, flagship houses in a New England saturation booking involving more than 100 theatres.

Involving a 115-theatre saturation booking in the Kansas-Missouri area, "Seven Angry Men," starring Raymond Massey, Debra Paget, and Jeffrey Hunter, will be launched in Kansas City and St. Louis in conjunction with the world premiere of the film on March 30 at Osawatomie, Kans., where John Brown engaged in his first battle with proslavers.

On May 8, "Shotgun," in Technicolor and starring Sterling Hayden, Yvonne De Carlo, and Zachary Scott, will be kicked off with saturation openings in the "A" houses in the Interstate Theatre Circuit, in addition to 150 other theatres in Texas, New Mexico, and Oklahoma.



Plans now, according to Flinn, are being formulated for a world premiere and the simultaneous multiple theatre opening for "An Annapolis Story," also in Technicolor, and starring John Derek, Diana Lynn, and Kevin McCarthy.

Body Battle Ends

NEW YORK—RKO announced last fortnight that Lyn Jones had discontinued, with prejudice, her suit against the company, in which she charged that RKO had used an illustration of her body in advertising "Underwater." This action was taken by Miss Jones after RKO had filed a motion to dismiss her suit, based upon affidavits showing that her charges were without foundation. No money was paid to Miss Jones nor was there any settlement of any other kind involved in the discontinuance.

Lamont, former chief barker and prominent exhibitor. Also aboard the dais that night were Mrs. Lamont, Judge George Myers, toastmaster, Mayor Corning, George Schenck, chief barker, Mrs. Schenck, Julius Perlmutter, ex-chief barker and dinner chairman, and his wife. The proceedings were duly photographed and recorded by station WPTR (Leo Rosen, general manager, free plug), with Ken Parker overseeing the waxing for later use by the station.

The next morning, we had breakfast with Douglas, who was thrilled by everything that was happening to him. This was his first personal appearance tour and so enthused was he that he thought every actor should make them from time to time to see how wonderfully illuminating it can be to get opinions and reactions from the public. In this particular case, he has a special interest in seeing that business builds for the film since he owns 50 per cent of it and he believes that this type of arrangement is better for the actor as well as the distributor since he puts more into his work if for no other reason than a selfish one, and the results should be higher.

On May 15 he expects to start filming "Indian Fighter" in CinemaScope and in Technicolor, the first of a six-picture deal with United Artists. Also, the near future should see him going into "The Life Of Van Gogh" for MGM. The budget on "Indian Fighter" will be $800,000, which does not include his salary. Douglas expects to get into production activities himself, and eventually he hopes to direct some films.

He had words of high praise for U-I, which he termed a most alert, wide-awake studio staffed with young, efficient, and able executives. He also thought that it was one of the top companies when it came to promoting and merchandising pictures.

Other Douglas thoughts were CinemaScope is wonderful for action pictures, but any process can enhance a film depending on the subject. . . . Movies can do more for the stage, and actors should be encouraged to return to the boards even if only for a limited engagement. . . . TV is a tremendous medium and one of the best things that has happened to the movies since it demonstrated that movies are better than ever. It's also a good source for actors, directors, etc. . . . He doesn't know enough about toll-TV to express an opinion. . . . He would like to do a comedy film if the right story could be found.

Reporters recently attended a press interview called by Robert K. Shapiro, managing director, New York Paramount, and heard Frank LaGrande, Paramount eastern technical head, explain where proscenium reconstruction is taking place to accommodate a giant screen for VistaVision horizontal double-frame projection. The group is seen on the Paramount stage.

Afterwards, we tagged along to the Capitol where he was introduced at a session of the N. Y. State legislature, and then he met the Governor and other state officials. Appearances were scheduled at the Strand and Troy, Troy, N. Y., where the picture was scheduled to play that day. Albany will long remember Douglas and we are sure that he won't forget his two days in that city.

Sidelights: Bucky Harris, U-I field man, did a wonderful job in setting up all of the appearances, following through on the schedule, etc. . . . Exhibitor Neil Hellman and Allen Iselin run a fine motel, the Mount Vernon, on the outskirts of the city, as well as a number of theatres. . . . Phil Gerard, publicity manager, and staffers Milt Livingston and Paul Kamey guided press representatives in fine fashion so that all angles were covered resulting in detailed coverage.

EXHIBITORS LISTEN: Over 100 exhibitors and members of the press attended a luncheon meeting last week at Toots Shor's, hosted by Allied Artists, wherein the present and future plans of the company were discussed by executives of the company.

Leonard Goldenson, president, United Paramount Theatres-American Broadcasting, introduced William F. Rodgers, special adviser to the company, and Steve Broidy, president, after urging all the support possible on the part of exhibitors and exhibition to assist company executives in the outstanding job they are trying to accomplish. He opined that AA has had trouble in breaking through the magic circle surrounding the eight major companies, and unless exhibition encourages such organizations and independents, exhibitors will find they are doing a great injustice to themselves. Competition, he went on, is a necessity or exhibitors will find themselves giving all of their gross above expenses to distributors with no profit remaining.

Rodgers thought the company was headed in the right direction and it is forging ahead on solid ground. Allied Artists is anxious to conduct business on an equitable level.

Broidy, noting that the company was celebrating its 25th year in business, reported that breaking through the "magic circle" was always in the minds of guiding executives. They tried it 10 years ago and while exhibitors were willing to listen, they wouldn't disturb their relationship or playing time given the majors. At present with the cry for additional good product, the company stands ready once again to come forth with needed quality product if exhibitors desire same. The company intends spending about 25 millions on films over the next 16 or 17 months, but exhibitors must indicate their willingness to support the program by giving up a proper share of theatre playing time.

He outlined some of the top product that is presently ready for theatres as well as those to be made in the future, which include a William Wyler production starring Gary Cooper which will roll July 15 or Aug. 15; a Billy Wilder film will start in November with top names in the cast; a John Huston picture, with Humphrey Bogart, will go in January; and a Jose Ferrer film, "The Matador," will be started Sept. 15 or Oct. 15.

Ed Morey, vice-president, opened the proceedings, and at the head table were also Norton Ritchey, Alfred Crown, John C. Flinn, Roy Brewer, Earl Revoir, Lloyd Lind, and Harry Goldstein.

THE LION ROARETH: Associated Motion Picture Advertisers last week at a meeting were treated to a facsimile of MGM Ticket-Selling Workshop presided over by Mike Simons, in charge of customer relations, and aided by Emery Austin, exploitation manager. Thus far, 11 meetings have been held around the country attended by about 3,500 exhibitors, and it is expected that 13 more will be held before June. Simons thought that the meetings have resulted in better showmanship, increases in attendance, and improvement in morale.

It has been established that theatremen should pay closer attention to the 13-year-old who can be developed into a theatregoer at that stage or a non-patron, and that they influence family attendance greatly. Circuits have recognized this and are following through. Older people, too, have money to spend on recreation, especially in the smaller towns, and theatres should woo them into theatres to which they will return again and again. Details on local merchant tieups and their value were also enumerated.

Austin reported that the meetings thus far have shown the exhibitors are in favor of them and the part that the company field force plays in the operation. The aid to be found in the pressbook long neglected was also noted, and cooperation from newspapers, which are allowing more space to films, should be solicited. Radio, TV, tours by personalities, trailers, and accessories were treated.

U-I Ups Production Plans To 34 Films

NEW YORK—Universal-International will further increase the number of its feature releases during the current calendar year to meet the demands of the present market, it was indicated last week as Charles J. Feldman, vice-president and general sales manager, announced the company's releases for the four months of May, June, July, and August.

Last December, Feldman announced that the company would increase the number of its feature releases from th 28 of 1953-54 to 32 for the current calendar year. Indications now are that U-I will put a total of 34 features into release during the current 12-month period.

The pictures set for May to August release include the pre-release of "The Shrike," the film version of the Pulitzer Prize play starring Jose Ferrer and June Allyson. Twelve pictures will be released during the four-month period, half of them in color, one in 3-D, and two in CinemaScope.

Set for release during May are "Revenge Of The Creature," in 3-D and starring John Agar and Lori Nelson; "Cult Of The Cobra," starring Faith Domergue, Richard Long, Marshall Thompson, and Kathleen Hughes; and "The Looters," starring Rory Calhoun, Julie Adams, and Ray Danton.

June releases will be sparked by "This Island Earth," in Technicolor, starring Jeff Morrow, Faith Domergue, and Rex Reason, and will include "The Man From Bitter Ridge," in color, starring Lex Barker, Mara Corday, and Stephen McNally, and "Abbott And Costello Meet The Mummy."

July's outstanding release will be "Foxfire," in Technicolor, starring Jane Russell, Jeff Chandler, and Dan Duryea; "Ain't Misbehavin'," in Technicolor, starring Rory Calhoun, Piper Laurie, Jack Carson, and Mamie Van Doren; and "The Purple Mask," in CinemaScope and color, starring Tony Curtis and Colleen Miller.

Releases for August will include "Francis In The Navy," with Martha Hyer sharing starring billing with Donald O'Connor; "The Private War of Major Benson," in Technicolor, starring Charlton Heston and Julie Adams; and "One Desire," in Technicolor, starring Anne Baxter, Rock Hudson, and Julie Adams.

About People

NEW YORK—Mort Blumenstock, Warners' vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity, last week announced the appointment of Robert L. Quinn as western field representative, with headquarters in Denver. Quinn goes to the Denver assignment from the position of western division manager and advertising director, Stanley Warner Theatres, which he has held for the past two years.

NEW YORK—The appointment of Barbara Winters as director of trade press publicity for Magna Theatre Corporation was announced last week by Nicholas John Matsoukas, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation.

BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

A ballyhoo that created more attention than anything dreamed up recently was this flat-bed float on MGM's "Blackboard Jungle," Loew's State, New York City. Featured were a pair of teen-age jivesters doing their stuff to the tune, "Rock Around The Clock." It visited junior high schools, vocational schools, etc. Jim Bruno, theatre manager, was responsible for the attractive stunt.

Clothing Tieup Aids 20th-Fox's "Raleigh"

NEW YORK—National magazine advertising, extensive TV and radio advertising in over 90 key cities, and full-scale local level exploitation are features of a major tieup set by 20th-Fox on "Sir Walter Raleigh" with Raleigh Clothes, leading men's wear manufacturer, it was announced last week.

The massive advertising, publicity, and exploitation program, launched while the swashbuckling adventure drama still is in production and fully five months in advance of its national release, will achieve an audience penetration in excess of 40 million via principal avenues of contact with the public.

Introducing a film-inspired line of men's suits and coats, Raleigh Clothes will theme its magazine and newspaper ads around the Charles Brackett production. Letters to thousands of department stores and specialty stores announcing the tieup are being sent by Raleigh, and company sales representatives are giving merchants a first-hand description of the promotion. In the coming months, ads on "Sir Walter Raleigh" will appear in leading men's magazines, consumer publications, and trade journals in the clothing field.

Special material for window and in-store displays are being readied to facilitate storewide film campaigns; while merchants are being encouraged by Raleigh to set local level campaigns with exhibitors as soon as playdates have been finalized.

Raleigh also will supply dealers with special newspaper mat advertisements and publicity material for local newspaper planting. Another key segment of the campaign will be the setting of important national and local contests with Raleigh suits as prizes.

Closer to the release of the CinemaScope production, Raleigh will sponsor a private showing of the film in New York for magazine and wire syndicate writers, fashion editors, and TV and radio personalities. The screening will be preceded by cocktails and a buffet supper.

"Burma" Hits Fan Mags

NEW YORK—"Escape To Burma" RKO's second Superscope release, will receive a concentrated advertising campaign in national fan magazines in early April, timed for Easter release of the Benedict Bogeaus production, it was announced recently by Walter Branson, world-wide sales manager. All ads for the film will be full-page, with four-color layouts predominating.

The four-color advertisements will appear in Photoplay, Motion Picture, Movieland, Modern Screen, Screen Stories, Movies, Movie Stars' Parade, and Movie Life.

"To Paris" Via Scooter

NEW YORK—The Lambretta Company, manufacturers of Italian motor scotters, has tied in on a nation-wide basis with Alec Guinness' first Technicolor comedy, "To Paris With Love," it was announced last fortnight by Frank Kassler, president, Continental Distributing, Inc.

In the film, Odile Versois, drives around Paris on a Lambretta bike. The Lambretta firm, whose headquarters are in New York City, are using a still of Miss Versois and Guinness in its national tie-in.

In connection with the New York premiere of 20th-Fox's "Untamed," Roxy, a display of rare and authentic African art and sculpture was arranged at the theatre. Looking at the display are William Moclair, left, managing director of the theatre, and Ladislas Segy, foremost authority on African art in the U. S. The exhibit is valued at $10,000.

UA Sets $1,000,000 For "Stranger" Bally

LOS ANGELES—A $1,000,000 budget for advertising, publicity, exploitation, and promotion, the largest ever appropriated for a single motion picture released by United Artists, has been set for Stanley Kramer's "Not As A Stranger," it was announced by George J. Schaefer, general sales representative, Stanley Kramer Pictures, and Max E. Youngstein, vice-president, United Artists.

The joint announcement came at the three-day meeting of United Artists' sales executives in Los Angeles. At the sales sessions, the film was given its first screening for the UA chiefs and specially-invited exhibitors.

The $1,000,000 campaign will be launched in April, approximately four months before the release of the picture.

With a special group of exploiteers already in the field to begin the concentrated publicity effort from coast to coast, the advertising campaign will get under way next month with full-page ads in key-city newspapers, followed by five 500-line ads at the rate of one a week in every important newspaper in the United States.

The record campaign will encompass national magazines, women's magazines, fan magazines, full-page newspaper ads, 24-sheet billboards in every exchange center in the country, and one of the heaviest cooperative-advertising campaigns ever utilized, with full-page ads set for each situation prior to key openings.

Multi-page magazine ads in full color will be taken in Life, Look, Saturday Evening Post, and Collier's and there will be full-page ads in the Ladies Home Journal, This Week, Redbook, True Story, and the full list of motion picture fan magazines. Ads also will be placed in such "class" magazines as Saturday Review. Harpers, The Nation, and in all important medical journals.

During the entire month of May, a new concept in billboard advertising will present "Not As A Stranger" in more than 4,000 locations in every area. The billboards to be used in civic centers and along highways are a new creation treated with a luminescent process that makes signs glow as if electrically-lit.

"Command" Gets Service Assist

WASHINGTON—Paramount and theatre operators throughout the country will receive the cooperation of the United States Air Force on national and local levels in the promotion of "Strategic Air Command," according to a special directive issued here by the Department of the Air Force last week.

Under the USAF directive, issued by General Brooke E. Allen, USAF Director of Information Services; all commands are authorized to furnish equipment displays, Air Force personnel, bands, etc., when requested by local theatre operators.

Announcing Still Further Improvements In the Strong Super "135"

MOST POWERFUL OF ALL PROJECTION LAMPS

proved by impartial foot-candle-meter tests

NOW AVAILABLE WITH 18" DIAMETER, f/1.7 REFLECTORS for theatres with f/1.8, f/1.7 or f/1.5 objective systems and projectors cleared for these high speed optical systems. Super "135" lamps are also available with 16-1/2" f/1.9 reflectors.

Unitized component design permits quick, simple changes to attain the correct light requirement for any of the various new presentation techniques, even two or more on the same program. Burn a choice of four different carbon trims; 9, 10, or 11mm regular trim, and 10mm Hitex in a total of seven separate manners to attain any desired degree of cost of operation, screen illumination, or burning time. Only one control is required for selecting any amperage within the range of a particular mode of operation. New, improved long life positive carbon contact. New ventilated reflector frame insures cool operation of reflector and rear section of the lamp even at extreme angles of projection.

New special blower fan keeps the Strong Infra Ban Beam Cooler at a low operating temperature by removing the light energy which is neither reflected nor transmitted, but is trapped in the filter itself. The filter is mounted on a new removable holder for quick removal and ease of cleaning. This Beam Cooler and blower permit a tremendous increase in usable light without a corresponding increase in heat at the aperture.

Strong's exclusive Lightronic crater-positioning system automatically maintains the correct arc gap length and correct position of the positive arc crater at the EXACT focal point of the reflector. A perfect light, evenly distributed, of constant intensity and unchanging color value, is maintained at the screen without manual adjustments.

A stream of air directed just above the arc stabilizes its burning and prevents the deposit of soot on the reflector.

When the lamps are STRONG the picture is bright!

Speculation Spectre

Buying on speculation, as anyone who has gone broke following "inside" stock market tips can tell you, is a rather dangerous way to do business. It is not difficult to see why theatremen who have spent large sums of money on 3-D equipment, screens, projectors, speakers, etc., as a result of the introduction of various new projection and sound systems, would be a bit wary about buying equipment which might be outdated as soon as it is installed. However, the adoption of a "wait and see" attitude can have damaging results.

The Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association, through its executive secretary, Merlin Lewis, recently issued a statement on this subject which seems to make a good deal of sense to this department.

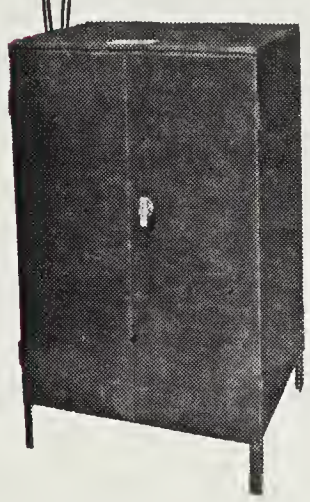
Part of the statement said, "Premature announcements of fantastic developments in the field of theatre equipment achieve one positive result. They cause the theatre owner who knows he needs new equipment now and is in a position to buy it, to slow up a bit and decide he might be able to wait until the new equipment comes onto the market—even though the equipment discussed may never reach the production stage."

If an exhibitor bases his purchasing program on the strength of rumors he is being foolish on two counts. First, he is endangering his business by continuing to use equipment which admittedly is in need of replacement, and he is therefore unable to give his patrons all that he is capable of offering. Secondly, he is foolish because there is a good likelihood that the revolutionary new development he has "heard" about might never leave the drawing board.

As TESMA points out, "every manufacturer of projectors, lamps, sound systems, etc., continuously is looking for a new or improved product. Each company has an engineer or engineers on its payroll, each of which tries constantly for improvement so as to get a bit of a jump on his competitor." However, one thing which no theatreman should lose sight of is that for every idea that is tried out and found good enough and practical enough to be placed on the market, there are perhaps 20 which never leave the experimental stage.

We are not trying to give the impression that we believe theatre operators should purchase equipment blindly. It is their duty as businessmen to investigate and determine the FACTS. This can be done by following the reports in the trade press, by discussing the situation with supply dealers, and by going directly to the manufacturers. But do not magnify or read things into a report about what might be available at some time in the future, and interpret it to mean that it will be marketed.

Lewis summed up this point by saying, "The man who needs a new automobile this year buys it if he can, instead of waiting until next year because he hears about a new gadget that might be included in next year's model. Theatremen with good business sense do the same thing."



If you need new equipment, INVESTIGATE, DO NOT SPECULATE!

NATIONAL EXCELITE "135" PROJECTION ARC LAMPS

No matter which aperture, or the size of your screen, your picture will really sparkle when you have the Excelite "135."

National's Reflect-O-Heat unit permits a great increase in volume of light, without a corresponding increase in heat at the aperture. The AUTOMATIC Crater Positioning Control System insures that both carbons are so fed as to maintain the correct arc gap length and position of the positive crater at the exact focal point of the reflector. Thus, the screen light is ALWAYS of the same color, without variations from white to either blue or brown.

The arc is stabilized by a stream of air which prevents the hot tail flame of the arc from reaching the reflector, supplies enough oxygen so that no black soot is produced, and keeps white soot from collecting on the reflector in such quantity as to absorb heat which would cause breakage.

In Spring An Exhibitor's Fancy Lightly Turns To Thoughts Of

AIR CONDITIONING SYSTEMS

By W. B. Cott
Westinghouse Air Conditioning Div.

THE widespread utilization of mechanical refrigeration systems by the theatre industry has, to a large extent, been responsible for acceptance of comfort air conditioning and the many improvements which have been of benefit to the user of air conditioning equipment. The large theatres were the first to proclaim the advantages of their air conditioning installations, many of which operated without adequate temperature control thus creating a wonderfully cold inside for the patrons, along with a delightful blast of cooled air covering the sidewalk area in front of the theatre. The small neighborhood theatres necessarily adopted air conditioning and were forced to economize on operation and installation costs due to their seating capacity.

Air conditioning application techniques and new developments, along with experience, rapidly developed installations which were economical in first cost and operating cost.

A Challenge

Air conditioning of modern theatres has become one of the most challenging applications throughout the industry. Strict attention must be given not only to temperature, humidity, and air distribution, but to the avoidance of over-cooling, noise, warm or cold areas, drafts, hot and cold stratification, odors, and leakage through doors.

An indoor relative humidity between 50 per cent and 55 per cent is generally accepted as best condition as concerns equipment cost, human comfort, and odor prevention. Indoor design temperature may be anywhere between 73 degrees F and 80 degrees F, depending on outside dry bulb temperature. The necessity for careful expense control makes the selection of air conditioning equipment for a replacement installation or a new installation a major consideration for the theatre operator.

Obviously, a theatre in a residential district operating evenings with matinee performances once or twice a week cannot afford to install as heavy air conditioning equipment as would be required for a theatre located in a shopping center and running continuous daily performances.

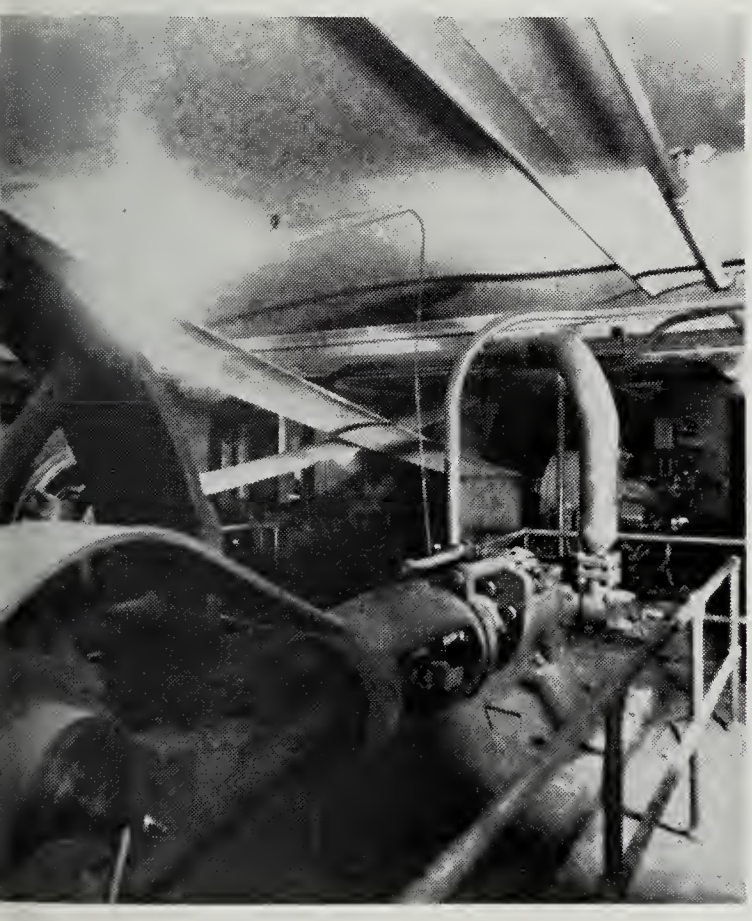
PHYSICAL THEATRE

Vol. 10, No. 4 March 30, 1955

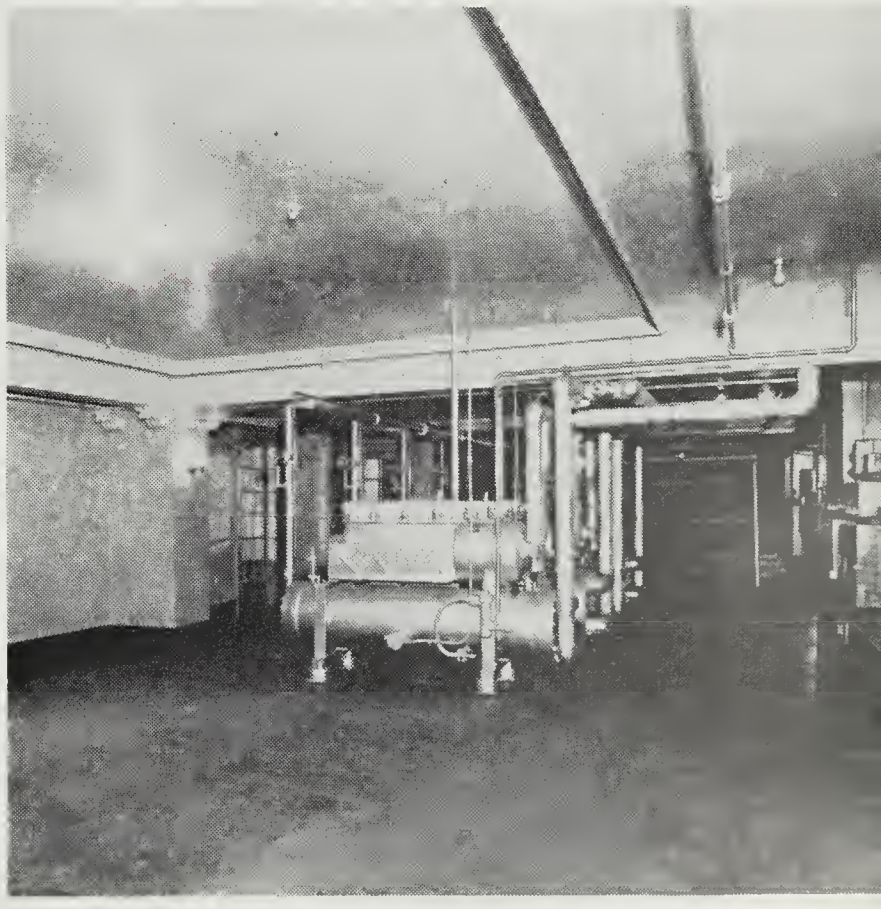
The outlying theatre can use package type unit air conditioners which are completely self-contained air conditioning systems. In addition to capacity for cooling, they are equipped with fans for air circulation and ventilation, they accomplish dehumidification, and are also equipped with filters to clean the air. They will also supply heating and humidification by the addition of standard accessories, and are so constructed that automatic temperature and humidity control can be utilized. Units are available in a wide range of sizes. The self-contained package type units are adaptable to many locations, either inside or outside the structure, at the rear of the house or at the side of stage, in basements or on the roof, and can supply air with or without ducts depending on their final location.

Peak Load Method

The "peak load" method of application engineering may also be used to economical advantage in small outlying theatres and others running one matinee and one evening performance, or one performance per day. A well qualified engineer should be engaged to engineer and supervise such applications.



Another Method



Another economical method of cooling theatres running one or two performances daily is the "latent heat ice storage" system. This method uses much smaller mechanical refrigeration apparatus than would be required for direct mechanical refrigeration air conditioning systems. The installed machinery makes ice during no load hours which is used to condition the space during peak load hours. In some applications the ice and machinery are used together during peak loads.

The economical first cost of latent heat ice storage systems may be seen in the following example:

A theatre requires a total of 200 tons per hour for two hours. Total 400 ton hours or 4,800,000 BTU. The ice required to provide 4,800,000 BTU and to cool the space is produced over a certain number of shut-down hours.

For a direct cooling system the compressor(s) would have a capacity of 2,400,000 BTU/hr., or somewhat less if sized according to peak load requirements.

Seen (left) is the machine room of the State-Lake, Chicago, showing huge old-fashioned belt-driven units. The same room is seen (right) showing the savings in space and weight with the installation of modern Westinghouse compressors. It is a good example of the advances that have been made in decreasing the size of air conditioning equipment while increasing efficiency and capacity.

If 10 hours were chosen as the ice recovery period in a latent heat ice storage system, then: 4,800,000/10 = 480,000 BTU/hr. required capacity of compressor. The difference in required capacity affords a substantial reduction in compressor first and operating cost even though ice tanks must also be installed.

Central Station

Where the construction of the theatre and its capacity require large central station type air conditioning apparatus located in a machinery room, many equipment variations may be used. Refrigeration machines are available in many ranges of capacity and are physically smaller than formerly. Compressors are equipped with capacity controllers which are actuated by means of house temperature. The compressor may be located in one space with the coils and fans above the ceiling, or on the roof, with ducts supplying the air to the theatre. Water towers or evaporative condensors are available to minimize operating costs.

The exhibitor is advised to retain a competent heating and ventilating consulting engineer prior to opening negotiations for an air conditioning system to be installed. Thus you will be able to secure adequate apparatus for your needs in full compliance with local codes and regulations.

Recently many houses have undertaken the replacement of obsolescent air conditioning refrigeration apparatus, and have realized substantial savings in operating cost by elimination of the need for an operating engineer. Recent replacement installations in southwestern Texas, Colorado, and Philadelphia have resulted in reduction of payroll plus a gain of floor space which was put to other uses.

Do not forget that inspection and maintenance are necessary to protect your investment. A check chart will be of inestimable value to you and will serve for most systems being stalled today.

Air Distribution

There are two general classifications of air distribution in common use in modern theatres. The first is known as the vertical or downward diffusion system and the second is the horizontal diffusion system. In the first system air is introduced through supply openings in the ceilings of the auditorium and in soffits of mezzanines and balconies.

The horizontal diffusion system introduces the air through side wall outlets and high velocity ejector nozzles are sometimes used to create circulation of a large volume of secondary air. This system has many advantages and a few disadvantages. The main disadvantage being that ceilings and walls must be smooth and free from beams and ornamentation.

A variation of the above employing supply outlets mounted in the walls 12 to 14 feet above the floor is rapidly becoming quite popular. This method forms an even stratification of cool air from the floor to the height of the supply outlet and makes no attempt to cool the cubic volume of space between the outlet and ceiling. In many theatres such space is enormous and requires many tons of refrigeration to cool. By forced stratification to a height of 12 to 14 feet a reduction in machinery first and operating cost may be realized. Balconies and mezzanines are treated as separate spaces and air is supplied by ceiling or wall outlets.

The major difficulty to be overcome in cooling balconies is the tendency of cold air to spill over and drop into the occupied space below. This may be prevented by good engineering of outlets and returns.

Projection rooms should always be provided with separate exhaust to the outdoors with no return to the central return system. Conditioned air may be supplied from the central supply duct system.

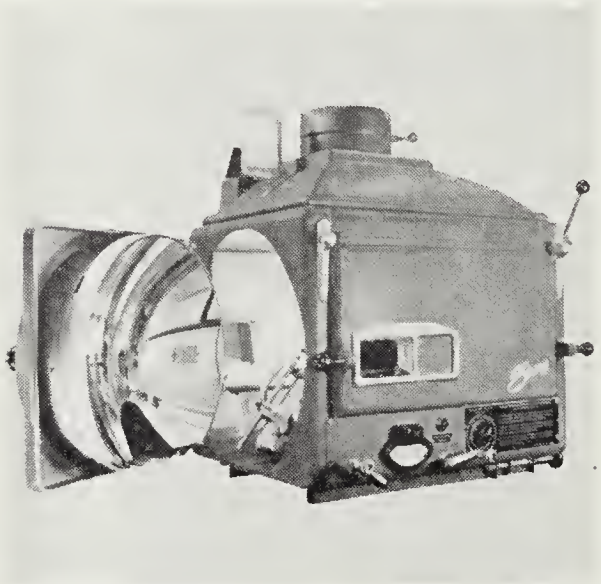
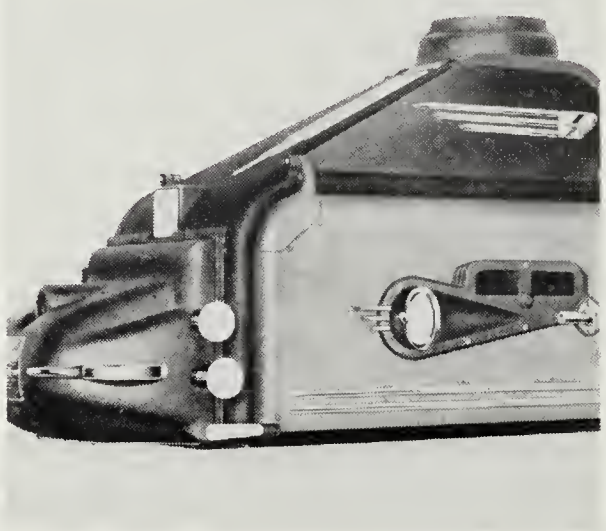
The Ashcraft Cinex-170 has an 18-inch diameter reflector, and is designed for maximum power.



The Excelite 135 is said to be economical when producing illumination of 20,000-25,000 lumens.



The RCA Wide-Arc features cooling devices and a water circulator operating from arc voltage.

News And Views On Leading Heavy Duty

Projection Arc Lamps

This Strong Super 135 has been designed to meet the special light demands of wide screen systems.

The Peerless HyCandescent arc lamp is a heavy duty unit with current range from 125-180 amps.

BY now the importance of using equipment that will supply the proper amount of light necessary to show the various wide screen systems is obvious to all. However, the need for information on this vital subject is still of the utmost importance to the theatreman.

In order to allow the reader to get some indication of the projection arc lamps currently available to him, in addition to some valuable operating and maintenance suggestions, the leading manufacturers of these arcs have furnished the following information:

Ashcraft Cinex-170

The newest piece of equipment is the Cinex-170 reflector type projection lamp being marketed by the C. S. Ashcraft Manufacturing Company. Created and designed to meet the illumination requirements of all projection systems in the foreseeable future, the Cinex-170 may be operated with almost any size high-intensity carbon now being offered. This includes a range of carbons from the 9mm standard high-intensity carbon when an operating load of 80 to 90 amperes is required, to a 13.6mm. standard high-intensity carbon for use when 140 to 170 amperes are required.

This new lamp has an 18-inch reflector and is capable of providing a speed of f/1.64. According to the manufacturer, the Cinex-170 will produce an increased amount of light when used with older slower speed lenses, but it will operate at its maximum efficiency when used with the new f/1.7 lenses currently on the market.

Dichoric heat reflector filters are used and it is recommended that projectors be equipped with aperture gate jets, and aperture gate water cooling devices. It is also stressed that the Cinex-170 projects a wide cone of light to the film gate and care should be taken so that projector housings and shutter frames will not interfere with the maximum passage of light.

The unit has two solid silver water-cooled contact jaws that are located three-quarters of an inch behind the carbon crater, and they remain cool enough to touch with the bare hand immediately after breaking the arc.

Another of the features of this lamp is the new air circulating system. The blower system takes cold air from outside the lamps and directs it over the filter through hollow walls and ducts, and across the reflector, ejecting it into the projection room exhaust stack.

Commenting on the use of the Cinex-170, the manufacturer said that it will be possible to project 80 foot wide CinemaScope pictures and still maintain a brilliancy of 10 foot-candles at the center of the screen. It was also stated that with this lamp drive-in theatres should be able to show well-lighted CinemaScope pictures up to a width of 130 feet.

Peerless Hy Candescent

At the present time the J. E. McAuley Manufacturing Company is offering two projection arc lamps, the Peerless Hy Candescent and the Peerless Magnarc. The Peerless Hy Candescent lamp is a heavy duty arc designed to be used where large amounts of screen illumination are needed, such as on the screens of drive-in theatres and the large indoor first-run houses.

This lamp has a current range of from 125 to 180 amperes. It has been designed to use the following carbons:

Standard Regular Trim

125 to 150 amperes, 68 to 78 volts
13.6mm. by 22-inch high intensity positive
7/16-inch by 9-inch coated cored negative (½ by 9-inch negative from 140 to 150 amperes).

New 180—A Super Trim

170-180 amperes, 74 volts
13.6mm. by 22-inch positive
½ by 9-inch heavy duty coated cored negative.

An eight-inch chimney base is provided to assure sufficient cubic-foot per-minute exhaust of the heated air and gases from the lamphouses at a velocity that will not disturb the arc. To ensure emission of the heated air in the rear upper portion of the lamphouse, outside of the canopy, separate vents are provided in the casting that forms the chimney base so it may exhaust into the projection room.

The lamphouse body is comprised of a formed sheet-steel base of heavy gauge to which are attached the two side frame casting that form the frame for the two

Exhaustive heat and light tests prove conclusively that with the

NEW MOTIOGRAPH WATER-COOLED FILM GATE AND APERTURE COOLING BLOWER

(1) Film does not buckle even when run for four consecutive 20-minute periods!

(2) Gate temperature held at only 5° above room temperature (as opposed to a temperature of 190° for a non water-cooled gate). Immediate rethreading possible without burned fingers.

These tests were run on Motiograph AAA projectors equipped with 52° shutter blades and high-intensity reflector type arc lamps burning rotating positive carbons at 135 amperes and WITH NO FILTER.

These water-cooled film gates and aperture cooling blowers are now available on new Motiograph AAA projectors, and are also obtainable for Motiograph AAA and AA projectors presently in use.

With The Development Of New And Better Insecticides, Today

Chemistry Goes To The Drive-In

OUTDOOR living brings with it the problems of bugs and weeds—and drive-in theatres are no exception. Weeds are sometimes defined as "plants out of place" and they can find many wrong places around a drive-in theatre lot. As for insects, probably the two worst pests are flies and mosquitoes. One jet invasion of a swarm of mosquitoes can spoil an outdoor theatre party in a hurry.

Control of both insects and weeds is largely a sanitation problem. Weeds often shelter breeding places for various kinds of insects, as well as being a problem in themselves. They also harbor rats, mice and other rodents, and may hold enough moisture to increase rusting and wood decay. A gust of wind may fill a weed patch full of litter, and then the vegetation interferes with the clean-up crew. In addition, of course, weeds and tufts of grass or clumps of brush give the grounds an unkept appearance, and may seriously increase the risk of fire.

Chemical Weed Killers

Weeds, grass, and scrub growth may be a problem wherever there is enough moisture and fertility to permit a plant to grow. Around speaker stands, parking ramps, platforms, gate-posts and fence-lines—these are some of the places where weeds are often a problem in drive-in maintenance. Around electrical installations, they may grow high enough to short-circuit a line. And hay fever sufferers will avoid your theatre for several weeks or more if they suspect the air may be full of ragweed pollen.

Where labor costs must be considered, the use of chemical weed killers is economincal. Modern chemicals can be easily applied by any maintenance crew, and the investment in equipment and materials is repaid many times over.

Hiring a custom applicator has the advantage of providing at reasonable rates, trained personnel thoroughly familiar with chemicals and able to supply the equipment for applying them.

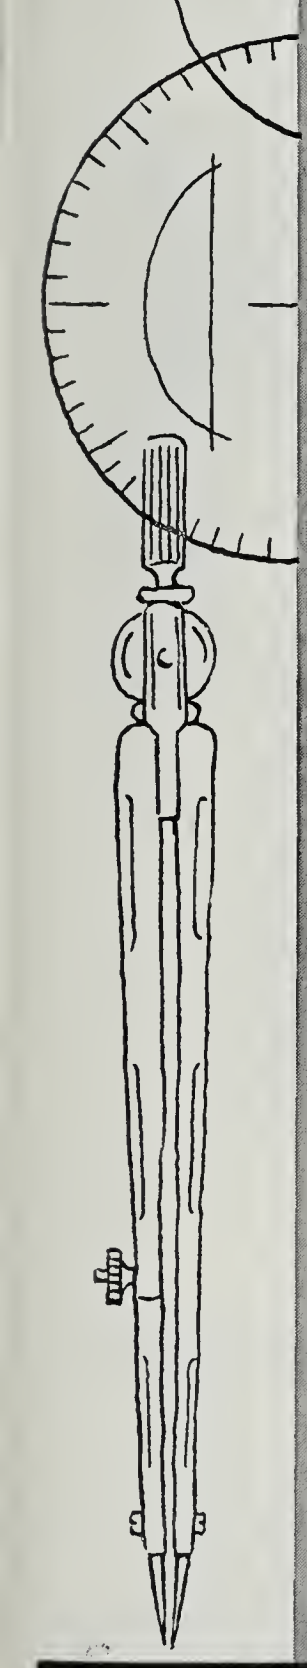
An example of how weeds may be controlled can be seen in these two illustrations. The photograph above shows speaker posts at a Massachusetts drive-in where clumps of weeds are growing around the base. The illustration below shows the same theatre after the speaker posts have been treated.

Specialists

Chemical weed killers are "specialists" and it is important to select the right material for the job to be done. Some, like 2,4-D and related chemicals, are "selective." That is, they will kill certain broadleaved species of plants, while grasses continue normal growth. Then there is "Ammate" weed and brush killer, which is specific for killing poison ivy and other woody plants. Sprayed on the foliage it kills the whole plant.

"Soil sterilants" are used where it is desirable to control all plant growth. One chemical that meets major requirements for the "soil sterilant" class is "Telvar" W weed killer. This material is a powder to be mixed with water. A cupful in two gallons of water is enough to control weeds on a 200 square foot area for an entire season or longer. It is non-volatile, non-flammable, and low in toxicity to people or animals under conditions recommended for use. A season's suply can be stored in a small space.

"Telvar" W weed killer works principally through the roots, so it should be applied when there will be enough rainfall to carry the chemical down into the root zone. Applied in the spring, before growth starts, it will prevent plant growth throughout the season.



"Telvar" W may be applied to dense weed growth provided sufficient water is used. But better results are usually obtained if vegetation is mowed and matted growth cleared away, in order to apply the material on the ground.

"Telvar" W can be applied with power sprayers suitable for wettable powder mixtures. The sprayer should have continuous agitation to keep the chemical in suspension, and all openings in screen and line strainers should be equal to or larger than 50 mesh.

If You Want

BETTER SIDELIGHTING...

If you want to see less drop-off on your screen than you thought possible . . . then you're ready for the new formula Raytone HILUX Screen.

Here's the screen that was conceived on the drawing boards, engineered by men who's business is light reflection and proved in theatres of all sizes and shapes.

No longer an engineer's dream, the new formula Raytone HILUX is a fact . . . proved more effective in installations of small as well as large screens over 80 feet wide!

All of this plus economy, too! Your regular dealer will be pleased to quote Raytone Screen prices . . . much lower than you'd expect them to be for a product of such unequalled quality.

And the Raytone HILUX is unconditionally guaranteed to show a bright picture, will show no seams, will give you complete uniformity without blemishes or streaks and will give you true color rendition with richer, more natural pictures. It is guaranteed to do all this, or you pay nothing for the screen!

YOU BUY THE BEST when you buy the Raytone HILUX Screen for your theatre. Contact your dealer now for early delivery.

"Electric Towel"

A new electric towel, Activeaire, is now being introduced to the theatre industry by Doc Faige and Associates.

Activeaire is claimed to perform other essential functions in addition to the drying operation. A special deodorant block in the unit scents the hands and room with a pleasing odor. Through the use of two General Electric ozone lamps, its ultra-violet radiation kills air-borne bacteria, it is claimed.

According to the manufacturers this unit is inexpensive to own and operate. It can be operated from a regular 15 ampere line. The unit is started by pressing a button and its automatic electric timer automatically turns the machine off after 40 seconds. The machine is finished in baked white enamel and is made of 16 gauge steel construction throughout. It is said to be so designed so that it is virtually tamperproof. The maker guarantees it for two and one-half years against defective parts and workmanship.

Known as Activeaire, this hand dryer also has a deodorant block that produces a pleasing scent.

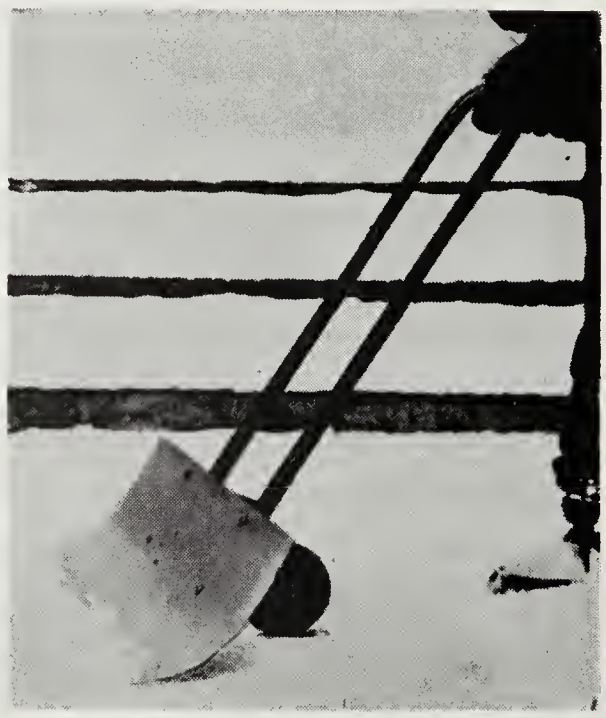
Decorative Lamp

A new type of carbon filament decorative lamp, trademarked Candylbeme, is said to be especially designed to enhance the natural beauty of crystal type, polished and other decorative lighting fixtures which may be found in a theatre. The lamp is being offered by the North American Electric Lamp Company.

The Candylbeme is hand-tipped to give a long, slender pointed effect. It is made of clear glass so that beams of light radiate without diffusion, reflecting sharp, brilliant rays when striking glass and polished surfaces. Frosted glass bulbs are also available.

The special carbon filament is designed to provide more light and long life, it is claimed. The 30 watt, 110-125 volt bulb is available with candelabra, medium or intermediate base.

The lamp is said to achieve all the warm, mellow charm of real candle light in crystal fixtures, electric candle sticks, wall brackets, etc.



An item which may find use in lounges and in foyers is this carbon filament decorative lamp.

Snow Plow

One of the problems facing theatres in the winter is the removal of snow. To help ease this problem Leisure Industries is offering a new all-steel plow with 30 by 12 inch adjustable blade that pushes snow to the left, right, or straight ahead. Ease of operation is said to spare the user from undue strain or effort. It is also said to make the removal of snow a job that can be done in a very short period of time.

Angle of the snow plow's blade is changed by four springs locked in position by finger controlled wing nuts. The low rolls on six inch rubber-tire wheels that firmly grip the cleared ground.

This all-steel plow with an adjustable head is said to make snow removal quick and simple.

Film Rewinder

What is said to be the largest automatic film rewinder presently on the market has just been introduced by Goldberg Brothers, it was announced.

The large rewinder is said to accommodate 3,000 feet of black and white 35mm. film on reels with a diameter as large as 18 inches. The same product can be adapted for 35mm. film reels with 15 inches of diameter or smaller, as well as for 16mm. sized reels.

Constructed of top-grade heavy steel, the rewinder is machined and finished to precision tolerance, providing a complete protective shield. Doors open on extra - heavy counter - balanced spring hinges, it is claimed. A special large handle keeps doors perfectly tight while in operation. The rewinder works automatically after the control handle is set.

Dispenser Lock

As a deterrent to vandals the Bobrick Company has developed a new, improved lock for the hinged cover at the top of its soap dispenser. This new lock can be opened only with new special-shaped key, and it is claimed that it cannot be unlocked with a common pocket knife, pick, paper clip, or any other such ordinary tool.

An improved lock which was designed to make it difficult for vandals to open soap dispensers.

Westrex Editer

- FINEST FILM EDITING MACHINE FOR STUDIOS EVERYWHERE
- WINNER OF AN ACADEMY AWARD FOR SCIENTIFIC OR TECHNICAL ACHIEVEMENT

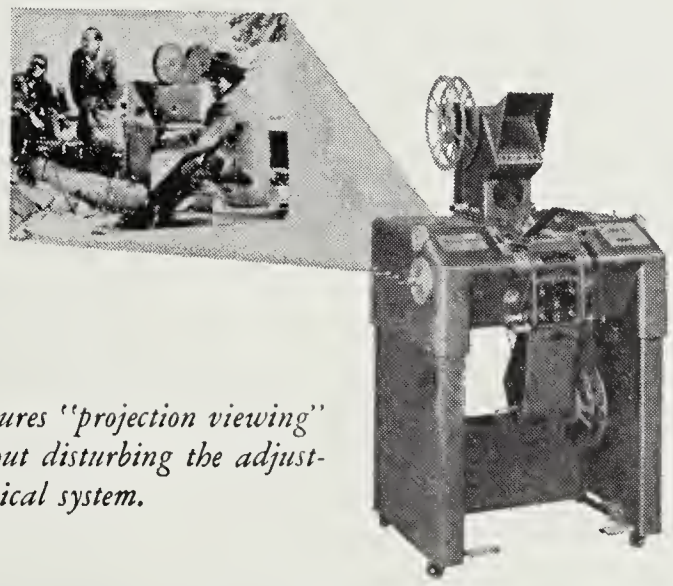
Westrex Editer equipped for magnetic and photographic sound tracks. 3-3/4" x 5" translucent screen shows bright, clear picture.

Designed and engineered by the Westrex Hollywood Laboratories — in cooperation with leading studios — the new Westrex Editer is an advanced machine that meets every film editing need.



The Westrex Editer can handle both standard and the new small-hole perforated 35mm films — film strips — motion picture films — magnetic or photographic sound films (single or multiple) — composite release prints — and for the first time it makes possible "projection viewing" of an enlarged image on a wall or screen without extra attachments.

The Westrex Editer is quiet in operation — no intermittent, hence less noise and less film damage — speedy and efficient. Among its advanced features are simplified threading — automatic fast stop — synchronization while running — improved sound — lower flutter.

The Westrex Editer — available in 35mm model — is the latest in a long line of notable Westrex contributions to the motion picture industry. A new illustrated folder that describes in detail its many technical and operating advantages is yours for the asking.

The basic Westrex Editer, for use with film strips — vertical film handling method — faster and more practical.

The Westrex Editer features "projection viewing" on wall or screen without disturbing the adjustments of the normal optical system.

side doors, as well as the support for the sheet-metal top.

The large size of the side doors and the fact that the rear cover door of the lamp is "slip-hinge" mounted, makes accessibility to the burner mechanism a simple matter.

As constructed, the arc-burner mechanism, including the carbon-feeding mechanism blower unit, and motor are a complete unit and held in position inside of the lamphouse by one screw at the rear and a threaded stud at the front end. It is said to be completely removable with a minimum of effort.

Excelite 135

The Excelite 135 offered by National Theatre Supply is said to be most economical in terms of carbon and current consumption for producing screen illumination in the range of 20,000 to 25,000 lumens.

This lamp has simple construction. With individual motors each feeding one carbon, the feeding arrangement is simplified to a great extent, and does not necessitate any kickoff feed device from one carbon to the other such as ball clutches or other methods of taking the variable feed for both carbons off one motor.

With its greatly expanded light output the Excelite 135 makes use of a heat filter as standard equipment. The dichroic type filter employed makes use of numerous interference layers which are deposited by a vacuum process on pyrex glass, and which have the peculiar property of selectively reflecting unwanted heat portions of the energy from the aperture. The point where it becomes necessary to insert the filter in the beam to project the film varies with the individual projector and with the type of film that is being projected. It is suggested, however, that for amperages of 110 or above, the use of this filter is mandatory to insure against film damage.

The design of the Excelite is such that it is very easy to keep the lamphouse clean from soot and carbon ash. The entire rear door of the lamphouse swings open and the entire bottom of the lamp can be brushed out through the rear door so that any carbon ash deposit which collects in the base of the lamp can be swept out without any danger of sweeping it into the interior mechanism of the lamp, and possibly causing feeding difficulty.

Beyond the fact that it makes for easy interchangeability of the various elements, so as to burn different currents in the lamp, unit construction permits easy removal of the elements for inspection in servicing. The operator is able to remove any part and interchange it with similar units from a spare lamp, or to make quick repairs on bench where the operator can get at the seat of the trouble without the necessity of taking the whole lamp apart.

RCA Wide Arc

The RCA Wide Arc lamp operates with a 9mm., 10mm., or 11mm. standard positive carbon, or with a Hitex 10mm. positive carbon. The positive carbon rotates at the rate of 15 revolutions per minute, providing maximum arc stability.

Features of this lamp include special cooling devices, large 16-inch diameter reflector, feed mechanism with rotating motion of the positive carbon, accurate positioning controls, and convenient dowser control handles.

The lamp can be used with any type of theatre projector. For operation above 100 amperes, it employs a unique heat reflecting glass with a motor-driven fan, assembled in a convenient housing which is mounted between the arc lamp and the shutter housing. The lamp system also employs a water circulator which operates directly from the arc voltage. When DC power is supplied to the arc lamp, the water circulator starts automatically.

Heat generated by the Hitex carbons is dissipated from the lamphouse by low stack assembly located immediately above the arc flame. This keeps both the reflector and the inside of the lamp free of combustion dust. A series of screened ventilating holes in the lamphouse base suck in cool air which instantly forces out heat, dust, and ash without interference with the arc flame stability, the manufacturer stated.

Dowser control handles are provided on both sides of the lamp at the end toward the screen. Horizontal and vertical carbon adjustments are located on the rear of the lamp. Simple adjustment knobs permit accurate vertical and lateral positioning of the reflector.

Strong Super 135

According to the manufacturer the Strong Super 135 was designed especially for the increased light demands of the wide screen systems of projection.

An Infra-Ban Beam Cooler unit, positioned in the path of the light beam, permits the free passage of the visible light rays while diverting the heat rays away from the aperture and back into the lamphouse from which heat is automati-

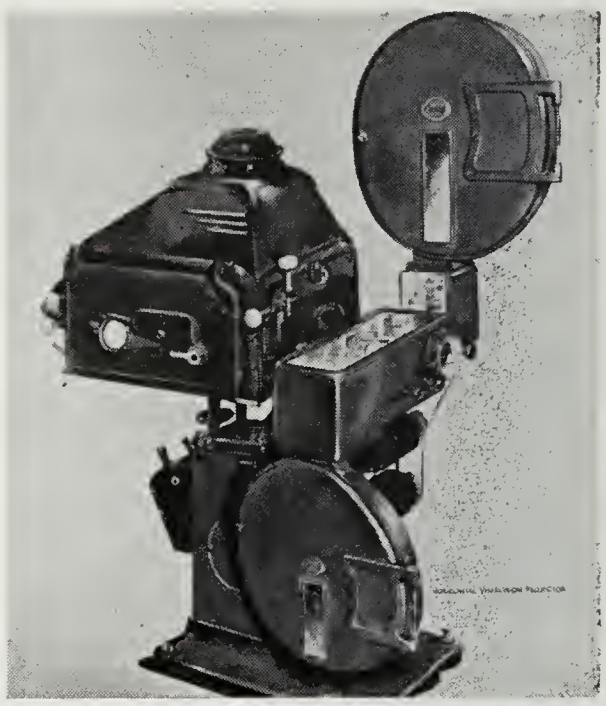
Horizontal VV Uses A Curved Aperture System

NEW YORK—The question of curved versus flat screens appears to be looming once again as Paramount Studios suggested the use of a curved screen and a curved aperture system, particularly for the showing of horizontal VistaVision, at a press conference held in the Paramount Theatre last week.

The new aperture system was said to be curved at the top and the bottom of the aperture plate, which will still remain flat. Frank LaGrande, of the Paramount Studios research department, said that the curved screen, aperture, and masking creates an illusion of a deep curve and helps to create a strong feeling of audience participation. It was suggested that the curvature be equal to the projection throw, or 1.2 times the projection throw.



At the present time the Paramount is undergoing alterations in order to be able to present horizontal VistaVision. Robert Shapiro, the theatre's managing director, revealed that it was necessary to take six feet off each side of the proscenium. The screen will be set back 12 to 15 feet from its present location and will have a curve of six to eight feet across the chord line. When completed the screen, which is being made by Raytone, will present a picture 35 by 64 feet.

When questioned about costs, Shapiro replied that while specific figures weren't available he expected the changes to run about $100,000. He also said that because of a balcony overhang the new installation will probably mean the loss of some orchestra seats.

In a discussion of the horizontal projectors LaGrande said that at the present time a set of projectors would cost $10,000 to $12,000, but he emphasized that this price would drop if the projectors were put on a production line basis. The double-frame projectors were said to take the same floor area and portholes as a standard projector. They use standard pedestals, standard lamphouses and 5,000 foot magazines which are mounted vertically in the usual manner, only the film passes horizontally through the projector.

LaGrande revealed that "Strategic Air Command," which is scheduled to open at the Paramount April 20, will use the standard single horn optical sound system. He pointed out, however, that since the sound recording and reproduction will be at 180 feet per minute in place of the normal 90 feet per minute, that the quality will be greatly improved. It was indicated that the use of directional sound was not being bypassed, and will be incorporated into the double-frame projection system as soon as the problems involved can be solved.

Although most of the discussion centered about the horizontal presentation of VistaVision, Jerry Pickman, Paramount Studios vice-president of advertising and publicity, made it clear that the company expects only a few very large first-run houses to be able to utilize this method, and that the standard VistaVision print would be equally as effective in the smaller theatres. Pickman also said that while it is suggested that the curved aperture system and screen be used, it was not mandatory.

Projection Arc Lamps

cally withdrawn by a mechanically induced air flow out through the stack.

The position of the positive arc crater is automatically maintained at the exact focal point of the reflector by means of the Strong Lightronic crater positioning system. The positive and negative carbons are advanced by separate motors. Once the arc has been struck, the crater positioning and the gap length are automatically maintained without manual adjustment.

The lamphouse measures 35 inches long by 24 inches wide by 28 inches high. This large space of 20,000 cubic inches combines with forced air cooling of the positive carbon feeding mechanism to assure low operating temperatures within the lamphouse even when burned at high amperage.

Two major improvements were recently announced by the manufacturer of the Super 135. It is now possible to obtain this lamp with a new 18-inch diameter f/1.7 reflector for use in theatres with f/1.8, f/1.7, or f/1.5 objective systems and projectors cleared for high-speed optical systems. Naturally, the lamp will also continue to be available with its regular 16½-inch diameter f/1.9 reflector.

With this new reflector and matching high-speed objective lens system, 31,000 lumens can be projected through a standard aperture or 38,000 lumens through a CinemaScope magnetic sound aperture using 10mm. Hitex carbons, while drawing 135 amperes.

All Super 135 lamps, with either size reflector, will be available for 9, 10, or 11mm. regular trims, as well as 10mm. Hitex operation. The lamps will also be equipped with a new ventilated reflector frame to insure cool operation of the reflector and rear section of the lamp, even at extreme angles of projection.

The second improvement is a special blower fan for keeping the Infra Ban Cooler at a lower operating temperature by removing light energy trapped in the filter itself.

Uniform coverage is essential. Areas missed by the sprayer may show normal growth unless roots extend into the treated area. Usual recommendations are one pound per 1,000 square feet or about 40 pounds per acre to achieve control for one season or longer. Where hard-to-kill weeds such as established deep-rooted perennials are present, or where longer control is desired, up to twice this dosage may be necessary.

Precautions With Weed Killers

With all herbicides, certain precautions are necessary. Do not spray weed killers on or near valuable plants or trees or in areas into which their roots may extend. Do not treat locations from which the chemicals may be washed into areas where roots of desirable plants may come in contact with the chemical. Apply chemicals with care to prevent the spray or dry powder from difting onto lawns, shrubbery, gardens, trees, or cropland. When working around irrigation systems, be careful not to contaminate the water with weed killer.

Weed killers may also contaminate fertilizers, insecticides, fungicides, or seeds, so they should be kept separate—in storage and in use. Sprayers which have been used for weed killers should not be used for spraying insecticides. fungicides or fertilizers on crops, ornamentals, lawns, etc. After you have used a "soil sterilant," be sure to clean the tank, pump and all lines, booms, and nozzles before using the same equipment to apply other weed killers to crops, lawns, or ornamentals.

In the hands of qualified applicators, chemical weed killers have become an important tool in sanitation and maintenance. They do a thorough job with minimum labor cost.

Chemical Fly Swatters

When DDT was released for civilian use after World War II, drive-in managers were among those who thought the fly and mosquito problem was over. A few puffs of this magic stuff seemed enough to keep the grounds free of flies, mosquitoes, and even ticks and other insects for most of the season.

But it soon turned out that chemicals were no substitute for good sanitary practices. Both flies and mosquitoes began to show natural resistance to DDT and some related chemicals. It took heavier dosages to do the job, and still the bugs came back faster than they had in the beginning.

Some new and more potent chemicals are on the horizon, but they are only in the experimental stage. Meanwhile, what can you do around your theatres to keep down flies and mosquitoes?

The first place to tackle fly and mosquito problems is at the breeding places. By cleaning up breeding places, you cut down the number of insects that have to be killed during the season—and make the job easier.

Houseflies breed in decaying organic matter. Because of their liking for unwholesome breeding places, they spread germs and filth in alarming measure. But flies can be reduced substantially by good "policing." Cleaning up all refuse promptly and burning or burying it eliminates the most common source of fly infestation. Rubbish piles, garbage, and dumps should be covered up. It is particularly important to keep the area clean around refreshment stands and food storages.

It would also be worthwhile to insist on control of any fly-producer like a dump within several blocks of an outdoor theatre, and by all means, explore the immediate vicinity for small "sneak" breading spots.

Mosquitoes Need Water

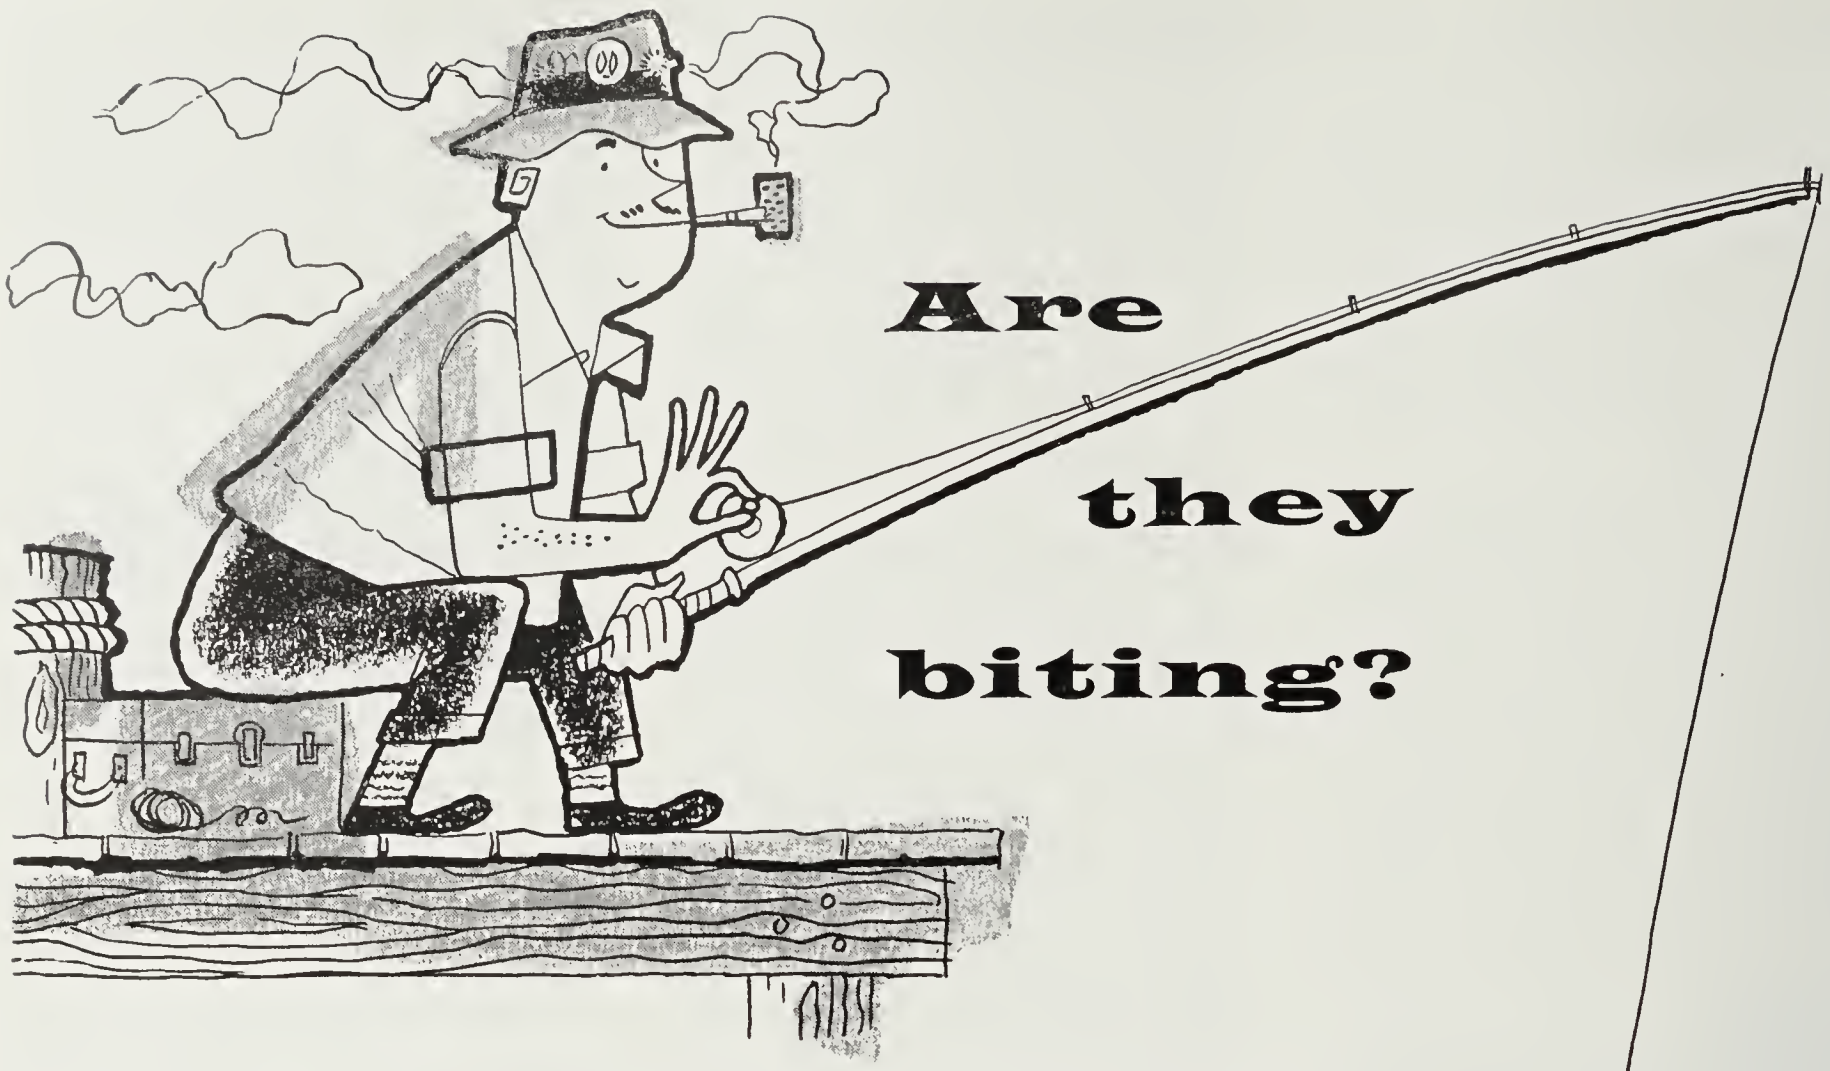
As for mosquitoes, it is well known that they lay their eggs where moisture conditions are most likely to be favorable for development of later stages in the life cycle. There is a period of a week or so in their lives, when mosquitoes cannot live without water. For this reason, elimination of standing water has long been stressed as one of the most important measures in mosquito control. Standing water does not necessarily mean acres of swampland. It includes water that may collect in empty tin cans in the trash pile, adjacent stagnant ditches, in puddles throughout the parking area, and in cisterns and rain barrels.

Where standing water cannot be eliminated, some other control measure is necessary. Covering the surface with oil is probably the oldest method of controlling mosquito larvae in water. More recently DDT, particularly in an oil carrier, has been widely used for water surface applications to destroy larvae and kill adult mosquitoes as they emerge.

In Dallas, Texas, the City Health Department has had good results in controlling mosquito larvae with an emulsion concentrate containing 24 per cent methoxychlor—one pint in five gallons of water. The same formulation also has given good kill among flies that were known to be resistant to DDT.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has also reported that a long-lasting DDT spray, applied to trees, bushes and grass in an outdoor area will cut down the number of mosquitoes during daylight hours for several weeks, while quick-killing pyrethrum or allethrin "space" sprays will control the pests during early evening when they are continuously flying.

Drive-In Buildings

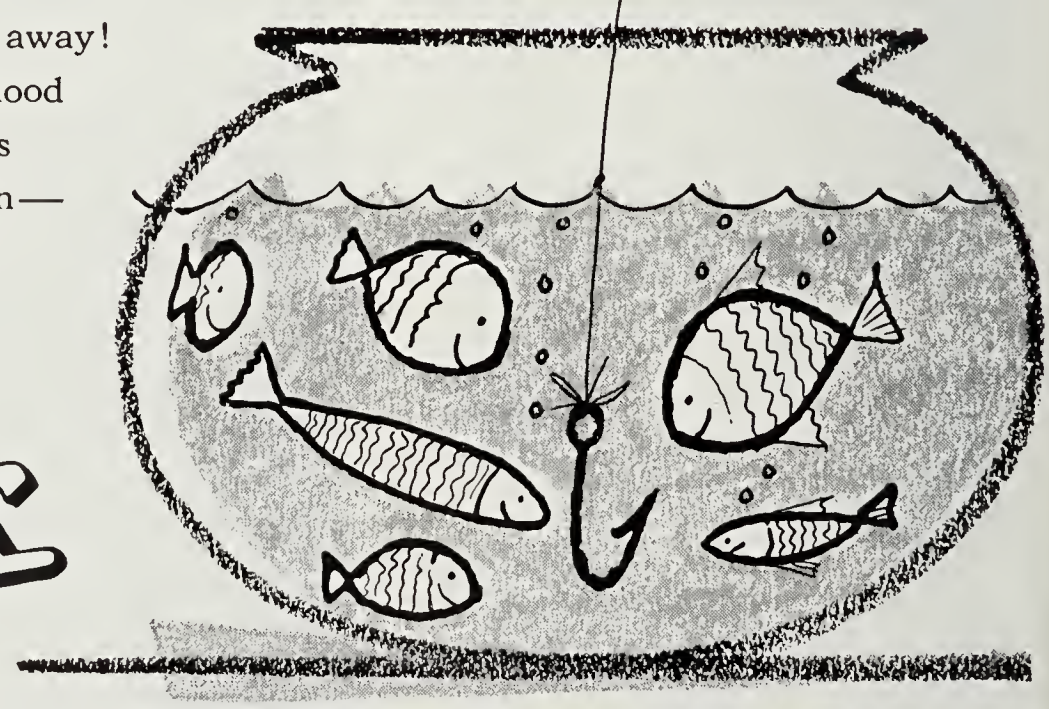


For refreshment stands and other buildings on the theatre grounds, screens on doors or windows are the most practical way to keep insects out. But they will not do the whole job. That's where chemical sprays help. For indoor spraying, a powder formulation of methoxychlor is one of the safest residual insecticides for fly control. (It is available in two formulations—a 50 per cent wettable powder and a 24 per cent emulsifiable oil.) Use three to four pounds of the wettable powder in ten gallons of water.

Fogging machines, vaporizers and other high-speed insecticide applicator units are specialized machinery, and should be set up and operated by experts. Chemicals for this type of equipment should be selected on the basis of safety to your employes and your audiences, as well as on their effectiveness against insects.

If the grounds are put in good shape at the beginning of the season, and good sanitation practices are carried out throughout the season, you can usually count on "chemical fly swatters" to do their part of the job.

This photograph offers an example of how one treatment with "Televar" weed killer cleaned up weeds and grass along a fence similar to the type found in many drive-ins. Results were swift and sure.



Are they biting?

The angler who's fishing in a bowl knows the fish are there—all he has to do is make 'em bite!

The exhibitor who plays wide screen films with directional sound is in the same "boat": he knows the market is there—all he has to do is make this market bite!

An outdated sound system is not sufficient "bait" for your patron. Although you hold out a tempting attraction, you won't "land" him with a system that's obsolete and lacks the magnetic appeal of true stereophonic sound!

Charlotte

Sixty-two exhibitors representing 300 theatres at a luncheon-meeting with Steve Broidy, president, Allied Artists, assured playing time support to the company's pictures. Broidy was introduced by Roy L. Smart, executive assistant to Mike F. Kincey, Kincey Theatre Circuit. Kincey was one of the circuit executive in attendance. Following the meeting, preceded by a screening of "An Annapolis Story" for the exhibitor group, Broidy left for Philadelphia, where he next met with exhibitors. He was accompanied by Morey R. Goldstein, vice-president and general sales manager, and John C. Flinn, director of advertising and publicity. An outspoken plea for some understanding by exhibitors of the movie producer's problems was made by Broidy, who in his address following a luncheon in the Barringer Hotel, gave a brief history of his company and its financial development. He said his studio would still make westerns and "Bomba, the Jungle Boy" movies. "But we will be turning out some that can hold their own with any other studio. We're not trying to compete with anybody. We just want to prove our case," he concluded. F. E. Dyer, branch manager, Allied Artists here, made the opening remarks. Goldstein, Also spoke on forthcoming product; the fact that the company is celebrating its 25th anniversary; and that it has launched a drive to reach major status.

David Williams, sales representative, IFE, returned from South Carolina where he has been contacting exhibitors at Charleston, S. C.; Orangeburg, S. C.; and Columbia, S. C. . . . Representatives of nine local theatre supply houses have written city and Auditorium-Colosseum authorities asking an opportunity to bid on equipment and furnishings of the new buildings. They are Charlotte Theatre Supply, Harris Theatre Sales, Inc., National Theatre Supply, Standard Theatre Supply, Theatre Equipment Company, Wil-Kin Theatre Supply, Inc., Dixie Theatre Supply, Independent Theatre Supply, and Southeastern Theatre Equipment Company. City Manager Henry Yancey said, "Of course they will have the opportunity. The bidding will be open to the public and advertised for seven days in the papers well in advance of bid openings. We've got to have the funds first." Some of the supply men, however, said it was their understanding that after the last million-dollar bond issue, specifications for the equipment were drawn and bids received from dealers outside the city only. They asked that bids be written for equipment "of equal quality and workmanship" to escape the possibility of a manufacturer drawing rigid specifications of an item that he alone may manufacture. W. F. Harris, Harris Theatre Sales, Inc., is a candidate for the City Council, and he pointed out that if he is elected he would not be eligible to enter bids on the equipment.

The popular movie and TV star, Ronald Reagan, was present for informal meetings with G.E. officials and personnel in the Hotel Selwyn. He was guest of honor at a luncheon in Myers Park Club; host was John D. Wallace, sales manager, apparatus sales division, G.E., here. The affair was attended by local officials. Reagan was also interviewed over WBTV radio station.

George Krevo, manager, Palace, Jacksonville, Fla., recently sponsored the first 1955 preliminary event for the selection of "Miss Jacksonville" to attend the "Miss America" contest this summer. Betty Jean Ost, seated, center, was chosen in the Jaycee-sponsored contest which packed the theatre and turned many persons away.

Seen along Film Row were R. D. White, Carolina, Allendale, S. C.; G. L. Faw, Albemarle Road Drive-In, Albermarle, N. C.; Vernon Faw, West 49 Drive-In, Asheboro, N. C.; L. R. Gilland, Myers, Ayden, N. C.; W. G. Fussell, Wonet, Bladenboro, N. C.; R. D. McGowan, Joyce, Spring Hope, N. C.; Cary Caudell, Danca, Wallace, N. C.; Pete Webb, Webb, Shelby, N. Jacksonville

Janice Claxton, WOMPI president, said that the group's installation of officers is scheduled for April 15 at the Roosevelt Hotel, with Variety Club Barker Ted Chapeau to act as master of ceremonies and with Laura Kenny, Atlanta, national WOMPI secretary, as installing officer. . . . Fred Hull, MGM branch manager, was guest speaker at a recent WOMPI luncheon.

Variety Tent 44 is due to receive a fine financial lift in the work of establishing a counseling service for pre-school-age blind children when all drive-ins of the city are to present at least one Saturday midnight show in the next three months for the benefit of Variety, announced C. H. Deaver, chief barker. Among those taking a leading part in planning the benefits are Carl Carter, Air Base and Ribault Drive-Ins; Deaver, Normandy Twin Outdoor; Bob Anderson, city manager, Jacksonville Theatre Company; and Horace Denning, Florida manager, Dixie Drive-Ins.

Present in Governor LeRoy Collins' office at Tallahassee, Fla., when he signed a proclamation designating March as Florida's "Go To The Movies Month" were Jack Wiener and Judson Moses, MGM exploiteers; Fred Hull, MGM branch manager; Jerry Gold, Pahokee, president, Motion Picture Exhibitors of Florida; French B. Harvey, Jacksonville, advertising and publicity director, Florida State Theatres; and Tommy Hyde, Tallahassee city manager, Talgar Theatre Company.

New head booker at United Artists is Doris Poston, following Walter McDonald's return to Atlanta. . . . Miss Poston's old job has been filled by Pat Tufano, formerly of ABC Theatrical Enterprises. . . . Bob Long has resigned from the Warners office staff to become the southern traveling auditor for Buena Vista. . . . Myron Eichler, 20th-Fox publicity man, came in from New York to schedule advance screenings of "A Man Called Peter" for ministerial alliances in this city, Miami, Fla., and St. Petersburg, Fla. . . . Frank McCarthy, U-I staff, New York, lunched with FST president Leon D. Netter and FST head booker Harvey Garland. . . . Reba Allen, FST staffer, and husband Herman Allen, spent their annual vacation working on a new summer home on Lake Broward in Pomona Park. . . . Jerry Earnest has taken Bob Skaggs' old job as manager, Florida Theatres. Earnest formerly worked in Dalton, Ga., for Martin Theatres. . . . A new manager trainee at the Florida is Jim Lewis, a transplanted New Yorker.

Louis J. Finske, FST vice president, and Harvey Garland, FST booking department head, attended Atlanta screenings of Allied Artists' "An Annapolis Story" and "Shotgun." . . . Horace Denning, Florida manager, Dixie Drive-Ins, left on a field trip to Daytona Beach and Orlando, Fla.

In St. Augustine, Fla., Bob Skaggs has been named city manager, Florida State Theatres property, with headquarters at the Matanzas, by J. L. Cartwright, Daytona Beach district manager, Florida State Theatres. Skaggs, formerly house manager, Florida, Jacksonville, replaces Norris McCollum, who was promoted to FST concessions assistant under Robert Harris at Jacksonville.

Josephine Smith returned to the Warners office to take Claude Browning's place when he moved up to replace Daisy McKay, contract clerk, when she left here to reside in Denver. . . . Jimmy Brooks is a new assistant cashier, MGM. . . . Jim Kirby, formerly of Cincinnati, is the new U-I salesman for the Florida west coast area. . . . Two of Florida State Theatres' suburban houses used art bookings with the growing realization that a market exists here for pictures that have a wide appeal among the city's cultural groups. . . . Al Hildreth, manager, San Marco, had a colorful sidewalk display of the work of local artists during his run of "Flamenco," together with a flag and posters from the Spanish Embassy in Washington. . . . Hal Stanton, manager, Edgewood, interested women's clubs and the Little Theatre in his art offering of "Bread, Love and Dreams."

George Krevo reported a packed house at the Palace when "Sinbad, The Sailor," a stage play produced by World Theatre Players, New York City, was offered at a Saturday matinee by the local Children's Theatre. Jim Williams, formerly of the Marion, Ocala, Fla., is Krevo's new assistant, Palace. . . . Leonard Allen, Paramount publicity man, Atlanta, spent several days here working on Florida exploitation programs for "The Conquest Of Space."

Colonel John L. Crovo, manager, Arcade, widely known as dean of Florida showmen, has retired from an active role in the industry, according to an announcement by Leon D. Netter, president, Florida State Theatres. Crovo began work at the turn of the century as a cub reporter on the old Louisville, Ky., Courier-Journal under famous editor, Henry Watterson. He soon went into Macauley's Theatre in 1902, beginning a career of nearly 53 strenuous years of undivided loyalty to show business. He managed the local Imperial in 1927, when "The Jazz Singer" began the era of "talking pictures." Crovo has long been known as pinch-hitter among theatre managers in that he has often been called upon to institute better booking and advertising policies at unsuccessful houses. This reputation has carried him to responsible executive posts from Louisville to Charlotte, to Greenville, S. C., to Montgomery, Ala., to Atlanta, to Dallas, to Memphis, to Miami, and finally again to this city. The "Colonel" gained his honorary title when it was conferred on him by a governor of Kentucky. He is noted here for his wide acquaintanceship with the patrons of the theatres he has "jacked up by their bootstraps" and for carrying out the theatrical axiom that friendship and success must go together. Crovo has been succeeded as manager, Arcade, by Al Hildreth, former advertising man, who has managed the local San Marco for the past year.

Memphis

Quick thinking of L. E. Robertson, Film Transit truck driver, at least momentarily has saved the life of next door neighbor Harold H. Wolfe, who is seriously burned. Upon returning home in the evening, Robertson smelled smoke and went to the house next door, ran inside the bedroom of Wolfe, pulled the blanket off, and the mattress started blazing. He half carried and half dragged him onto the porch, covering him with blankets until the ambulance came. . . . The Gem, Jackson, Tenn., was destroyed by fire on March 16 . . . Local ministers have been invited to an advance preview of "A Man Called Peter" at the Crosstown. . . . Jack Sallee, manager, Ruffin, Covington, Tenn., who is only 23, but can turn out a song in 10 minutes, evidently turned out a good one; because it is now third place in the nation in hillbilly numbers. "You're A Heartbreaker" is so successful, Sallee is negotiating with Red Foley to record some of his religious numbers. . . . Announcement of new management for J. Fred Brown's theatres, the Nevada and Gem, Prescott, Ark., was made. Zack Fine will take over April 1 replacing Jeb Wylie, who accepted the position of secretary-manager, Prescott Chamber of Commerce.

Only a month and the double feature has returned to most suburban houses. . . . Allied Artists branch manager Bailey Prichard made a quick trip by plane to Atlanta to a hurriedly called sales meeting, gone one day and back the next. . . . Memphians were saddened by the death of Variety Club member Gus Haase, who was a leader in many of the major real estate developments, including the Crosstown and the Park Plaza Shopping Center. . . . Memphis Better Films Council has called off a protest to Mayor Tobey on censorship of "Bamboo Prison." . . . "The Three Flying-Fish," John Coll, George Little, and Danny Wahlquist, all Paramount shippers, will attempt to bring fame and fortune to Memphis, their ski club, and Film Row on June 5 when they try a 328 mile trip from Grand Tower, Ill., to McKellar Lake on water skis. If they make it, it will be a new world distance record on skis.

Visitors on the Row were Frank Patterson, City, Junction City, Ark.; Bem Jackson, Honey, Indianola, Miss.; Joe Davis, Delta, Ruleville, Miss. Valerie Gullett, Benoit, Benoit, Miss.; H. G. Walden, Bay, Red Bay, Ala.; H. G. Helms, Hill, Scotts Hill, Tenn.; W. L. Landers, Landers, Batesville, Ark.; William Elias, Murr, Osceola, Ark.; Moses Sliam, Lux, Luxora, Ark.; S. W. Lancaster, Hoxie, Hoxie, Ark.; and Mrs. H. A. Fitch, Erin, Erin, Tenn. . . . Valerie Sanders, former inspectress, Republic, replaces Mary Espey, who resigned at Allied Artists. . . . Edwin Howard, Press-Scimitar, reports that an honest to goodness press agent could get no publicity for "The Long Gray Line," to open at the Malco. The press agent, Milt Mohr, Columbia, wanted to get arrested for painting a long gray line to the Malco. He checked with the police department to see it they'd arrest him and they said no, but he'd better not actually deface the street, and why not just pretend and have a picture made of a policeman warning him not to paint a long gray line down Main Street? Milt wanted to know if the Press-Scimitar would go for this, and was advised no, but that it would be real news if he really painted the line and really got arrested. No line for the picture.

New Orleans

Agnes Garcia, former secretary to Gaston J. Dureau, Jr., president, Paramount Gulf Theatres, has taken on a part time position at Southeastern Theatre Equipment. . . . William Holliady, Paramount's manager, was on a trek in the territory. . . . Thank you Alton Dureau, Masterpiece Pictures field representative, for your renewal subscription to MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR.

Amanda Gaudet, chairman, ways and means committee, Women of Motion Picture Industry, assisted by chairman of board Augie Woolverton, made arrangements for a book review in Room A, New Orleans Hotel. Mrs. C. C. Hensen will review Hamilton Basso's "View From Pompey's Head." Tickets are $1 each. There will be free refreshments and an entrance prize. Proceeds will be used to help the clubs various charitable projects. Several of the members have dislayed personal activities to contribute to the club's coffer. Amanda Gaudet, NSS, rates a round of applause for her contribution of $25, derived from orders for Mardi Gras coat lapels. Now her after work hours are spent taking orders for seashell earrings and pins, which profits she'll also turn over to the club. Jackie Thon, Paramount, also rates praises. Her contributions added up to $44 for sale of candy and rabbit novelties. Jenette Howard, Warners, presented the club with $7.20 procured from sale of candy. Then there is $24 from the recent cooking school sponsored by NOPSI, at which approximately 65 members attended, and the many who did not attend penalized themselves by donating the admission price.

Oscar A. Morgan, right, Paramount general sales manager in charge of Paramount News, recently received in New Orleans from David L. McGuire, representing the Mayor, an award by International House for his cumulative assistance to civic projects for the city and Latin America.

Republic's pilot Leo Seicshnaydre was on a trek in the territory. . . . Louis Adolph is building a brand new theatre in Venice, La.

If there is something new to add to the attraction of theatre operation, you can bet that Ed Fessler and Mike Ripps will come up with it first. Their newest introduction is the Do Cinema 16 mm. show case in the auditorium of their Twin Do Drive-In, Metairie, La., which opened with the original film version of "A Star Is Born." The modern, air-conditioned theatre, equipped with the latest RCA equiment, has a seating capacity of 800. "Top pictures of the past is our speciality," stated Ripps. Interested in the project, in addition to Ripps and Fessler, are Raymond and Mary Gremillion, operating under trade title, Niles, Inc.

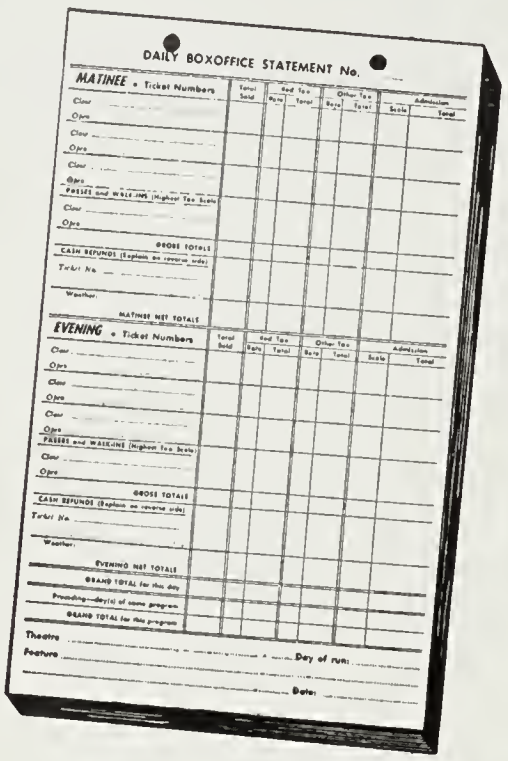
Gilbert Brandon, Film Transit, Inc., Memphis, rates a thank you for his two year subscription to MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR. . . . J. G. Broggi, buyer and booker for Francis Johnson's Navy Point, Warrington, Fla., advised Transway that operations have been suspended for an indefinite period. . . . C. J. "Jimmy" Briant, MGM pilot, after several weeks siege in the hospital, is up and around. . . . Dixie Theatres reopened the subsequent run Rex, Hammond, La., for four days a week showing.

Chief Ben American Horse and his granddaughter, Princess Darlene Rooks, were in town to whoop it up for "Chief Crazy Horse," which opened at the Joy. . . . Jack Auslet rounded out his 78th birthday by joining the town's Irish in their parades and all day and night celebrations decked out in top hats and wearing green on St. Patrick's Day. Sixty-one of Auslet's 78 years were spent in show business.

Eric Johnston, president Motion Picture Association of America, while in attending the Inter-American Investment Conference at the International House, took time out to address the Young Men's Business Club on the subject, "The World Today." Among the guests were E. V. Richards, Jr.; Gaston J. Dureau, Jr., president, Paramount Gulf; C. J. "Jimmy" Briant, manager, MGM; William A. Briant, manager, 20th-Fox; T. J. Howell, Paramount Gulf buyer and booker; Father Edward Murphy; and Robert Elsasser, Chamber of Commerce.

Joe Hegeman, Columbia's local exploiteer and publicity director, is in Houston to unit-manage the shooting of "The Houston Story." . . . Exhibitors here on a trek from Alabama were Ed Fessler, co-owner, Do Drive-In, Mobile; Mr. and Mrs. Alex Gounares, Roxy, Mobile; Locke Bolen, Jackson; W. E. Limmroth, general manager, and his boss, Kenneth Giddens, Giddens and Rester Theatres, Mobile; and Fred McLendon and Al Morgan, Fred McLendon Theatres, Union Springs.

Our deepest sympathy to WOMPI members Lee Nickolaus, Lippert, and Claire Tremorel, UA, in the recent loss of their mothers, and to Corinne Bouche, MGM, in the loss of her husband.



Manager George Y. Harrell, Jr., Manley, was on a business trip in Alabama. . . . Warners southern district manager W. O. Williamson, Jr., was at the local branch. . . . Ike Katz, president, Kay Film Exchanges, was in from Atlanta. . . . Nick Bruno was on the Row introducing his new bride. He and papa Gasper operate the Bruno, St. Joseph, La.

Oscar Morgan, New York, Paramount short subject sales manager, was here to confer with branch manager William Holliday. With him was district manager Gordon Bradley, Atlanta. . . . Mike Ripps and Ed Fessler acquired the movie, "Garden Of Eden," for distribution in the New Orleans and Memphis territories. . . . Beryl J. Ansardi, daughter of E. M. Ansardi, Buras, La., theatreman, and John Paul Lott have set May 7 for their wedding day. . . . Betty and Milton Guidry announced the arrival of a baby girl, christened Joy Marie.

Arkansas

Little Rock

The introduction of a new city censorship ordinance, asking for more power for the Little Rock Censor Board came under heavy fire from exhibitors last week. L. L. Brickhouse, attorney, Rowley United, termed one provision in the new ordinance "dictatorial," while Sam Kirby, operator, Nabor, said that under the bill, the chairman could become another Lloyd Binford, who controls the Memphis Board. J. S. Carberry, city manager, Rowley United, asked why more power was requested for the board, pointing out that only one picture had been withdrawn in the last 25 years. One provision would make it mandatory for all theatre advertising to note for what type of audience each film is suitable. Carberry noted that his circuit had been the only one to denote audience classification in its advertising.

Miami

Lou Gillman was appointed chairman, Variety Club Tent 33's Old News Boys Day on April 4, when a special edition of The Miami Daily News will be peddled for benefit of Variety Children's Hospital. Members of the women's committee have named Mesdames Daniel Herman, Robert Tietze, and E. J. Melniker as respective chairwomen for Miami Beach, Coral Gables, and Miami areas for the event. Ladies will help solicit papers, collect donations, and add to the general interest. Mrs. Billie Kopplin and Stanley Stern have been named co-chairman of the Tent's forthcoming duplicate bridge tournament to be held April 11. The initiation of new members took place March 30. Victor Levin has been appointed the Tent's fixer for the sixth straight year, according to an announcement from Chief Barker Maurey Ashmann. Levine is a prominent local attorney.

Brad Albury, Wometco accounting department, was back at work after a long siege of illness. . . . Tom Rayfield, manager, Carib, Miami Beach, Fla., achieved much newspaper publicity in connection with his special showing of the short subject "Undersea Conquest," featuring the Pinder Brothers, local lifeguards, and showing the catching of a 500-pound fish, skin-diving, etc. This pre-release showing brought much favorable comment.

Enoying a Miami Beach vacation is Irving Mack, owner Filmack Trailer Corporation, Chicago, and Mrs. Mack.

NEWS OF THE Territory

BRANCHES

Cincinnati

Virtually all drive-ins in this area are now open, many of them with new projection equipment and wide-screens, and all are anticipating good post-Easter business if the weather is favorable. Business in local houses was reported to have been less affected by the Lenten season than usual, and with a number of new top films booked for upcoming weeks, the outlook is considered very favorable for continuing good boxoffice.

City Manager C. A. Harrell has reappointed John E. Krebbs, Harry Williams, and Garland C. Jones as members of the Board of Examiners of Motion Picture Operators. Their pay is $5 each a meeting. . . . "Don't try to be a hero," Marvin Morris, floor manager, downtown Keith, was told by a bold robber who waved a revolver in the face of Mrs. Colleen Ross, cashier, and then fled with $129.90 she handed him. Only minutes before, Morris had taken $250 in receipts to an office safe.

Murray Baker, area sales rep, IFE, reports booking "Aida" into the Esquire, local art house, and the Bexley, Columbus, O., for Easter week openings, and "Bread, Love and Dreams" into the Best, Charleston, W. Va., and a number of other area houses for late April openings.

Exhibitors in were John Carey, Wheelersburg, O.; Joe Goldstein, M. J. Gordon, and Tom Alley, Cleveland; Ted Pekras, Jack Needham, Harry Schwartz, and Frank Yassenoff, Columbus, O.; Delmar Walker, McConnelsville, O.; H. P. Long, Ironton, O.; Ray Laws, Lebanon, O.; Chalmers Bach, Eaton, O.; R. A. Emmerick, Germantown, O.; George Turlukis, Hamilton, O.; H. C. Hugh Gooding was forced to close his house at Augusta, Ky., temporarily to clean up after the recent Ohio River flood. . . . William Forg, manager, nabe Valley, has returned from a vacation in Las Vegas, Nev.

Cleveland

Downtown local theatres cooperated with the Cleveland Transit System to introduce the new rapid transit whose effect on them is dubious, because it reduces the number of surface buses with regular downtown stops in favor of the new quick service which delivers its passengers a considerable distance from the theatre area. To reach the theatres from the Terminal of the rapid transit, it is necessary to transfer to a shuttle bus and pay an added three cents. Whether the public will accept the added cost of transportation plus the effort of transferring, remains to be seen. But in the public spirit, all of the theatres ran special trailers urging people to use the rapid, decorated their marquees with multi colored banners and on the day of inaugurating the service, loosed several hundred balloons containing free theatre passes in the downtown area.

In a panel discussion of movie censorship in the Higbee Lounge, sponsored by the Motion Picture Council of Greater Cleveland, Joseph A. Thiel, attorney and proponent of movie censorship, made the statement that police power supercedes the Constitution of the United States. He contended that "just as it is the right of the state to legislate on public health and safety, it is also the right of the state to legislate to protect morals by pre-censorship of motion pictures." Irwin S. Haiman, also an attorney, violently opposed movie censorship as an abridgement of the Constitution's first and 14th amendments which guarantee freedom of communications. He also takes issue with his opponent in the relationship of police power versus the Constitution. "Police power definitely does not supersede the Constitution," he claimed. "We fight for freedom of the press. We do not censor books, or radio, or TV. What makes movies different from these? And since when is it not the law of the land that a man is innocent until proven guilty? Pre-judgement is not the American way of life. If a movie is objectionable there is a judicial process of stopping its exhibition," As for protecting the youth against certain types of pictures, you, as mothers, can regulate the situation either by personal supervision over what your children shall see, or, if necessary, by recourse to the law to stop the showing of a picture. "But don't ask five political appointees to decide what you can see on the motion picture screen." C. Howard Allen, Jr., a book publisher, was moderator. Miss Virginia Beard, president, Motion Picture Council of Greater Cleveland, and head, visual education department, Cleveland Public Library, presided at the meeting attended by more than 100 members and guests.

Wind storms caused damage to two drive-ins and one conventional theatre in this area. Drive-ins which had their screen towers blown down were the Starlite, Newcomerstown, and the South Drive-In, Marion. The roof of George Manos' Ritz, Newcomerstown, also suffered damage. . . . Jack Armstrong, who owns and operates a chain of 12 theatres in the Cleveland exchange area, announces plans are proceeding to build a new 300-car drive-in in Napoleon. . . . M. B. Horwitz, president, Washington Circuit, departed for his postponed vacation in Hot Springs, Ark.

Two Judges Clash In Censor Hassle

COLUMBUS, O.—In a sharply-worded letter to Judge Clayton Rose, Franklin County Domestic Relations Court, opposition to the newly formed Committee For Decent Motion Pictures in Ohio was expressed by Judge Hoy L. Russell, Holmes County Probate and Juvenile Court. Judge Russell has served eight terms as a member of the Board of Directors of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. He has been owner, Russell, Millersburg, O., for 30 years and has operated the house for the greater part of that time. He noted that existing laws protected citizens against indecent films and that only five states considered censorship necessary.

The committee said it will fight for legislation providing for "examination" by the State Department of Education of all movies shown in Ohio. The committee said it preferred to use the word "examination" rather than "censorship." Judge Rose explained, "We think of censorship as forbidding something bad. We want 'examination' for approval of what is good."

Several powerful Ohio groups have representatives on the committee. Those include the Ohio Congress of Parents and Teachers, the Catholic Church, Ohio Council of Churches, Ohio Juvenile Judges, Ohio Child Conservation League, and Fraternal Order of Police.

Mrs. W. Andrew Martin, past president, Ohio Child Conservation, has been named committee chairman. Judge Rose, spokesman for the committee after its first meeting, said, "I feel definitely that many children are affected by the showing of indecent movies and by crime pictures. Movies have a terrific impact on youth. They must be regulated."

Judge Rose said the committee will fight for passage of "the best" of four bills on censorship now before the Ohio Legislature. The committee will fight attempts in the Legislature to repeal all existing censorship statutes, unless there is an adequate substitute.

"The Supreme Court of Ohio," said Judge Rose, "has said the present Ohio law was too general in terms. But it did not say the law is unconstitutional, nor has the U. S. Supreme Court, so far as I can find out, said the states could not regulate, control, or censor movies."

Father John C. Staunton, of the Ohio Catholic Welfare Conference, said, "The Hollywood Code can't do the job. It's up to the state." The committee cited the "alarming increase in juvenile delinquency" with "some cases directly attributed to the ideas received from motion pictures." It said the number of foreign films had increased, "many of which definitely need careful study and examination."

Judge Russell took issue with many of the charges and the entire concept of censorship in the communications field.

Nat Wolf, former Warner Ohio zone manager, is now affiliated with Theatre-Craft Seating Company, Macedonia, O., which replaces damaged threatre seats, matching the upholstery of the auditorium. . . . Irving Field, who claims to have developed an all-purpose projection lens adaptable to both 2-D and CinemaScope, demonstrated it for the Wollensack Optical Company, Rochester, N. Y. . . . Practically all local theatres responded to the invitation of manager I. J. Schmertz, 20th-Fox, to attend a meeting in the 20th-Fox screening room for an exposition of the company's advertising program for "A Man Called Peter." Sol Gordon, 20th-Fox territorial publicity director, made the presentation, exhibiting the six national magazines each of which will run full pages in color during March and April. Local representatives of Life, the American Weekly and Seventeen supplemented his talk with statistics on circulation and readership of the magazines involved. An invitational screening attended by members of the clergy and representatives of educational institutions was held at the RKO Palace.

The West Side Drive-In, threatened with closing the past two seasons because of encroachment of the enlarged Cleveland Hopkins Airport, opened, and, at the rate the airport constrction is going, it will remain open all this season. . . . Salesmen's Club of Cleveland elected a new slate of officers. They are president, Jim Levitt, U-I city salesman; first vice-president, Sol Gordon, Allied Artists; second vice-president, Irving Marcus, National Screen Service; secretary, Robert Blitz, Warners; and treasurer, Sam Lichter. Board of directors serving this year are Danny Rosenthal, United Artist branch manager; Nat Barach, NSS branch manager; Edwin R. Bergman, U-I; Justin Spiegle, Republic, and Jack Lewis, RKO. Outgoing president is M. J. Glick.

Wedding bells will ring out on May 29 for Marshall Fine, Associated Theatres, son of the circuit's president Meyer Fine, and Patricia Crow, McKeesport, Pa. A six weeks honeymoon trip abroad will follow the ceremony. . . . Bob Bial, Luthi Studios, flew to Florida to drive Paul Gusdanovic's car home while Paul and his wife make the trip by plane. . . . For whatever it means, employes of the Palace and Marion, Marion, O., have been given two weeks notice. It is rumored that threat of closing is to effect elimination of the local admission tax. Both houses are operated by United Detroit Theatres.

Max Mink, manager, RKO Palace, booked a cartoon program to appeal especially to the young fry. Twelve Disney cartoons were shown with "Chief Crazy Horse" as the feature attraction. . . . Word was received here that Nat Rosen, former manager, State, Cuyahoga Falls, O., died in Florida.

IFE vice-president Seymour Schussel was in town for one day. . . . Leo Greenfield, Buena Vista district manager, announced the appointment of Ted Levy as sales representative in Detroit and Bill Garner as Cincinnati sales representative. Both are well known in film circles. Levy was formerly with U-I in Detroit, and Garner was with 20th-Fox in Cincinnati.

Someone walked out of the Palace lobby on a recent Saturday night with a life-size beaverboard cutout of Jane Russell clad in a bathing suit. Glued to the bathing suit as props in a guessing-game promotion were 700 pennies.

Detroit

Ten area drive-ins opened, including the Dearborn, Westside, Fort, Jolly Roger, Bel-Aire, East Side, Gratiot, Mount Clemens, Grand River, and Town. The Pontiac Drive-In, Pontiac, Mich., also opened with a two column ad proclaiming their reaffiliation with Local 620, Motion Picture Operators Union, with whom they ended last season squabbling.

The big Michigan, United Detroit chain, was host to a 10 a.m. fashion show every day the week of March 14. . . . A special 9:30 a.m. showing of "A Man Called Peter" was screened for the Detroit Council of Churches. Protestant officials from all over the area were invited. . . . At a Sheriton-Cadillac lunch, Allied Artists president Steve Broidy and vice-president Morey Goldstein discussed forthcoming productions with the trade.

A Communion breakfast is planned for Catholic members of the industry sometime in April. The original yearly series of breakfasts, started in Windsor, Ontario, will with this event jump the river to include Detroit. Planning committee includes Frank P. Henneberger, Jam Handy; Patrick J. Blaney, United Film Service; Andy Farkas, Equitable Life Assurance Society; Mat Dennis, Windsor Star; Giles McMann, CKLW; and Bud Lynch, TV announcer. Heading the committee are Edgar Lamoureaux, Palace, Windsor, and Thomas P. Allen, United Film Service, chairmen; Ernest Conlon, Allied Theatres of Michigan, program; James T. Hooper, Centre, Windsor, tickets; and William Rabe, University of Detroit, publicity.

The Music Hall has resumed student showings of "Cinerama Holiday" Saturday mornings and is booked through the next six weeks. 300 carriers from The Toledo Blade bussed to Detroit and so enjoyed the bobsled run that manager George Sander reran it for them. Frank Upton, regional manager, has been to Cincinnati and St. Louis where he replaced Ambassador managing director Ray Connor with William Levine. . . . The Detroit Variety Club's first annual Easter party will be held April 15 at the Veterans Memorial Building. A family party, it will feature Soupy Sales and Auntie Dee, popular youngster TV fare. Jack Zide is ticket chairman. The club has 100 tickets for the opening game of the baseball season. Limit is two per member, with Carl Buermele handling. Milt Zimmerman is already planning the annual golf party to be held at Tam 'O Shanter Country Club again this year. . . . United Detroit Theatres will give a staff party at the Variety Club headquarters on April 30.

Silver Tells SW Zone Meeting To Concentrate On Getting Kids

PITTSBURGH, PA.—"Theatre managers on today's showmanship team must actually execute a perfect double play to keep child attendance on an ever increasing upward trend," declared M. A. Silver, Stanley Warner zone manager addressing 50 key city and community house men.

According to Silver, this double-barrelled attack "involves keeping those children between the ages of approximately nine and 14, for whom the novelty of home television entertainment has worn off, coming to our theatres, as the trend indicates they are doing, and accomplishing this by orginating and programming the proper type of films, combinations, promotions, and activities. Thus the interest of this age group will be heightened and gradually maintained for our own good as the children grow into teen-agers and young men and women, our adults of tomorrow.

"Secondly," Silver pointed out to those present, "we must reach out for the younger element, the kiddies aged three to eight. These are the children who, as of now, largely have no knowledge that a theatre or a giant panoramic screen exists for movie entertainment. This group is being raised via the miniature home screen of television. To get these children into our theatres extra careful planning of approved, suitable film fare must be foremost in our minds, remembering, also, that these youngsters must be brought, for the most part, to the theatre by their parents, a mother, or an older child, and that the screen fare must be of the right type in the mind of this guardian."

Along these lines a tremendous barrage of promotional endeavor aimed at spurring increased child attendance will highlight the Stanley Warner Pittsburgh Zone's "Spring Festival" of showmanship, opening April 3 and running for three months, through June. This all-out, concerted effort to press for and improve the upward trend of small fry theatre attendance will be a most important segment of Stanley Warner managers' duties during the showmanship campaign.

The publicity team or Henry Burger and Phil Katz has already put into motion a unique seat-selling tie-up with Marty Wolfson, Musical Sketchpad television personality of Station KDKA-TV, whose strongest forte rests with the children in the three to eight bracket. He has been booked for 16 consecutive Saturday morning stage shows. His appearances are being backed heavily by promotion on the part of the television station and his sponsor, Tip Top Bread, with thousands of heralds and window cards, sound trucks and store tieups. First experiences have indicated that children are attending with their mother, older sister or other grown-up, making for added revenue. They receive a special paint book, a selection of popular trading cards and a miniature loaf of bread as premiums for attending the special Saturday morning show.

With Silver, addressing the men gathered at the confab, was Harry Goldberg, national ad-publicity director, Stanley Warner, who said, "Regardless of other types of entertainment, it is universally acknowledged that there is nothing to surpass the grandeur, scope, and sharpness of large screen theatre presentations."

At the speakers' table were also Ben Steerman, assistant zone manager; Saul Bragin, chief booker and buyer; and district managers Dick Wright, Ohio; Frank Harpster, West Virginia; and "Dinty" Moore, city and Mainline.

Support was pledged the managers by the bookers for strongest product possible. The Stanley Warner booking staff present included Marvijn Samuelson, assistant to Bragin; Bud Gilliam and Gus Davis, features; and Bernie Elinoff, shorts.

sonalities and representatives of the book dealers, who flooded over 1,000 outlets with appropriate tie-in cards and displays and arranged for the main window of one of the city's busiest variety stores, where an effective, eye-catching display was set. An autographing party was also set up and over 100 patrons were awaiting his arrival at Walleck's. A big welcome streamer and appropriate window greeted Uris. At the same time, the Stanley's ad-publicity team of Henry Burger and Phil Katz, arranged a search for "Miss Battle Cry," with the winner to fly to Atlantic City on an all-expense paid vacation. Another cooperating merchant supplied the luggage. The tie-in was with the Bill Brant Television Show and over 450 entries resulted. A screen trailer in the theatre and a good lobby display enhanced the contest pull. Radio and TV commercials played a big part in the campaign and a special coloring contest with the Pittsburgh Press children's section drew about 8,000 entries. Cash and other awards were offered. A prominent coin and stamp dealer plugged a contest in his window; and also set up an attractive case of coins, stamps and medals in the theatre lobby and the Marines set up and manned a clever, simulated communications center in advance and during opening week. A huge "windbreaker" in the theatre lobby had been attracting a lot of advance notice and 15 of the Stanley Warner Pittsburgh Zone theatres cross-plugged the downtown Stanley engagement via trailers on their screens and special lobby displays.

Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, in convention here, rescheduled its agenda to permit its 150 members to meet with Steve Broidy and Morey R. Goldstein, Allied Artists president and vice-president and general sales manager, respectively, who were in on their nation-wide tour heralding the company's vastly expanded program. The theatre owners representing 400 houses were guests of the AA executives at a luncheon following a screening of "An Annapolis Story" and "Shotgun." John C. Flinn, AA director of advertising and publicity, was also present.

Shipping Union Sues Columbia

CHICAGO—A $750,000 suit was filed in Federal Judge La Buy's court against Columbia by Patrick J. Cullnan, Jr., individually and as president, Local 374, International Brotherhood of Longshoremen, and Sylvester A. Furst, secretary-treasurer of the union. Asher, Gubbins, and Segall represent the plaintiffs. An injunction is also asked against further showings of the motion picture, "On the Waterfront," which is named as the basis for the suit.

The complaint states that the picture "depicts Longshoremen's Local union 374" and its officials "as being hoodlums and gangsters" and that the union is "under the control of hoodlums, gangsters and strongarm men who disregard completely the interests of the members" and who "use the union only as a means of extorting and obtaining funds for their own personal use."

The complaint furthur recites, "Said film depicts the illegal, corrupt, and dishonest operations of the officers. . . . through pictures and wards" and "shows that the union and its officers are being investigated by a public investigation commission,"and that "through clever and very talented acting and portrayal the officers of the union are represented . . . as being stern, callous, brutal, hard hearted, and savage men.

"To maintain and continue the business of said Local, it is necessary that it enjoy and continue to hold the confidence of its members. . . ." and that Columbia "maliciously and wickedly intended to injure, cause irreparable damage to, and destroy the business of said Local."

Dallas

The Golden Jubilee Banquet honoring Claude C. Ezell was attended by more than 350 members of our American motion picture industry, representatives of the Dallas Variety Club, which he founded, and other well known dignitiaries. George Murphy, MGM star and good-will ambassador for the industry, served as toastmaster. Speakers for the evening included RKO ex-President Ned Depinet; Variety's John Rowley; William Gehring, general sales manager for 20th-Fox, representing Spyros Skouras, who was ill; Judge William McCraw; and Interstate's R. J. O'Donnell. All lauded Ezell's part in the growth of the film industry and each recalled human interest stories which had happened as their paths had crossed through the years. Many of those attending the banquet were also in town for the three conventions, Texas Allied Theatre Owners Association, Texas Drive-In Theatre Owners Association, and the MGM Exhibitor Workshop.

Cleo Moore, star of Columbia's "Women's Prison," was at the Rialto for a lobby party preceding the opening of the picture here. . . . Carl D. The film is being produced by Norwanda Productions, Inc., and Universal Productions, Inc., headed by Mrs. Ollie M. Jones and Bill Locklin. A Dallas premiere of the film is scheduled for May 1, after it has been edited and a musical score added in Hollywood. This is the first 35 mm. feature film produced in Dallas, according to Mrs. Jones.

Nearly 100 exhibitors and other theatre executives were on hand to greet Steve Broidy, Allied Artists' president, and Morey R. Goldstein, vice-president and general sales manager, when they launched a 14-city tour, during which they tell the story of the new Allied Artists. There was an early morning screening at the Tower Theatre of the "An Annapolis Story" and "Seven Angry Men." There was a luncheon at the Town and Country Restaurant arranged by James A. Prichard, southern division sales manager. At the luncheon, Broidy and Goldstein discussed the company's plans for those pictures screened as well as three forthcoming productions, "The Big Combo," "The Warriors," and "Shotgun." At the luncheon each was given a big 10-gallon Texas hat, making them honorary Texans. John C. Flinn, director of advertising and publicity, is accompanying them on the entire nationwide trip.

Thirty-two managers from the Commonwealth Circuit, consisting of only outdoor men, convened for the MGM Workshop and their own convention. The meeting opened with Bob Shelton, president, Commonwealth, making some pertinent remarks about the Commonwealth, family and the virtues and ambitions that Commonwealth desires to see in effect in drive-in operations this spring. Shelton said, "Commonwealth is a family that believes in ideas and the execution of ideas can only come about through the cooperation of every man in the organization. M. B. Smith, director of advertising, acted as master of ceremonies during the sessions. He spoke to the managers about the freedom of ideas and Commonwealth's desire to see their manpower have a chance to gamble with all of the showmanship at their command. The theme of the meeting was a search in all departments for new angles that will help improve the customer's impressions of drive-in operations. Courtesy and service are to get extra attention and drive-in managers were encouraged to stress slanted appeal toward family entertainment. The quality of the motion picture, the manager's knowledge of it, and the angles used to stress its entertainment values will receive high attention this year. Managers were also encouraged to survey policy with an extremely critical eye and to "let your voices be heard in the highest channels of your organization!" K. K. King, manager, Rialto, Searcy, Ark., presented the Brown and Bigelow calendar idea which is being tested in nine towns in the company. Fred Muhmel, head, concession department, gave a detailed talk on new equipment and ideas. He displayed some clever 14-inch circles in five colors plugging various concession items. Dick Wommack, manager, Pawnee Drive-In, North Platte, Neb., gave a resume of "gage and gimmicks" which can be used to further showmanship efforts. Martin

Stone appeared before the managers with some ideas about how tape recordings can be used to improve drive-in operations and concession sales. A luncheon was held for all managers, home office personnel in charge of departments, bookers, and the film buying staff. Dick Orear spoke about the maintenance problems. Dale Stewart, Riverside Drive-In, delivered an address about "Concession Stand Operations," M. B. Smith spoke to the managers about "The Power of Newspaper Ads," "Your Opening Newspaper Campaign—Drive-In Style." Managers were given a layout of proofs for a nine-day buildup for the opening of all drive-ins in their local newspaper. Those having weekly papers were shown how to split the ads and scatter them in prior issues to the opening date.

Milwaukee

Boston Crosstown

In connection with the opening of the Japanese film, "Gate Of Hell," at the Exeter Street, Miss A. Viola Berlin, managing director, staged a 5:30 p. m. screening followed by a Japanese-style supper at the Sheraton-Plaza Hotel. The affair was for the film press and critics, members and officers of the Japan Society of Boston, and several invited guests. Among the latter were Robert Treat Paine, Museum of Fine Arts, the Boston manager of Northwest Airlines that has scheduled flights to Tokyo, and Edward Harrison, national distributor, "Gate Of Hell." The Japanese supper was prepared by Miss Miwa, secretary, Japan Society of Boston, who asked Japanese students and members of the society to assist her, all gowned in their authentic Japanese costumes, making a colorful and attractive gathering. Miss Berlin graced the occasion as the hostess.

A managerial shift at the Beacon Hill places the 25-year-old Harry Harding as the youngest general manager of a downtown first-run in the city. Harding started his managerial career two years ago as assistant at the Beacon Hill, under Sam Richmond. He had had a background of legitimate theatre experience as an actor and as a stage manager as well as some night club entertainment work in this city and on Cape Cod. He had been connected with the Monomoy, a summer stock theatre, in Chatham on Cape Cod. Three months ago, after the resignation of Richmond as general manager, Beacon Hill, Harding was retained as assistant to the new manager, Anthony Zinn. When Zinn resigned, Benjamin Sack, owner, promoted Harding to the full managerial duties. His first significant move was the hiring of an assistant manager. He selected the services of Sebastiano "Jim" D'Angeli, former manager of a Howard Johnson stand. Together, these two men comprise the youngest managerial team in the city. The first program under the new setup at the Beacon Hill was the Greta Garbo film, "Camille," which opened to one of the best opening days in the history of the house.

All exhibitors, managers, and theatre owners in the Providence area were invited to a luncheon hosted by Embassy Pictures Corporation at the Hotel Sheraton-Biltmore today (March 30). The occasion is to outline the full campaign for "Davy Crockett, Indian Scout" which is booked in 25 day-and-date theatres for an April 13 showing. The film is backed by a huge local TV and radio campaign from stations WJAR-TV and WEAN, radio. There will also be a big newspaper campaign. Joseph E. Levine, president, Embassy, will address the group informally. Attending will be the TV and radio representatives, newspaper personnel and several local merchants, particularly

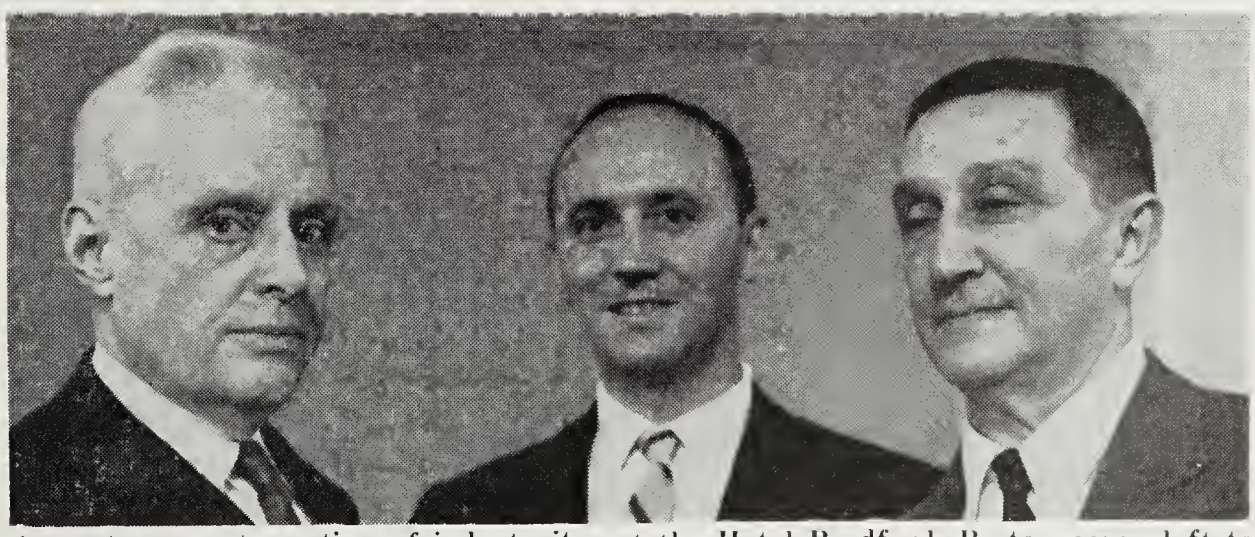
During the winter a record has been established for snow in the Presque Isle, Maine, area, according to exhibitor Charlie Brooks, who came here to attend the toll-TV meeting. More than 160 inches had fallen during the winter and five feet was still on the ground when Charlie took off for Boston. Was theatre business affected by the heavy snows? "Not much," was the answer, "We're used to it."

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts will again extend daylight saving time into October and most of New England will probably go along with the Bay State this year, according to Governor Christian Herter. Daylight saving starts Sunday, April 24, and closes the last Saturday in October. Governor Herter said that the New York City Council has approved extending daylight time through October and that the New England Governors' Council agreed some time ago to duplicate any action approved by New York.



Eliminations announced by the Bureau of Sunday Censorship included "Land Of Fury," parts 1 to 10 (Deletions: Eliminate scene showing Wayne and Mona going to ground after Wayne kisses Mona, in part 7; eliminate the word "adultery," which appears twice in part 7). U-I.

The Crown resumed operations following an eight-week remodeling program and change of management. Seating capacity was reduced to provide additional comfort, according to Joe Giobbi, who remains as house manager. Additional renovations include installation of air conditioning, CinemaScope screen and stereophonic sound. The structure was completely redecorated. A new concern, known as the Crown Company, headed by E. Pomeroy, has taken over the house on lease from the Post-Thompson estate. Terms were not disclosed. Previous operator was the Crown Management Company, headed by New Haven interests. Giobbi has been in the amusement field for some 30 years. New price scale is adults, 35 cents, from open to 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays; 50 cents, nights, Saturdays, and Sundays; children, 20, at all times. New screen size is 26 feet wide and 13.9 feet high, as compared to 15 feet wide and 11 feet high of the previous unit. The theatre is continuing on a subsequent-run policy. Giobbi tied-up with subcontractors on remodeling job for a full-page cooperative advertising layouut in The Hartford Times on opening day. State and civic officials, as well as industry and press, attended opening night ceremonies. MGM "Motion Picture Theatre Celebration" banners were displayed for half a block. Giobbi has arranged with vicinity landlords for parking facilities for 60 cars nightly.

Partner Suit Hits Hartford Owners

BLOOMFIELD, CONN. — Peter A. and Milton LeRoy, the Hartford father-and-son operating team, and the Blue Hills Drive In Theatre, Inc., Bloomfield, Conn., are listed as defendants in a Superior Court action brought by their partners, Philip W. Maher and Peter A. Sullivan.

In one count, Maher charges that he worked for the drive-in for a period of 41 weeks in 1951 and 1952, and that the sum of $6,225 due him in salary, has not been paid. His fellow plaintiff, Sullivan, alleges that he was voted $1,500 in 1952, $6,000 in 1953, and $6,000 in 1954, as manager of the theatre, but has received none of the 1952 amount, and of the $6,000 due in 1953, the Director of Internal Revenue was paid $1,200 in withholding taxes, but he received no money. Of the 1954 slice, he charges he received nothing, and he is not certain whether or not the taxes were paid. All he has at present is a note for $3,000, payable in June, 1955, he added.

Maher and Sullivan, in a third court, contend the firm was organized in 1952 with paid-in capital of $120,000, in form of 1,200 shares, with par value of $1,000. Of these, Peter LeRoy has 595; Milton LeRoy, five; Sullivan, 200; Maher, 400. In the agreement, division of ownership was to be split, one-half for the LeRoy interests and one-half for Maher and Sullivan.

The plaintiffs said that in 1954, it was voted to pay Sullivan a salary of $6,000, with another $6,000 to Milton LeRoy, and $12,000 to Peter LeRoy.

It is charged by the plaintiffs that the LeRoys have handled the business as their own private enterprise; that they have failed to give an annual report and failed to have an audit of the books; that they have been guilty of conduct "detrimental to the welfare of the corporation, of the plaintiff stockholders and of the general creditors." They further allege that the LeRoys have issued additional shares of stock to cancel debts to them of the corporation.

Maher asks $7,000 damages and Sullivan $14,000, with joint request that they be permitted to cancel debts to them by stock purchase to re-establish the 50-50 ownership between the LeRoys on one hand and themselves on the other.

The plaintiffs have been handed a temporary injunction by Judge Charles S. House, pending a hearing on their claim and on the request for an order permitting them to seize the books for an audit by a certified public accountant.

In retaliation, the father-and-son team of LeRoys asked that the injunction be dissolved due to the "flagrant misrepresentations" by Maher and Sullivan. The LeRoys further charged that Maher and Sullivan have "failed to conduct themselves properly as directors and officers and do not have clean hands in equity." They allege that Sullivan has been guilty of wasting corporation funds, in that his refusal to sign checks of the corporation brought about the levy of penalties by the Internal Revenue Bureau on unpaid taxes.

Claud Baruch, 20th-Fox's TV and radio department, announced his engagement to Susan Kaufman of New York. . . . At ceremonies held at the 20th-Fox home office, Mrs. Catherine Marshall, authoress, "A Man Called Peter," joined with 20th-Fox president Spyros P. Skouras in accepting the Parent's Magazine medal award for the film version of her story. Phil Willcox, magazine executive, made the presentation.

Leon L. Brandt Associates have been retained by Jose Kohn, producer of the Mexican-made, "Rebellion of the Hanged," to handle promotion and supervise distribution of the film in the U. S. and Canada. . . . The offices of Screencraft Pictures, Inc., are now located at 15 West 44th Street.

Mori Krushen, exploitation manager, United Artists, returned after visiting Indianapolis, Chicago, and Milwaukee to map territorial campaigns on forthcoming releases. . . . A. A. Ward, executive vice-president, Altec Lansing Corporation, and John K. Hilliard, the company's chief engineer, arrived from Altec's west coast offices in Beverly Hills, Cal., for a series of meetings with company officials.

C. S. Perkins, operating manager, Altec Service Corporation, returned from a trip to Chicago, where he conferred with F. C. Dickely, central division manager, and members of Altec's field engineering staff relative to forthcoming theatre sound installations in that area.

Henry Fonda, who has formed his own film company to produce six features in four years for United Artists release, returned from Europe accompanied by his wife. . . . Stanley Kramer, producer, "Not As A Stranger," arrived for conferences with UA executives on plans for the release of the film. He was accompanied by his wife.

Jack Cohn, executive vice-president, Columbia, recently signed for the company in the purchase of a 15-story and penthouse structure at 711 Fifth Avenue, New York, for its own occupancy. Seated next to Cohn is William Zeckendorf, president, Webb and Knapp, Inc., who negotiated transfer of ownership of the leasehold. Standing, left to right, are Kenneth H. Ripnen, president, architectural firm which will undertake a $3,000,000 imrovement program on the building; Richard D. Gittlin, president, Republic Funding Corporation, brokers; A. Schneider, vice-president and treasurer, Columbia; and Harry J. Takiff, assistant to the executive vice-president.

Chet Friedman, MGM's Canadian film press representative, left for his Toronto headquarters after spending a week here. . . . Terry Moore, 20th-Fox star, arrived from Hollywood to be on hand for the benefit world premiere of "A Man Called Peter," which bows at the Roxy March 31 under auspices of the Highland Fund of North America and the Caledonian Hospital, Brooklyn. . . . Al Lichtman, 20th-Fox director of distribution, left for Los Angeles for studio conferences concerning future production plans.

Jersey City

Diane Gordon, manager, Central, has been managing theatres since she quit modeling 14 years ago. Future campaigns she is planning, all of which combine civic endeavor with theatre publicity, are a "Miss Central Avenue" beauty contest in April in connection with the theatre's 40th anniversary; a fashion show with the Jersey City Junior Women's Club in May; and, possibly, a real wedding on the theatre's stage in June.

Spring proved changeable as several drive-ins reopened. The weather, which earlier had been balmy, turned cold and snow fell. Relightings included John Gardner's Turnpike, Westmere; Harry Lamont's Riverview, Rotterdam; and F. Chase Hathaway's Hathaway, North Hoosick, all in New York.

Jules Perlmutter expanded his drive-in operations by leasing the Spa, Saratoga, N. Y., operated since its opening in August, 1953, by Jerome Fuller. Perlmutter fixed April 15 as the resumption date. Spa accommodates about 400 cars. Tri-State Automatic Candy Corporation, which managed the concession stand under Fuller's regime, will continue to do so under Perlmutter's. Tri-State is picking up the other two drive-in accounts from Perlmutter, also. A Rochester company had serviced them.

Film Row registered sorrow over the death of Harvey English, president of the small-town circuit bearing his name, Hancock, N. Y., at the age of 55. English, who had undergone an operation two years ago, was at his desk the day of the passing. A graduate of Syracuse University, he taught school and served as a principal in the Hancock area before branching into exhibition. Capitol, Hancock, was the key house, but English operated others across the Pennsylvania border, and in Narrowsburg, Calicoon, Roscoe Manor, and Livingston. Survivors are his wife, a daughter attending Syracuse University, and a 15-year-old son. Attendees at the funeral included MGM manager Jack Goldberg and MGM salesman Ralph Ripps; Warner manager Ray Smith and Warner salesman Harry LaVine; U-I salesman Gene Lowe.

Ralph Ianuzzi, new Warners district manager, spent several days in this area. Branch manager Ray Smith introduced him to Variety Club members at a weekly dinner in Keeler's Restaurant. Ianuzzi succeeded Norman Ayers.

Morris Lefkowitz, RKO district manager, was another recent visitor for conferences with branch manager Max Westebbe. . . . 20th-Fox introduced Richard Young as replacement for Harold Ironfeld, Jr., booker-office manager since last August.

The Reverend Dan M. Potter, Protestant Council, is seen, left, in New York addressing 200 religious and civic leaders at a special showing of 20th-Fox's "A Man Called Peter." He asked each member of the audience to recommend the film to between 50 and 100 people in a unique word-of-mouth chain reaction program. Also at the screening were, center, Right Reverend Jonathan G. Sherman, Suffragan Bishop of Long Island, Episcopal diocese, and Reverend Ralph B. Nesbitt, associate minister, Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church; and, right, Potter; W. C. Michel, executive vice-president, 20th-Fox; and Arthur De Bra, community relations director, Motion Picture Association of America.

Ironfeld joined Columbia as salesman in the Syracuse district. Young, an ex-service man and son of a Washington trade paper correspondent, formerly was a student booker in the Boston exchange.

Mrs. Ann Joyce, Columbia branch manager Norman Jackter's Girl Friday, shared the spotlight with him at a Variety Club dinner. Praising Mrs. Joyce's valued service to the company for 14 years, Jackter presented her with a two-tone vanity case. She made a brief address of acceptance. The dinner, another in Tent Nine's "King and Queen for a Day" series, was well attended.

Strand presented Jack Baker's "Asylum of Horrors" at an 11:30 performance on March 25. Tickets, costing $1, were on sale at Stanley Warner Ritz and Madison, as well as Strand. Show, advertised as "Dr. Silkini's," includes a stage performance and screening of "Mummy's Ghost," starring Lon Chaney. It also played Stanley.

Clayton G. Pantages, salesman, has succeeded Nat Rosen as branch manager, 20th-Fox exchange. Rosen has been moved to Pittsburgh to serve the company in the same capacity there.

The trend of independent state exhibitors to place their accounts with buying and booking organizations was further accelerated when Donald Gilson contracted with Liggett and Florin, New York City, to service his Sunset Drive-In, Canton; Sunset Drive-In, Massena; Thousand Island Drive-In, Alexandria Bay; Bay, Alexandria Bay; and Paramount, near Alexandria Bay. This movement has been gaining momentum for several years. Recently, Smalley Theatres, headquartered in Cooperstown, N. Y., joined Upstate Theatres, Inc., mutual cooperative unit in Albany, to have the latter handle eight situations. Earlier, John Free shifted the buying and booking to the Pontiac, Ordensburg, N. Y., and Riverside Drive-In, outside that city, with Brandt Theatres, New York. Liggett and Florin also serve Harry Lamont theatres.

Over 10,000 employees of New York City theatres were treated to a "Busman's Holiday" by the Roxy recently as part of its day-long celebration of its 28th anniversary. Seen above are William Moclair, managing director, and screen star Gloria Swanson, cutting a jumbo birthday cake, pieces of which were distributed to patrons in attendance.

One of the largest state drive-ins will be built in Latham by Fabian Theatres at an estimated cost of $300,000. Joseph Wander, Albany realtor, announced the sale of 24 and-a-half acres for the theatre site had been negotiated by his firm, with Fred Hollis, Latham, as co-broker. Construction of the new theatre is to start this spring, and it will be ready in the fall. Leon M. Einhorn, local architect who specializes in drive-ins, has drawn plans. They include a 120-foot-wide screen and latest type cafeteria-type concession buildings, with glassed-in terraces.

The first intepretation of the Assembly-approved O'Connor-Noonan film licensing fee bill, that it would increase the cost to the industry, was somewhat corrected when Senator Fred L. Moritt, Brooklyn, asked for a "star" on the advancement to third reading in the Upper House and had a visitor explain the contrary goal was sought. Measure would reduce the charge by cutting the fee for "copies," Senator Moritt was told. It originated with an influential industry organization, according to Senator Moritt's caller. The veteran legislator opined that the bill was "ambiguous and badly drawn," but announced he would support same if convinced it would benefit the motion picture industry. State Education Department counsel, Dr. Charles A. Brind, Jr., made clear the measure did not originate with that organization. He doubted passage; said if this occurred, a memorandum in opposition would be filed with Governor Averell Harriman.

Collection of the disputed major breakage, fractions of half or more, on the five percent admissions tax in cities and counties of New York State, was authorized when Governor Averell Harriman signed the bill against which exhibitors waged a strong but hopeless fight. In a memorandum accompanying approval, it was "estimated that the 'breakage' amounts to $3,000 a day in additional revenue to New York City, and to lesser amounts in other communities where the legislation is applicable." These are Binghamton, which enacted the admissions impost in 1949, and Elmira, which adopted it in 1951 on the recommendation of former Governor Thomas E. Dewey. Exhibitors contend that the new law is unconstitutional since it is retroactive and attempts to circumvent an adverse court decision.

Max Vinson, Schine's Liberty, has lined up a two day benefit with local Boy Scout Troop 196. It has been found that such Scout tieups are usually successes since the Scouts are real go-getters. In the past, local industryites have often made successful tie-ins with local scout troops with great mutual benefit.

Bookers of Warners New York exchange recently hosted circuit bookers in the Metropolitan area at a luncheon at the Famous Kitchen restaurant in honor of the Norman Moray Silver Anniversary Month, in May. The luncheon teed off a drive to secure maximum playdates of Warners shorts in theatres in the area as a salute to Moray. Seen, left, left to right, Phil Levine, Brandt; Jack Birnbaum, Randforce Theatres; Tony De Meo, Warners shorts booker; Shirley Levy, Warners Long Island booker; Ann Levy, Fabian Theatres; Charlotte Brecker, Century Theatres; Manny Gross, Warners New Jersey booker; Sylvan Schein, Century Theatres; Joe Wright, U. S. Army; Irving Kaplan, Randforce Theatres; and Mike Anderson, Warners Brooklyn booker; center, Manny Gross, Warners New Jersey booker; Joe Ornstein, Independent Theatre Service; Al Blumberg, Warners head booker; Gertrude Sheedel, RKO Theatres; Max Polinsky, Brandt Theatres; Louise Crest, Moss Theatres; Sid Pearl, Brandt; Danny Portiselle, Brandt; Ray Olson, Independent Theatre Service; Shirley Chester, Cinema Circuit; Byron Schward, Skouras; and Pete Sayr, Warners New York booker; and right, Josephine Degman, Associated Prudential; Ben Drexler, Brandt; Ann Brown, Associated Prudential; Sid Klein, Island Theatres; Sam Miller, Warners booker; Len Lightstone, Island Theatres; Rose Taylor, United Paramount; Bert Schroeder, United Paramount; and Lee Kaye, U. The Sablosky et al vs Paramount et al anti-trust suit continued in U. S. District Court. The trial has been in progress before a jury and Judge Allan K. Grim since Feb. 7. Previous estimates by counsel handling the case as to the length of the trial proved a bit optimistic; and the action drags on and on.

William Goldman, was appointed a member of the Philadelphia Board of Education. He is the first film man ever to be named to this body in the city's history. The appointment was made by the Board of Judges, composed of jurists of the Common Pleas Court of the city. The election was unanimous. Goldman, who recently endowed the Franklin Institute with a replica of the first nickelodeon, has long been interested in visual education. He is a member of the board of Radio Station WHYY, the city's educational outlet. This was the second civic appointment for Goldman within a week. He previously was named chairman of Philadelphia's Armed Forces Week committee.

The SW Stanley carried the CARE plus ANTA closed circuit benefit TV performance with the house priced at $2.95, $5 and $10 in "contributions." Many local TV and radio personalities appeared on stage in person, including Magda Gabor. The closed circuit TV show boasted a star-studded cast including Victor Borge, Ruth Draper, Helen Hayes, Lena Horne, Menasha Skulnick, Julie Wilson, and many others.

The Philadelphia Actors Memorial Fund will present an all-star stage show April 3 midnight at the Carman in memory of performer Armen Camp, who died on March 17. Mike Badami, manager, Carman, is on the working committee.

Unsung Heroes Of The Night

PHILADELPHIA — Another instance of how Highway Express drivers are truly heroes of the area film industry took place when truck driver Louis E. Betz in making a late at night delivery at the SW Yorktown trapped several robbers by calling police.

Betz, like all Highway drivers carries keys to get into the theatres on his route, let himself into the Yorktown, saw broken vending machines, and immediately flagged down a passing police car. The police captured the robbers after a search of the auditorium and also discovered that the combination had been knocked off the office safe.

It was only recently that another Highway Express driver discovered a fire at the Belmont and turned in an alarm.

Rube Porit, formerly with Ray Schwartz, is now available for managerial duties on Saturdays and Sundays. . . . Paul Resnick is now managing the Overbrook.

John Kirlin, 53, engineer, Goldman, died at his home.

Ralph Colavita manager, Dante, foiled a robbery of the theatre when he heard persons on the premises when he made a late at night return visit to the house.

Vine Street

His many area industry friends were shocked last fortnight when they learned of the death of Herman Hirschhorn, 47, a former sales manager for 20th-Fox here, and recently promoted to the post of branch manager at New Haven. He formerly lived in Melrose Park, Pa. He is survived by his wife, his mother, and three sisters. Funeral services were held at Henninger Funeral Home, Reading, Penna.

Herbert H. Greenblatt, RKO's domestic sales manager, was in for a sales conference at the local exchange on current product.

Shep Bloom, 20th-Fox sales manager, has been promoted to the branch managership of the New Haven exchange, where he takes the place of the late Herman Hirschhorn.

Edward Heiber, U-I branch manager and one of the newer distribution heads

Robert Adelman, the Variety Club International public relations director, became the proud father of a baby girl, Barbara, at University Hospital, Philadelphia. Mother and father are both doing fine.

The week of April 3-9 is Salesmen's Week in the current Republic sales drive. The boys urge you to get those dates in early.

At Warners the drive honoring Norman Moray is shaping up with everyone giving an added push.

Eddie Gabriel, Capital, is pepped up over "The Green Scarf" holding at the Green Hill. Special heralds pin-pointed with a bit of green scarf attracted attention.

Max Miller, UA exploiteer, took a one week vacation for a rest. This followed his latest assignment of working on "The Purple Plain" in Washington with Win Min Than.

Leo Maestripieri, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR circulation department manager, became the proud father of a baby girl, born in Chestnut Hill Hospital.

Irving Blumberg, formerly advertising-publicity director, Stanley Warner Theatres, is now a publicist for Warner Brothers Pictures Distributing Corporation. . . . Tri-State Buying and Booking Service is handling Route 45 Drive-In, Berlinsville, Pa., and the Strinestown-Drive-In, Strinestown, Pa.

Murray Weiss is the new salesman for Screen Guild. He was formerly with Allied Artists in the Pittsburgh territory.

THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW

—about this service—
THE CHECK-UP

This every-second-week regular department is NOT just an index as published in many other trade papers.

THE CHECK-UP is an exclusive EXHIBITOR service. Started many years ago, it represents a complete, unmatchable . . .

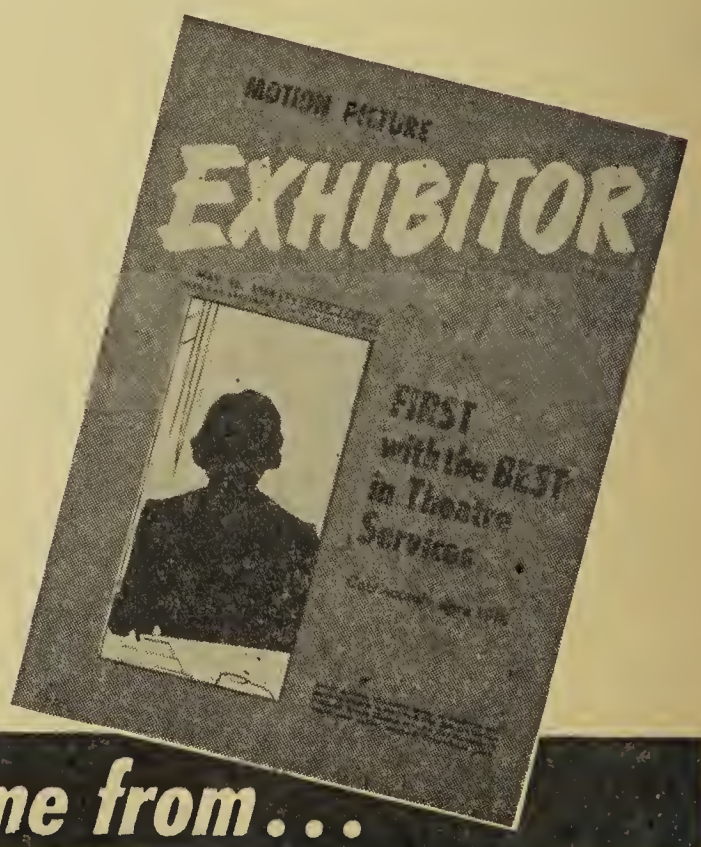
CAPSULE SUMMARY

. . . of ALL Features and of ALL Shorts that have been released and reviewed during the last 9 Months, . . . PLUS information on all that are in production for early release.

WITH THE CHECK-UP AT HAND—

. . . it is NOT necessary to go to your file or to look up a complete Review in order to find:

1. TITLE
2. TYPE OF SHOW
3. COLOR or BLACK AND WHITE
4. LEADING PLAYERS
5. ONE-LINE CRITICISM
6. RUNNING TIME
7. PRODUCTION NUMBER
8. DATE OF COMPLETE REVIEW
9. LEGION OF DECENCY RATING



They are all right here in THE CHECK-UP.
And you need only save it for two weeks,—
for it will be up-to-date the next time issued.

IN YOUR HANDS NOW—

you are holding the only—

9-POINT SUMMARY

in the entire Trade Press that follows this service method.

BEST—of all Theatre Services come from . . .

title. Holidays and special events will be found at the bottom of this page. This chart is kept as up-to-date as possible on information made available by the home office.

WHAT MOVIES MEAN TO AMUSEMENT TAXES

IN CONTINUING OUR RESEARCH on the unusual Bingo situation as it exists in Reading, Pa., we have come across some interesting by-products that prove the indispensible position motion picture theatres occupy in any consideration of amusement taxes to defray administrative budgets.

Up in Reading, a city amusement tax of 10 per cent on all admissions, whether Bingo, clubs, concerts, dances, school entertainment, sports, or theatres, went into effect on March 1, 1948. For the first full calendar year of 1949 the city received $214,872.12 from this tax, 81.6 per cent of which, or $175,355.06, came from the easy-to-supervise and certain-to-collect theatres. In that year, Bingo brought the city $11,379.39, or just about five per cent of the total.

By contrast, in 1954, the gross received by the city in all amusement taxes had dropped to $135,140.65, for a loss of $79,732, or 37 per cent. Of this, the easy-to-supervise and certain-to-collect theatres had dropped to $97,434.76, for a loss of $77,920. Bingo had increased nearly $2,000 and now represented about 10 per cent of the total. Sports had increased over $3,600, and several other sources that would be difficult, if not impossible to supervise, had become almost non-existent.

There isn't much question that the prospering Bingo and sports, and the difficult-to-collect others, were to some extent responsible for the theatre admissions trend. 1954 was certainly a better year in theatres nationally than was 1949. So it would seem that, whenever municipalities declare themselves "partners" in the local motion picture theatres, whether to the tune of five per cent, or 10 per cent, or more, they had better do their best to protect the theatres' income. Like any other retail enterprise, untaxed or illegally operated competition can adversely affect a theatre's gross to the place that the "partnership" interest won't be worth very much to the city involved.

And administrative budgets don't come down with the tax deficiency.

50th ANNIVERSARY . . . WORLD'S FIRST NICKELODEON

A COMMUNICATION from Johnny Harris, Pittsburgh's gift to Ice Shows, Variety Clubs, Showmanship, and Twins, draws attention to the fact that the world's first nickelodeon, showing films exclusively and not as just a minor act in a vaudeville show, was opened in Pittsburgh by Johnny's father, John P. Harris, on June 5, 1905.

While this was just a little before my time, it is simple arithmetic to note that next June 5 provides showmen with a really exploitable date. As a matter of fact, an entire week, either starting or ending with that particular Sunday, could be blocked out for a series of one day showings of old hit pictures, backed by parades of ancient automobiles, fashion shows of ancient dresses, and a host of other antique possibilities.

You can bet the product shortage will still be with us, so such a week, or even two, can help to conserve new film and possibly be the difference between staying open or closing up.

A CAMPAIGN CALLED SHOWMANSHIP

WHILE 20TH CENTURY-FOX, on the side that faces the theatremen through the trade press has become relatively flat-bosomed and uninspiring, bereft of the zeal and bombast that shook the industry out of its lethargy several seasons back, it has turned right chesty in the direct-to-the-public handling of "A Man Called Peter."

With plenty of sugar to spend (a national budget of $500,000), it isn't so much the full-page color ads in the national magazines and Sunday supplements, as the smart showmanship and psychology being exhibited, that appeals to us. It isn't an easy one to sell. Religion has never been a sure-fire asset. But a method has been found for boldly mixing religion with a love story, so that the more you look at the copy, the more you think it will click with the public and result in hefty grosses for the CinemaScope film.

And previews in 60 cities, before 112,000 ministers and church people in one week, are certain to stir up that good old word-of-mouth and must-see that is beyond price.

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

(ABOARD MILITARY AIR TRANSPORT Service Convair somewhere over the center of the U.S., New York-bound.) Most everybody aboard this fleet plane is catching up on sleep with the exception of writer Bob Considine, who is batting out a story on a typewriter a few seats further front. We are returning from a visit to Omaha, Neb., where, along with about 100 newsmen from both the east and west coasts, we observed the celebration of the ninth anniversary of the establishment of the Strategic Air Command as well as a special preview of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command."

KONECOFF

It's hard to believe that just two days ago, we landed at Offutt Air Force Base in falling snow and below freezing temperatures, were greeted royally by both the Air Force and the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and then whisked off to the Hotel Fontenelle behind the screaming siren of a police escort. Then came a special reception and dinner prior to the showing of the film at the Orpheum. Lots of old friends dropped over to say hello at that affair including Bob Hoff and his wife, Hank Plitt, Lou Fenske, Merle Lewis, etc.

There were no speeches other than the few words of warm welcome on the part of Governor Victor Anderson, and aboard the dais were Brigadier General Richard Carmichael, producer Sam Briskin, Frank Lovejoy, Mayor John Rosenblatt, screen writer Beirne Lay, screen writer Valentine Davis, general sales manager E. K. O'Shea, company president Barney Balaban, Jimmy Stewart, June Allyson, John Alison, president, Air Force Association, and Art Storz, beer manufacturer.

Theatre seats were at a premium as airmen presented the colors on the stage. Tony Marvin, of the Arthur Godfrey show, acted as master of ceremonies, presenting Mayor Rosenblatt, Governor Anderson, and Alison, who, on behalf of the Air Force Association, presented a special citation to producer Briskin and Paramount. Stewart, Miss Allyson, Lovejoy, and General Curtis LeMay, commander-in-chief, Strategic Air Command, also participated in the cutting of the anniversary cake.

There were several bursts of applause from the audience as the huge planes maneuvered in the air aided and abetted by color, wide-screen, and the clarity of the VistaVision photographic process. The film was projected via specially-constructed horizontal feed projectors brought in from the coast for the event, which resulted in fine clarity and smoothness of detail. The audience seemed to find the proceedings highly entertaining while the Air Force was extremely pleased that at last here was a film that presented their story in proper fashion.

A reception at the Storz brewery followed.

The next day was devoted pretty much to the Air Force with briefings at the base on the country's air power and the part played by the Strategic Air Com-

"Mambo" In The Groove

NEW YORK—Considering the Lenten season, business in most of the first-run Broadway spots was pretty good over the weekend with the Criterion really jumping with "Mambo." According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Battle Cry" (Warners). Paramount was heading toward $27,000 on the ninth week.

"A Man Called Peter" (20th-Fox). Roxy opened to $33,000 for Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the first week heading toward $65,000.

"The Glass Slipper" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, garnered $97,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the second week sure of $152,000.

"Mambo" (Paramount). Criterion reported $30,000 for the opening week.

"On The Waterfront" (Columbia). Globe jumped to $150,000 on the third week due to the film copping so many Academy Award honors.

"Underwater" (RKO). Mayfair was down to $8,000 on the final week.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor claimed $35,000 for the fourth week.

"Man Without A Star" (U-I). Victoria expected the second week to tally $20,000.

"The Long Gray Line" (Columbia). Capitol dropped to $20,000 on the eighth week.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). Loew's State anticipated the third week at $52,000.

Surviving children include the United Artists exective, Bernard Young, Mrs. Pearl Lieberson, Morris Youngstein, and Mrs. Miriam Hugel.

Arbitration Progress Reported As Schimel And Levy Meet

NEW YORK—A meeting last week between Herman Levy, general counsel, TOA, and Adolph Schimel, counsel for the distribution arbitration committee, was reported to have made some progress on the draft of the proposed arbitration system.

The conference, the first held in several weeks, due to the illness of Schimel, also laid the groundwork for a meeting of the full arbitration committee as soon as possible.

The draft, which is known to have a number of items in dispute, is understood to be near completion with the issue of financing still open.

Exhibs Cautioned On Toll-TV

BOSTON—Edward W. Lider and Frank C. Lydon, co-chairman, New England Committee against Pay-As-You-See TV, last week warned exhibitors not to "sound off" about toll-TV until they "have all the facts and all the correct answers." In a letter to New England exhibitors appealing for financial support for the fight against toll-TV, they advised exhibitors to shun "any public or semi-public controversy" on toll-TV until they have received the question and answer pamphlets on the subject.

Sees No Intention Of Roundtable Talks; Cites Company Income Rise After Tax Slice Meant For Exhibs

WASHINGTON—Allied States Association last week issued a bulletin accusing distribution of having no intention of going through with the proposed roundtable conference, and said "exhibitors must now perfect their case for presentation in other forums."

The bulletin explained that the chief grounds to be relied on by Allied in seeking outside help will be the charge that the film companies have "drained off all or nearly all of the tax relief granted to theatres by Congress." It added that "Allied will harp on a few incontrovertible facts, that following April 1, 1954 (the effective date of the tax bill), film prices increased; that in consequence, the film companies' net earnings have increased by leaps and bounds, while exhibitors continue to be no better off than they were before the bill was passed."

The bulletin contained a tabulation of the net earnings after taxes of nine film companies, including the big eight, since April 1, 1954.

The bulletin, attributed to Abram F. Meyers, Allied chairman and general counsel, asserted that "the top level conference proposed by Al Lichtman seems to have passed into limbo," and added that a conference between an Allied leader and Lichtman "developed nothing beyond the now familiar alibi that the round table cannot be held until the arbitration issue is settled. Arbitration has been kicked around for four years, and since the film companies will not agree to arbitrate film rentals or selling policies, it is impossible to see how this issue can have any bearing on the round table proposal.

"All exhibitors have sought is the opportunity to place their case before the responsible heads of the film companies in hopes that each official, with respect to his own company, would voluntarily abate or abandon policies which threaten the entire industry. Cynicism begets cynicism, and the manner in which exhibitor overtures looking to a peaceful settlement of this controversy have been rejected engenders the thought that this idea for a top level conference may have been advanced merely to induce exhibitors to postpone their plans for remedial action, while the film companies continue to wax fat on their present destructive policies."

UA Decision Reversed

NEW YORK—The Court of Appeals last week reversed a Federal District Court ruling dismissing Robert S. Benjamin, Arthur B. Krim, and Seymour M. Peyser as defendants in a counterclaim filed by Masterpiece Productions in connection with a suit filed by United Artists over TV rights to over 30 pictures. The Appeals Court remanded action back to District Court for trial.

Kiddies Contest Seen As Offsetting Video

TORONTO—Keeping the juveniles away from TV sets is a big problem these days, but a scheme cooked up by Famous Players with The Telegram here looks successful in doing just that.

The plan, first suggested by Harry Sullivan, Theatre Confections, Ltd., and enlarged upon by Bert Brown, Famous Players, is based on a safety theme.

The plan of 10 weeks' duration tied in with the paper, which along with the Toronto Traffic Safety Council sponsors the safety symbol of Elmer. Not only are Famous Players suburban theatres tied in, but also those of B and F, to give the campaign city-wide coverage.

The theatres supply the prizes, and each week 10 are given. A total of 2,500 prizes were obtained, including such items as watches, dolls, gun-and-holster sets, wallets, toys, and pair of guest tickets for father and mother.

The candy companies cooperate by giving free candy to the first 150 kids through each theatre each Saturday, with the manufacturer who cooperates on a particular Saturday giving a special prize of his product in addition to the regular prizes.

The children attending five Saturdays during the series and knowing their safety rules are provided with special Elmer the Elephant safety crests, with the words: "I'll never forget," and the numbers one to five.

All the printing is being supplied by the newspaper with some 50,000 Elmer cards distributed throughout the city. All those children who have attended the whole series are eligible at the end for a special prize, a bicycle given away in addition to the regular prizes.

The theatres are using one-sheets and a trailer to plug the special shows. The value of such a promotion cannot be minimized with every manager greeting the project with enthusiasm.

Canadian Comment

Film board elections are with us again. In Winnipeg, the 1955 officers are president, P. Geller; vice-president, S. Pearlman; secretary, N. Norrie; fire marshal, B. Meyers, and assistant fire marshal, F. Davis. The Maritime Film Board consists of president, Graydon Matthews; vice-president, I. J. Davis; and secretary, L. J. Simon.

A more vigorous operation is announced by Associated Screen News with the appointment and realignment of staff. In complete charge of the company's operations will be Murray Briskin, executive assistant to the president, Maxwell Cummings. William J. Singleton, who has been associated with the company for the past 30 years, becomes director of sales and services. Transferred to Toronto, where he was located for many years, is Jack Chisholm, as Ontario sales manager and production unit chairman. Chisholm, assisted by Ken Cooper, will set up a producing unit to service the large and ever-growing TV market in the Ontario area. Assuming a more active position in the company's administrative affairs will be Russ Prazak, who will work closely with Briskin on such matters.

Huge crowds turned out recently for the London, England, premiere of Warners "A Star Is Born" at the Warner. The opening was for the benefit of Variety Club and attracted top celebrities, with a broadcast over BBC.

CINE CHATTER: The Ontario Board of Censors put the "Adult" label on eight films during the month of February. These included "Battle Cry," "Notorious," "Other Woman," "Private Hell 36," "Six Bridges To Cross," "Ugetsu," "Verwinita," and "Wyoming Renegades." . . . Disappointment in the tax reduction offered by the Ontario Government has caused the executive of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario to turn the matter over to the committee to see what further might be done to give relief to exhibitors. . . . Newest member joining the MPTAO is the Capitol, Meaford, whose pilot is Gordon Rowe. . . . An address on showmanship resulted in Bob Christie, manager, Royal, Aurora, obtaining a two-page spread in the local weekly including a biography of himself and a feature story on his staff. . . . Visitor to Toronto was Jack Barron, Odeon partner in Calgary. . . . Newcomer to the foreranks of the Odeon Better Management Contest is the Oxford, Halifax, according to a bulletin issued by Jim Hardiman, ad pub chief for Odeon. In second spot is the Hastings, Vancouver, while the Fairlawn, Toronto, picked up third spot. In the district managers' standing, H. Hurwitz is first, G. A. Sutherland is second, and Chris Holmes holds down third place. . . . July will see yet another rise in the cost of amusement advertising in the city with The Telegram, Toronto, upping their rates from 45 cents a line to 50 cents. . . . Alex Solomon, father of Blind River exhibitor Norman Solomon, died recently. . . . First drive-ins to open this season were those owned by Joe Dydzak, Waterdown and Windsor. Several have already opened in the sunny province of British Columbia.

CinemaScope Credited With 20th-Fox Surge

NEW YORK—Twentieth Century-Fox last week reported consolidated net earnings of $8,044,524 for the year ended Dec. 25, 1954. The company credited the increase of $3,483,437 over the previous year's figure of $4,560,887 to the world-wide acceptance of CinemaScope and the revival of the motion picture as the most popular form of public entertainment.

Earnings for the year ending Dec. 25, amounted to $3.04 a share on the 2,644,486 shares of common stock outstanding, earnings for the same period ended Dec. 25, 1953 were $1.65 on the 2,769,486 shares of common stock then outstanding.

The net earnings for the fourth quarter ended Dec. 25, 1954, was put at $2,312,461 as compared with net earnings for the same period in 1953 of $3,127,850. The net earnings for the third quarter of 1954 were $2,635,518.

The company reported that amortization of film costs had been taken on the same basis as in previous years.

The consolidated profit and loss statement showed income from film rentals of $106,355,068 in 1954 as compared to $105,662,266 in 1953. Total income for 1954 was put at $115,715,815 and total expenses listed at $100,171,291, against total income of $113,513,260 and total expenses of $105,302,373 in 1953. Provision for federal taxes on income was $7,500,000 in 1954 as against $3,650,000 in 1953.

Youngstein Heads Cinema Lodge

NEW YORK—Max E. Youngstein vice-president, United Artists, last week was elected president, New York Cinema Lodge, B'nai B'rith. He succeeds Burton E. Robbins, National Screen Service executive, who has held office for the past two years.

The installation of officers will be held at an industry-wide luncheon scheduled for the Hotel Sheraton Astor on April 19, it was announced.

Elected as vice-presidents were Marvin Kirsch, Milton Livingston, Sol Rissner, Norman Robbins, Cy Seymour, Robert K. Shapiro, Jack Wiesman, Al Wilde, and Lou Wolff.

Other officers are Jack Hoffberg, treasurer; David Kelton, secretary; Burton Robbins; chaplain; and trustees Max Blackman, Julius Collins, Harold Danson, Lee Jaffe, Moses L. Kove, Joseph Maharam, Louis Nevins, and Arthur Schwartz.

AB-PT Denied New Theatre

NEW YORK — American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres last week was denied the right to acquire a theatre in Tucson, Arizona, to replace one that it lost in 1953. The order, believed to be the first one of its kind, was signed by Federal Judge Irving Kaufman, who ruled that AB-PT had no right to acquire an equivalent theatre for a period of five years unless the Attorney General gives his consent.

AB-PT had informed the court that one of its subsidiaries had operated the State, Tucson, until 1953, when the lease expired and the owner decided to convert the property to a commercial enterprise instead of a theatre.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir:

Just got through reading your editorial of March 16. This prompted me to rush to my letter file and dig out a letter I wrote to Bill Holden after Mel the Pipe interviewed him upon his return from Europe. I am enclosing this copy, which was written last August, and carried the theme of your editorial. In my opinion, you are wasting your time in exerting any effort to interest these people to do some thinking along these lines . . . oh, yes, you might get some of them to think . . . but the money involved at this time is so big, little things like our small theatres would not interest them. What makes me so cynical is that Mr. Holden did not even acknowledge my letter. Maybe he is too big now, and maybe all this did go to his head.

E. Weingarden
Columbia Theatre Company
Flint, Mich.

(Editor's Note: The letter to Holden carried essentially the same message as the above mentioned editorial, stressing the importance of a maximum number of playdates.)

Dear Jay:

Have just finished reading your most excellent editorial in the March 9 Motion Picture Exhibitor and want to congratulate you on putting into words what must be in the heavy hearts of every exhibitor in the country, who cannot express themselves so lucidly. I think it is one of the finest summations of anything I have listened to or read of the plight that the exhibitor is now faced with. Reprints of this editorial should be made available and should be a "must read" for every exhibitor; and, more important, a copy should be sent to every member of distribution that comes in contact with the exhibitor.

Edward Lachman
State Theatre
Boonton, N. J.

Dear Jay:

Our committee met to discuss plans for our annual get-together, June 14-16 at the Chamberlin, Old Point Comfort, Va. After the formal meeting, as we were talking shop, there were some very fine comments about a number of your recent editorials. I believe nearly everyone present commented on "A Man With His Hat In His Hand" as being about the best piece that we have read in a long time. Just thought you should know it. .

Carlton Duffus
Virginian Motion Picture Theatre Association
Richmond, Va.

Gentlemen:

If possible I would like enough copies of your Servisection from Jan. 1, 1950 to the present so that I will be up-to-date. I have found these a "must" and I hope you will be able to help me. Best regards.

Yours truly,
Richard McKinney, Manager
Midway Drive-In Fayetteville, N. C.

Dear Sir:

I believe that most film producers will soon agree that with the use of the Vista-Vision's large negative process and the use of the one track Perspecta sound system, wide-screen standardization can best be obtained with straight photographing in a 1:85 to 1 ratio on standard 35mm. film, except for a number of special theatres who can no doubt be better served with a special 65mm. film. The only thing standing in the way now is the selfish financial interests of a hand full of bigwigs.

Vernal M. Elliott
Clayton Theatre
Clay City, Ill.

Gentlemen:

I think Paramount's VistaVision process is far superior to any CinemaScope production, both in clarity of detail and because of wide screen ratio. My customers like any good wide screen picture better than CinemaScope. Pete Harrison is to be admired for his independence, but he, in my opinion, is biased in his repeated boosting of the CinemaScope process, and his attack on VistaVision.

Guy B. Amis
Lexington Amusement, Inc.
Lexington, Tenn.

Dear Mr. Emanuel:

Regarding your difference of opinion with Harrison on the subject of CinemaScope and VistaVision, specifically the attempt of Paramount to make something terrific out of VistaVision, I'll have to go along 100 per cent with Harrison. You have a good "pink sheet." Try to keep your editorial page up to that good standard.

William B. Way
Mid-State Theatres, Inc.
Clearfield, Pa.

Dear Sir:

This will acknowledge receipt of your recent letter in which you refer to the study and inquiry into the entire broadcast field that is to be conducted by the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. . . . I appreciate your thoughtfulness in forwarding the enclosure to me, and I assure you that I will read it with a great deal of interest.

Charles E. Potter
U.S. Senator, Michigan

Dear Sir:

I have your letter enclosing a portion of the Motion Picture Exhibitor relative to the investigation of the broadcasting industry by the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Commitee. As a member of this Committee I appreciate your having sent this information to me which will be helpful when considering this matter.

James H. Duff
U. S. Senate (Penna.)

Dear Jay:

As is so often the case, your March 16th editorial (It's Time For A Little Thinking) is so right and right to the point.

Exhib Group Okehs Hospital Collections

New York—Leading exhibitor organizations last week approved a plan for a one-day collection in theatres for the benefit of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital.

Although the date of the collection has not been announced, it will probably be in mid-August on the opening day of a new attraction.

Organizations approving the plan include Theatre Owners of America, National Allied, Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York, and Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, as well as several leading circuits.

Abe Montague, president, Will Rogers Hospital, will be in charge of the over-all coordination of the campaign, it was announced following a preliminary meeting, at which S. H. Fabian, national chairman, collection drive, also noted that the following had accepted chairmanships for the activity: Moe Silver, exhibitor committee; Eugene Picker, general fund raising; Charles J. Feldman, distributor committee; Chester B. Bahn, trade paper committee; and Ernest Emerling, publicity committee.

A special appeal trailer is in productio and it is expected that exchange area distribution and exhibition committees will soon begin an intensive solicitation of pledges from theatres.

"Caine" Tops Poll

New York—Three hundred and sixty-eight critics, reviewers, and commentators, voting in the Film Daily's annual "Ten Best" poll, named Columbia's "The Caine Mutiny" the top picture of 1954 last week. The second highest picture in the poll was "On The Waterfront," again from Columbia. The rest were "Rear Window," Paramount; "The Country Girl," Paramount; "The High And The Mighty," Warners; "Seven Brides For Seven Brothers," MGM; "Sabrina," Paramount; "Executive Suite," MGM; "The Glenn Miller Story," U-I; and "Three Coins In A Fountain," 20th-Fox.

Goldman Damages Taxable, Supreme Court Decides

WASHINGTON—The United States Supreme Court ruled last week that William Goldman Theatres, Inc., will have to pay taxes on $375,000 awarded in a federal anti-trust suit against Loew's, Inc.

Goldman Theatres, a Delaware corporation operating theatres in Pennsylvania, claimed a loss of profits of $125,000 due to Loew's activities and were awarded triple damages. Goldman reported only $125,000 as taxable income, asserting that the remaining $250,000 was "a windfall," derived from punitive measures. As such, the income would not be taxable. The tax court ruled this lawful and was upheld by the Court of Appeals.

The Supreme Court's opinion, in reversing the lower court's decision said it "would do violence to the plain meaning of the statute . . . were we to say that the payments in question here are not gross income."

70-30-10 Terms Set For UA's "Stranger"

NEW YORK—When the filmed version of the best seller, "Not As A Stranger," is ready for selling to exhibitors, it was announced by producer-director Stanley Kramer that the terms would be 70-30-10 with a profit of 10 per cent guaranteed exhibitors after a verified expense statement is submitted. Special contracts have been printed for use on the film.

The production, which has cost close to two millions to produce, is owned free and clear by United Artists, the distributor, and Kramer with no participations involved. A promotion and advertising campaign of $1,200,000 has been set for the film which will open here in July. Kramer expected that the film would gross 10 millions domestically with another five million coming in from abroad, which would outgross his last big money-maker, "The Caine Mutiny," which is expected to take in over nine millions domestically with another three to four millions from abroad.

Kramer is presently working on the promotion of the film with which he makes his debut as a director. Advertising is being placed well in advance of the opening, and he will supplement this via publicity features already filmed for use on TV and with personal appearances on radio.

He paid tribute to the United Artists organization as being "youthful, fast-moving and enterprising" and with their help, he is going after top-drawer accounts with exhibitor bidding for the film and enthusiasm already making itself felt. The book on which the feature is based has been read by at least 28 millions and has been on the best seller lists for over 64 weeks.

In August, Kramer will return to Europe and particularly Spain, where he will film a C. S. Forester novel, "The Gun," with the film version being titled "The Pride And The Passion." This will be made in VistaVision and in color for UA release.

He believed that processes should be used as they fit the individual story and not haphazardly just for the sake of using a process. Kramer also believed that his best method of making films is to concentrate on only one production a year, hand-tool them, and then follow through all the way into the selling and distribution.

Allied To Press Government Bill, Shor Tells Oklahoma Convention

Wisconsin Allied Hears Snaper On Toll Television

MILWAUKEE—Wilbur Snaper, president, Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey and former president, National Allied, told the convention of Allied of Wisconsin last week that "thousands of exhibitors thought that nothing could happen to them when television appeared seven or eight years ago, but now we have lost 50 to 60 per cent of our business."

Striking out at the apathy of exhibitors in the face of the new threat of toll-TV, Snaper declared that "we must inform the public about the threat. The television industry is divided, for some toll-TV trials have flopped, but no matter which system is used the public would lose, for the best programs would go to toll-TV."

Sig Goldberg, president, Wisconsin Allied, pointed out that the small town exhibitor was in serious trouble at the present, and promised that the organization would do all it could to help them. He noted that many exhibitors had taken part-time jobs in order that they could keep their theatres open.

Charity Group Named

NEW YORK—A motion picture industry committee of 54 to serve as part of the Cardinal's Committee of the Laity in the 1955 Catholic Charities Drive of the Archdiocese of New York which seeks $2,500,000 in gifts through 50 different committees of business men, was announced over the weekend by John J. O'Connor, U-I vice-president, who is committee chairman. George J. Schaefer is treasurer of the 1955 drive, and L. Douglas Netter, Jr., Altec Service Corporation executive, is vice-chairman.

Film Earnings On Rise

NEW YORK—A Wall Street Journal survey of corporate earnings of 726 firms in 33 industries last fortnight reported a rise of 42 per cent in corporate earnings for film companies in 1954, compared with 3.4 per cent rise for all of the 726 firms covered. Only the aircraft manufacturing industry showed a higher rise.

OKLAHOMA CITY—Delegates to Allied of Oklahoma's third annual convention last week heard Ruben Shor, president, National Allied, urge them to get behind the request for government intervention in the industry.

"The government bill is definitely going to be submitted," he said. "To get it passed, I believe you're going to have to do the same kind of work as you did on the tax campaign."

Shor told the delegates to "get next to their own Senators and Representatives, you needn't fear regulation, you're regulated now." The Allied president added that a few top-level distributor executives in New York held the key to more equitable film rentals. "One would rather be regulated by the Government than by eight or 10 people in New York," he stated.

Shor cited the profit figures of distributors to prove that distribution had swallowed the tax relief that the government had granted to exhibitors, and said that this would be a major argument in favor of government regulation.

Earlier, Abram F. Myers, board chairman and general counsel of National Allied, told the exhibitors that though other groups are expected to join in the fight against toll TV, at the present time the exhibitors must carry the load. He noted that the industry got off to a late start and likened the situation to "running a mile race and finding your opponent with a half mile head start." Myers said the industry is banking on the logic of its position in fighting the battle before the FCC in Washington.

The convention elected Bernard J. McKenna, Norman and Perry, Okla, president, Allied of Oklahoma. McKenna succeeds Earl Snyder, Jr., Tulsa, who became the new board chairman. Other officers elected are Eddie Jones, Tulsa, vice-president; Richard O. Thompson, Oklahoma City, secretary; and Claude Motley, Oklahoma City, treasurer. Directors include all officers plus Harold Bowers, Tulsa; Robert Busch, Athel Boyter, and Glen Thompson, Oklahoma City; L. L. Elliot, Tulsa; James Kelly, Alva; Don Cole, Buffalo; Jess Jones, Crescent; E. F. McKenna, Perry; and Siebert Worley, Shamrock, Tex.

Heavy promotion backed the recent opening of Republic's "Yellowneck" at the Astor, Orlando, Flo. Seen, left, are Rex Allen; John Thomas, secretary-treosurer, Empire Studios, producer of the film; Bonnie Allen; Morie Windsor; Stephen Courtleigh; Mayor J. Rolfe Dovis of Orlando; and Jack Hupp, at the premiere; center, element's of the parode held in connection with the affair led by the 80-piece Boone High School band; and, right, Jim Martin, WHOO, interviewing Rex and Bonnie Allen in front of the theotre. The picture olso opened at the State, St. Petersburg, and the 5-Points, Jacksonville. It was shot for the most part on location in the Florido Everglades.

Organizations For Free TV Formed To Unite Groups Against Toll-TV

NEW YORK—Fearful of the economic impact on the American public presented by "pay-as-you-see" television proposals now before the FCC, Organizations for Free-TV has been established to coordinate nationwide activities of citizen groups actively opposing any attempt to divert present free telecast channels into "coin-box airwaves."

An information center has been established at 608 Fifth Avenue to assist interested organizations in all parts of the country anxious to make their views known to the FCC, which has set May 9 as the deadline for receiving such opinions.

Organizations for Free-TV is co-relating its activities with those of the National Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV with access to economic and engineering research studies being conducted by the later group.

The new organization will conduct educational campaigns on local, regional, and state levels, stressing the economic impact of coin-box television as related to set-owners, the business community, and telecasting in its present form. Preliminary studies indicate that conversion of present television sets would run into a cost of hundreds of millions of dollars on a purchase or rental plan, and this would be only the initial cost of toll-TV.

The Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV and Organizations for Free-TV have retained John V. L. Hogan and Hogan Laboratories, Inc., as engineering counsel to conduct research and prepare studies into technical aspects of petitions for toll-TV now before the FCC awaiting acceptance or rejection.

Toll-TV Foes Blast "Omnibus" Presentation

NEW YORK—Opponents of toll-TV last week vigorously protested the presentation of their case on the Sunday TV program, "Omnibus," where it is alleged that the voice of the one opponent of toll-TV who spoke, George B. Storer, president, Storer Broadcasting Company, was unintelligible.

In a wire sent to Frank Stanton, president, CBS, and Robert Saudek, producer of "Omnibus," and signed by Phillip F. Harling, treasurer, Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, "Omnibus" was held to be obligated to make time available to permit Storer "to make known his views to millions who were unable to understand him because of the poor quality of the film sequence in which he was presented."

"Omnibus" was accused of being guilty of "a great disservice to the American viewing public, by 'blacking out' pertinent remarks of one so well qualified as Mr. Storer," while "adjacent film seqences during which opinions favorable to pay-as-you-see TV were aired, were clearly seen and heard."

Alistair Cooke, "Omnibus" master of ceremonies, informed the listeners that producers had not accepted a bid to express their views on the problem, although he did not identify who had been approached.

Responding to the protest, Stanton wired Harling that a full program period of one half or an hour devoted to a more comprehensive discussion of the issue would be offered "some Sunday after April 10." The wire continued, "For this program, of course, Storer will be invited to present his views again."

Saudek accepted responsibility for deciding, "at a late hour," not to have the Storer sequence refilmed. Saudek maintained that despite its poor recording quality, the sequence was intelligible to him, and added that he did not intend to have a relay of the sequence on "Omnibus," as suggested by the National Committee.

Stanton also refused to give the opponents of toll-TV compensatory time on "Omnibus," claiming that running another sequence of Storer's views would create further misunderstanding and imbalance. A spokesman for the committee heartily accepted Stanton's alternate suggestion.

Service Veto Seen For Industry Plan

WASHINGTON—The industry plan to eliminate military theatres competition with private exhibitors was reported last week to be running into stiff opposition from representatives of the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

The report followed a meeting between top Pentagon officials, including Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson and an industry delegation headed by Eric A. Johnston, president, MPAA. Although the industry spokesmen officially refused to admit that the defense officials had reservations about the industry plan, one of them indicated that a new plan might have to be worked out.

It was expected that the tentative agreement, worked out between the industry committee and the defense department, would be ratified quickly by representatives of the several services, but their representatives have indicated that they would prefer to have something closer to the present early release privileges. The tentative agreement has already been ratified by distribution and exhibition. Exhibitors estimate that they are losing more than $1,500,000 a year as a result of competition from military theatres.

Representing the industry at the latest meeting were Johnston, Kenneth Clark, Morey Goldstein, chairman, sales managers' committee, Walter Reade, Jr., and A. Julian Brylawski.

John W. Davis Mourned

CHARLESTON, S. C.—John W. Davis, lawyer for Loew's for 15 years, died last week at the age of 81 of pneumonia. Davis was the Democratic candidate for President in 1924, and personally argued before the Supreme Court in behalf of Loew's appeal from the Federal Statutory Court decision in New York, finding Loew's, among others, guilty of anti-trust law violations.

Martin Receives Data On TOA Insurance Survey

NEW YORK—The final report from Theatre Owners of America's survey of liability insurance is in the hands of E. D. Martin, it was reported last week. The report gains its information from the study of 1,500 questionnaires received from exhibitors since January, and contains recommendations on how the theatre organization may seek lower insurance rates.

The TOA is seeking, in this insurance plan, to form a cooperative money-saving group for insurance which will revamp the entire theatre insurance program now established.

Information sought from exhibitors included figures on the present liability and fire insurance, policy terms for theatres, based on rates per 100 admissions, and property damage, bodily injury, and products libility loss experienced during the last three years. If figures show that theatre losses have been low, it is possible that the exhibitors will seek lower rates.

About People

NEW YORK—Columbia announced last week the appointment of Ray Murray to the post of assistant exploitation manager. In this new position, Murray will concentrate on supervision of national exploitation, under the direction of exploitation manager Al Rylander. Murray has been at Columbia for 12 years, serving recently as trade press contact in the publicity department. Murray's former post will be filled by Martin Blau, who has been serving as a general assignment man in the publicity department for four years. In addition, Ted Spiegel, with Columbia for seven years, is transferring from the exploitation section to the publicity department.

NEW YORK—Robert Fleisher, 20th-Fox national magazine contact, has resigned from the company effective April 8. No replacement has yet been made and applications for the post currently are being considered. Prior to his joining the company in April, 1951, as magazine representative, Fleisher was associated with various national publications in editorial and publicity capacities.

VARIETY: Last week the local Variety Tent held an informal meeting lunchtime at Toots Shor's. The result was all fun and practically no business at all, which seems to be the pattern for future sessions. Buddy Hackett, stage, TV, and film comic provided some very humorous entertainment which we're not supposed to say anything about because the Theatre Authority might holler.

Aboard the dais that day were Bill German, chief barker; actress Anita Eckberg; Martin Levine, luncheon coordinator; and Harold Klein, toastmaster.

BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Two City Premieres Launch "Purple Plain"

NEW YORK—United Artists' "The Purple Plain" had day-and-date American premieres last fortnight at the Chicago, Chicago, and the Paramount, Sheridan, and Coral, Miami, Fla.

The openings climaxed twin, all-media advance campaigns that featured personal appearances in each city by Win Min Than, Burmese beauty, who makes her screen debut in the film.

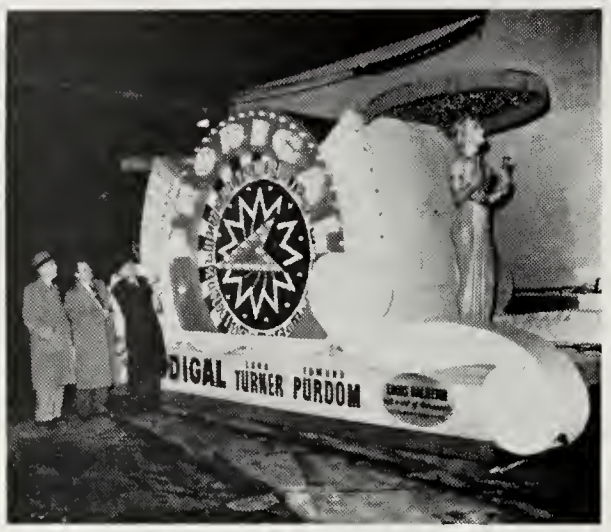
The young star's round-the-clock schedule in Chicago earned saturation coverage for "The Purple Plain" with four solid days of press interviews, radio-TV stands, and store and theatre appearances.

Miss Than's video agenda plugged the UA release to an estimated 4,000,0000 viewers via the Tony Weitzel show, the Irv Kupcinet fixture, Studs Turkel's program, the "Hi Ladies' show, the "Sidewalk" show, and Danny O'Neil's program, on various stations.

The Burmese performer spotlighted "The Purple Plain" for additional thousands in a stage appearance at the Chicago and a talk at the Fair Store, Chicago's largest, before 900 young members of the Teen Club.

City-wide penetration was effected in a jumbo promotion of the Bantam Book edition of "The Purple Plain," best-selling novel on which the Technicolor film is based. Book builds, scene stills, and playdate cards were spotted at 650 book stores, drug stores, and news stands. Counter displays in 37 department and jewelry stores were pegged to a special display card carrying photographs of Miss Than modeling the A. A. Sutain Company's costume jewelry and hair ornaments.

In Miami, the Bantam Book and Sutain promotion were similarly planted at 135 key outlets. Miss Than's widely-ballyhooed appearances included guest spots on TV and radio shows. The film received an unusual plug when the Miami Beach Kennel Club ran the "Purple Plain" handicap.



Blanket news photo coverage showed the Burmese star presenting the winner's trophy, as well as her arrival at the airport, where she was greeted by a four-ton elephant (Burmese, of course).

Saturation radio-TV ad coverage in both cities employed telops, slides, trailers, and recorded spots used for seven days in advance of opening. Theatre front flash at all four houses were provided by special fluorescent valances and streamers.

MGM's float on "The Prodigal," which will tour the country in advance of the release of the film now scheduled for May bookings, recently got the stamp of approval from the company's home office promotion trio, from left to right, Joe Flynn, assistant to Emery Austin, exploitation head, who is in the center, with Oscar Doob, on the right. The unit will visit 46 cities after kicking off in New York City.

Songs Aid "Mambo"

NEW YORK—"The Silvana Mangano Mambo," Mack David-Wilson Stone song written in honor of the star of Paramount's "Mambo," has been waxed by MGM Records, with Dave "Tico" Robins and his orchestra. The record has been scheduled for extensive disc jockey promotion and spotlighting by music retail shops.

The new song has been published by Famous Music Corporation along with four songs from the Ponti-De Laurentiis production, "It Wasn't The Red Wine," "Back To Bahia," "Boogie In Brazil," and "New Love, New Wine."

"Prodigal" Campaign Watched

NEW YORK—MGM last week launched its campaign for "The Prodigal" by issuing a fact booklet detailing various promotional gimmicks. Meanwhile, the elaborate motor float ballyhooing the picture began its nation-wide tour and was being greeted by crowds wherever it appeared.

This attractive winter tableau was recently created by Ted Davidson, city manager, Walter Read Theatres, Perth Amboy, N. J., for his Majestic to call the public's attention to the strong line-up of product during the "Winter Carnival Of Hits."

New NSS Travel-Ad Gives Mobile Ballyhoo

NEW YORK—A new approach to mobile outdoor advertising of local theatre attractions was announced last week by National Screen Service, with the introduction of Travel-Ad, the all-aluminum poster frame that fits on top of any automobile.

"Travel-Ad is being made available at the beginning of the outdoor season and we believe that exhibitors all over the country will be anxious to take advantage of this opportunity to advertise their current and coming attractions through this new and effective medium," said George F. Dembow, vice-president in charge of sales.

The Travel-Ad frame is designed to accommodate a 24 x 82 banner type of announcement. Atop the frame is a large aluminum "fin" for display of theatre name and playdates. An aluminum pennant on a staff at the front provides space for billboarding second features, shorts or special events.

The mounting stand, also of aluminum, is of the type used for ski racks on top of automobiles. It is made of sturdy aluminum construction with rubber vacuum cup mounts and clip straps. Simple installation on an auto roof in less than five minutes, is possible, without any drilling or damage to the vehicle. The entire Travel-Ad frame has been designed to withstand high wind pressure. An additional use for hanging the display frame under marquees is provided by two hook-eyes set in the top of the frame.

This is intended for use by the manager and theatre staff on the tops of their cars to publicize theatre programs, special events, and other theatre features. Local merchants tying in with special theatre promotions also can use Travel-Ad on their cars and small trucks to spread word of their cooperative promotions with the theatre.

It is being made available on a rental basis or through the N.S.S. Travel-Ad Banner Sales Plan. There is also a rental service available on 24 x 28 banners. Full details may be obtained through National Screen Service exchanges.

20th-Fox's "Dynamo" Honored

NEW YORK—Twentieth Century-Fox's house organ, "The Dynamo," edited by Roger Ferri, was named last week as "the outstanding company publication" for 1954 by the Company Publication Editors of North America, representing house organs of 332 leading industrial and business corporations in the northern hemisphere.

The current award cites the publication for being outstanding in informative contents, readability, excellence in interpretive use of statistical matter, typography, promotional quality, and general editorial presentation.

CANDYDLY SPEAKING

ONCE AGAIN, with the advent of spring signalling activity on the outdoor scene and added excitement in conventional houses, we present the spring addition of the EXTRA PROFITS market guide, a comprehensive listing of companies engaged in marketing concession equipment and supplies.

THE GREAT INCREASE in full year drive-in operation, even in colder climes, and the ever increasing importance of extra profits operations in indoor theatres makes a careful study of the listing more important today than ever before. Increased efficiency at the concession stand, combined with proven merchandising techniques, can change a bookkeeper's handwriting from red to black.

EACH CONCESSION operation is only as good as the equipment involved in it; the equipment only as good as the people operating it. There is no short cut to success in the field of extra profits activity. Certain companies are at the top of the equipment and supply ladder for very good reasons. Years of dealing with theatremen have made them aware of exhibitor concession problems. Growing together with an industry whose rapid advance rivals any in our age has enabled them to more efficiently cope with these problems, through improved design, more effective merchandising aids, a wider variety of concession items.

ON SUCH THINGS is the confidence stimulated by a respected brand name founded; and with increased respect for a brand name comes an increased obligation on the part of the firm involved to merit that respect, resulting in a healthy state of competition for the theatreman's dollar and assuring him of a dollar's worth of value and satisfaction.

THE THEATRE OFFERS distinctive problems and challenges to manufacturers of extra profit equipment and supplies, and they have met this challenge by staffing their sales forces with men who understand these problems; the result is an admirable liaison between buyer and seller, one that other facets of the motion picture industry would do well to emulate.

IPA Picks A Winner

IPA Conference Stresses Outdoor Sales Aids; 10 Point Plan Offered

NEW YORK—Over 200 representatives of firms having a business interest in popcorn jammed the fourth annual Eastern regional popcorn and concession conference, sponsored by International Popcorn Association, last month at the Park Sheraton Hotel.

Lee Koken, RKO Theatres, served as general conference chairman and was assisted by IPA president, Bert Nathan, Theatre Popcorn Vending Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Morrie R. Yohai, King Kone Corporation, New York; Nat Buchman, Theatre Merchandising Corporation, Boston; Lawrence Goldmeier, Poppers Supply Company, Philadelphia; Don W. Mayborn, Cornco, Inc., Baltimore, Md.; Martin P. Coopersmith, The Marjack Company, Washington; Carl Siegel, Stanley Warner Management Corporation; and Thomas J. Sullivan, IPA executive vice-president, Chicago.

William E. Smith, executive director, the Popcorn Institute, Chicago, spoke to the morning session and described PI's new plans for point of purchase displays especially created for use in theatres to develop additional popcorn sales. IPA is working closely with The Popcorn Institute on industry sales promotion.

Yohai chairmanned the program for the manufacturer-wholesale session. Among the speakers were Sullivan, Mayborn, Henry Meltzer, Popcorn Service Company; Frederick J. Ruderman, Aidling's, Inc., Brooklyn, N. Y.; and Herschel I. Yesley, Yesley Brothers Sales Company, Newtonville, Mass.

Conference prize winners and their awards were, Royal portable typewriter, donated by Irving A. Singer, Rex Specialty Bag Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., won by Wallace Schmidt, Mason Candies, Mineola, N. Y.; Zenith deluxe AM-FM table radio, donated by Nelson Grunther, Banner Candy Company, Brooklyn, N. Y., won by Mort Thalhimer, Jr., Neighborhood Theatres, Inc., Richmond, Va.; Philco portable record player, donated by Hy Becker, Korday-Bonomo Candy Company, Brooklyn, N. Y., won by Carl Siegel, Stanley Warner Management Corporation; set of matched woods and irons in leather golf bag, donated by Warren Young, Maryland Cup Company, Baltimore, Md., won by Herschel I. Yesley, Yesley Brothers Sales Company, Newtonville, Mass. The grand prize award of the conference, an RCA 21 inch full color television console, donated by Mel Rapp, APCO, Inc., was won by Mel Wintman, Smith Management Corporation, Boston.

One forum highlighted the fact that 80 per cent of concession sales are made during picture "breaks" at conventional theatres or during intermissions at drive-ins. Nathan offered the following 10 rules for concession operations at outdoor theatres: proper layout, whether the operation is for station concessions or cafeteria; efficient equipment of modern appearance; prices of food and refreshments should conform generally with those at drive-ins elsewhere in the area and should be determined, where advisable, by agreement between the concession operator and owner or management; special food items should be dispensed properly or not handled at all; concession signs should be easy to read, telling the patron in large letters the items available and their prices; efficient help, properly trained by persons capable of training, with constant supervision maintained; cleanliness of help both of clothing and person; convenient placing of condiments for foodstuffs; quick accessibility to inventory stocks to meet contingencies; and proper use of the main directional microphone to sell concession items, to sell the operation institutionally, and to sell the many services offered by it—bearing in mind the fact that the investment represents many thousands of dollars.

Conclusions were drawn which indicated that vending machines strategically located in theatres do not lessen sales at regular concession counters; ice cream sales suffer because of insufficient display; candy display cases in theatres stimulate sales; manual sales of drinks bring larger grosses than vending machines; machines dispensing both carbonated and non-carbonated beverages bring plus business.

Concessions at drive-ins are important as sources of income both on their own and as a boxoffice stimulant; cafeteria sales are between 20 and 25 per cent greater than station or stand sales; conversely speaking some operators find stands more profitable where patrons are reluctant to wait on a cafeteria line; the increase in frozen food items requires a comparable increase of refrigeration facilities; restaurant equipment at drive-in cafeterias usually is unsuitable, special equipment generally being necessary to meet the speed to service patrons during the concession break.

Most kiddies' playgrounds are placed in poor locations at drive-ins; more suitable areas are recommended closer to concessions; free playgrounds are a must for drive-ins.

Thomas J. Sullivan, executive vice-president, IPA, addressed the conference on IPA leadership in the industry.

Coca-Cola was host at the luncheon, represented by Charles Okun, special theatre representative. Pepsi-Cola entertained at a cocktail party at which Peter Warren and Alan Finley, theatre sales division, were the hosts.

Triple Theme Keys Sweden Meet Display

SEATTLE—A triple theme will spotlight Sweden Freezer's 1955 display at the National Restaurant Show. In addition to showing their latest equipment, the firm will present to the food handling industry new, low-cost, soft-serve desserts, plus graphic portrayal of the industry's need for attention to certain dairy product regulations.

Among the representative Sweden models on display will be a new double-head automatic continuous freezer for serving two flavors of soft-served product at one time. One or both heads can also be used for machine-made shakes, or for soft-served sherbets. This new, versatile model has Sweden's "hands-free operation" feature. A single footswitch control, which leaves both of the dispenser's hands free for handling the dishes, dispenses portion-controlled soft-serve product in one simple operation. Also on display will be a Sweden Automatic Fountain which automatically dispenses all ice cream dishes and complete milk shakes. All machines, plus the Electronic Portion Control which accurately measures management-determined portions, will be demonstrated.

The Sweden booth will feature a full-color presentation of standard fountain dishes, plus a number of profitable, eye-appealing, and low-cost dessert and specialty dishes which are possible with soft-serve products. An accompanying commentary will give recipes, preparation, and serving procedures and food costs.

Popcorn Week Spurs Concession Returns

TORONTO, CANADA—For "Popcorn Week," G. H. Davie, manager, Famous Players' Palace, recently decorated the theatre lobby with streamers made of popcorn and had banners made heralding the event.

A contest was held in conjunction with this consisting of a bowl of corn kernels being displayed in the lobby for patrons to guess the correct number of kernels in the bowl. The winner received a Gruen watch, donated by the courtesy of a neighborhood jewelry store, with no cost to the theatre. There were nearly 4,000 entries in the contest, which shows the interest it aroused in its two weeks running. The correct number of kernels, incidentally, was 51,044, but guesses ranged from 400 to 10,000,000. The contest had a dual purpose. It not only got patrons thinking about popcorn, but it also gave an active mailing list to the theatre.

Coloring pictures numbering 5,000 were distributed to all the children. The best three pictures turned in received passes to the theatre. This contest went over even better than was anticipated. Movie star fan photos were also given away with each purchase of popcorn. Needless to say, during "Popcorn Week," Palace sales were greatly increased.

Reed Names Three

CHICAGO—Reed Candy Company, at a recent board meeting, named James D. Webb, a vice-president in charge of the eastern sales division; Fred T. Reid, a vice-president in charge of the western sales division; and Winifred Sandberg, secretary.

One example of a complete program of package revisions now in progress at Bunte Brothers Chase Candy Company, Chicago, is the attractive and smart 40 count display box for two-cent chocolate mint patties shown above.

Broil-Quik Develops Infra-Red Double Drum Frankfurter Grill

NEW YORK—The Broil-Quik Appliance Company, after months of research, has developed the new infra-red Broil-Quik Frankfurter Grill. It is said to cook frankfurters faster, tastier, and easier with penetrating infra-red rays.

The grill consists of two easily removable drums, each drum individually operated with automatic controls. It has two incaloy sheeted tubular infra-red grilling elements, one in the center and one at the top of each drum. Each drum holds 40 frankfurters. The grilling is done on one drum at a time while the other can keep the finished franks hot and tender for hours. The grill can cook 40 frankfurters every five minutes or 480 frankfurters per hour.

Each drum is automatically timed. When the frankfurter is cooked, the heat is automatically turned to medium so there is no danger of burned or dried out frankfurters. The frankfurter grill has a bun warmer on top with a water pan which steams the buns and keeps them soft and tasty. The grill is made of triple chrome plated steel and the drums are of stainless steel. It can be easily cleaned.

It measures 21 inches wide, 11½ inches deep, and 28 inches high. It takes a minimum of space while having a large capacity. The rating is 1500 watts, 115 volts, A.C. only.

The company claims it will help increase the frankfurter business because infra-red cooking retains all juices and flavor, giving a tastier frankfurter while eliminating wastage from burned or dried out frankfurters

The Broil-Quik Frankfurter Grill is manufactured by the Broil-Quik Appliance Company, a division of The Peerless Corporation, world's largest manufacturer of infra-red appliances.

Helmco Offers Dura-Bowls

CHICAGO—A newly developed plastic Dura-Bowl, which is practically break proof, is now being used in all fruit wells on the Helmco-Lacy line of ice cream cabinet fountainettes.

Made of high impact polystyrene plastic, in a sanitary white color, the new Dura Bowls increase the capacity of each fruit well by one-half pint, yet are readily interchangeable with the old type bowls and offer the added advantage of accommodating both ladle and pump service.

Faster cooling and easier cleaning are other advantages claimed for the new Dura-Bowls.

Although these improved new bowls are now used as standard equipment on all 24 combination Helmco-Lacy Fountainettes, there has been no increase in the price of the units, according to F. R. Lacy, Jr., Helmco executive vice-president.

Rader Appointed

NEW YORK—Norval B. Rader has been elected assistant to the chairman of the board, Automatic Canteen Company of America, Nathaniel Laverone, chairman, announced recently. Prior to joining Automatic Canteen, Rader was vice-president, Acme Visible Records, Inc., manufacturer of business record systems.

Rolleston Upped By Oh Henry!

CHICAGO—Roswell N. Rolleston has been elected by the board as vice-president in charge of purchasing, Williamson Candy Company, makers of Oh Henry! candy. Rolleston has had over 30 years experience in the candy industry and has headed the purchasing department of the Williamson Candy Company since 1933.

Popsit Plus Launches Testimonial Program

PHILADELPHIA—Several of the industry's most important personages, including executives of major theatre chains and supply houses, are participating in a new public relations and testimonial program endorsing Popsit Plus, liquid seasoning made of pure peanut oil. Taking part in this testimonial series, according to James A. Ryan, president, C. F. Simonin's Sons, Inc., are Francis Barnidge, president, Prunty Seed and Grain Company, St. Louis; Will J. Conner, executive vice-president, John Hamrick Theatres, Seattle; Larry Goldmeier, president, Poppers Supply Company, Philadelphia; and Philip L. Lowe, Theatre Candy Company, Inc., Boston.

Popsit Plus was created by C. F. Simonin's Sons to fill a need for a quality oil with special properties, packed in smaller, more convenient containers. A number of years of experimentation preceded the introduction of Popsit Plus nine years ago. Today, it is the best selling liquid popping oil in the theatre concession and outdoor refreshment field.

Ryan also announced that "at the same time that we are running the testimonial series, we are also scheduling a series of advertisements pointing up the superior qualities of Popsit Plus."

Popsit Plus was one of the first ready-to-pour liquid seasonings packed in easy-to-handle gallon cans, and its extremely high flash point is a real safety factor where inexperienced help are used.

Coffee The E-Z Way

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA—Here's how to serve a better cup of coffee at less cost and more profit by using the E-Z Way Coffeemaker, which is said to save coffee, labor, and time.

Each customer gets a cup of fresh, uniform coffee made expressly for him when it is drawn from the new E-Z Way Coffeemaker, it is said. The same quantity of coffee concentrate is dispensed with each cup; never too much or too little coffee used. One E-Z Way dispenser can furnish 300 cups per hour. It also eliminates handling hot water, waiting for coffee to brew and cleaning up coffee grounds. There is no urn bag, filter, or coffee brewer to wash, and waitresses are not tied up at the coffee urn. A new supply of liquid coffee concentrate is added in seconds. There is never stale or left-over coffee, yet a continuous supply of fresh coffee is available for busy periods. Complete safety is assured, for the E-Z Way has no open flames, and is insulated. It requires little space and does a big job at low original cost.

"The butterlike flavor of

is unequalled in the popping oil field!"

says Mr. Francis Barnidge . . . President of the Prunty Seed & Groin Co., St. Louis, Mo. Owned and operoted by the some fomily for 81 yeors, this company is widely known in theotre, carnival ond concession fields.

Mr. Barnidge says, "Corn popped in POPSIT PLUS has the taste of butter in every mouthful. It's a unique oil that has almost revolutionized the popcorn field. Now carnivals, concessionaires and theatre operators who don't have 'that popcorn with the butterlike flavor' simply are not doing as well as they could – in sales and profits!"

POPSIT PLUS is actually more economical to use in the long run because it leaves fewer duds in the bottom of your popper. And because it's always liquid, it's easier to pour and measure.

Outdoor operators also use POPSIT PLUS for all their frying – hamburgers, french fries, seafood and chicken.

Make the switch to POPSIT PLUS. Try it for just one week. You'll quickly make it your one and only popping and frying oil.

Ginny Wallace, Wometco main office, was bid farewell by fellow workers when she left to continue her studies in Europe. . . . Plans for two new huge drive-ins, each with a 1,000-car capacity, were disclosed by George Hoover, former district manager, Florida State Theatres here. Hoover is international chief barker for Variety Clubs. One of the drive-ins would be located in North Dade county and the other in South Dade. Applications for rezoning were to be considered by the county zoning board this week. Hoover left Florida State Theatres last March after 17 years with that chain. He said that the estimated total investment in the two proposed drive-ins would be $500,000. If the rezoning is approved, work will begin within a few weeks and the two theatres will open in the fall. They will be operated by a firm to be known as Hoover Enterprises. Hoover indicated that he has backing from an out-of-state theatre organization. . . . Members of the Wometco Old Guard organization held a combination party and business meeting at the Variety Club headquarters.

Special ceremonies on stage, including music of the Hillsboro High School band, marked the opening at the Palace, Tampa, Fla., of "The Long Gray Line."

The Winston-Salem and Robin Hood drive-ins, near Winston-Salem, N. C., asked the Forsythe County Commissioners to take over the job of setting the hours on which motion picture houses and drive-ins are to operate on Sunday. Under current law, Sunday movie hours in rural Forsythe County are established by a special state law and prohibits Sunday showings except between the hours of 12:30 p. m., to 6 p. m., and 9 p. m., to midnight. The two drive-ins unable to operate during daylight hours, want to open earlier in order to have time to get in two shows. Attorneys for the drive-ins told the board that drive-ins in adjacent counties are taking away much of the local Sunday trade by opening as soon as the sun goes down.

Madison Outdoor Theatres, Inc., Marshall, N. C., has obtained a certificate of incorporation from the North Carolina secretary of state. The firm has authorized capital stock of $50,000, with the incorporators being L. B. Ramsey and J. C. Dodson, both of Marshall, and Zeno Ponder, Alexander, N. C.

Censor Hearings Shoot for Law

COLUMBUS—Hearings are being conducted on three pro-censorship bills by a seven-member sub-committee of the Ohio House of Representatives judiciary committee, in an effort to whip into shape a censor law which will pass constitutional tests. E. G. James, Republican, Caldwell, is chairman of the sub-committee, and members include John J. Chester, Jr., R., Columbus; Robert E. Zeller, R., Zanesville; Robert F. Groneman, R., Cincinnati; Thomas O. Matia, D., Cleveland; Miss Frances McGovern, D., Akron; and Gilbert Bettman, R., Cincinnati.

The bills under consideration include a Lausche-backed measure sponsored by Jesse Yoder, D., Dayton; John J. Conway, D., Cleveland; James P. Kilbane, D., Cleveland; and Charles W. Whalen, Jr., R., Dayton; another co-sponsored by Andrew Putka, D., Cleveland, and Harry Corkwell, R., Putnam County, and the third bill sponsored by Rep. Louis J. Schneider, Jr., R., Cincinnati.

John C. Harlor, Columbus attorney representing the Motion Picture Association warned the judiciary committee that it is an almost "insurmountable task" to write a censor law that will meet constitutional tests. He said recent court decisions have hit at "vague standards" in censor laws.

Initial hearing was enlivened by a clash of opinions between Judge Clayton Rose of the Franklin County Domestic Relations Court and Judge Hoy Russell of the Holmes County Probate Court. Judge Rose is a leader in the newly-organized Committee For Decent Films in Ohio. Judge Russell, who has owned the Russell theatre in Millersburg for the past 30 years, is critical of Rose's pro-censorship stand.

Boston Crosstown

Allied Artists day in New England, with the presence of Steve Broidy, president, was a huge success. More than 180 exhibitors representing 600 theatres in the area turned out to greet the Allied Artists officials. In his address, Bostonian Broidy reviewed the past history of Monogram-Allied Artists, appraised the present, and evaluated the future. In promising two major productions a month from now on, plus the regular program pictures they have been making, he told of their future production plans with William Wyler, Billy Wilder, and John Huston. In defending the majors who have cut down production because it proved to be more financially successful to the operation of the company whose prime responsibility is to the stockholders, he said, "If you were operating your theatres successfully with 150 pictures a year, would you change you policy because suddenly 400 pictures were made available to you?" In conclusion, he urged support of his AA production plans and asked each exhibitor, buyer and booker present to re-appraise his own total picture situation to find a place for the forthcoming AA product. Seated at the head table with Broidy were Morey "Razz" Goldstein, general sales manager; John Flinn, exploitation and advertising head; Martin J. Mullin, president, New England Theatres, Inc., who was the toastmaster; Ben Abrams, New England district manager; Herman Rifkin, New England franchise holder; Julian Rifkin, vice-president, Rifkin Theatres; John Pavone, New Haven branch manager; and Herman Mintz, Boston attorney. Goldstein said, "We have had to change our national format for this meeting. Here you have welcomed us as your own. We are always happy to return to this city where Mr. Broidy and I were born. A telephone call came in for me today from Walter Reade of New Jersey, who promised that his entire circuit will back the AA production plans and will back them with playdates, not just promises. We recognize the fact that the help you gave us in the past kept us in business. Now we are trying to give you top product to keep you in business." At the conclusion of the speeches, Al Daytz, Daytz Theatre Enterprises, representing 75 theatres in the area, pledged full support to the AA production plans.

James Cagney, star, Paramount's "Run For Cover," was in promoting the picture. . . . Steve Broidy, president, Allied Artists, took time out of his busy schedule to visit with the scientific director, Dr. Sidney Farber, at Variety Club's Jimmy Fund building. Broidy, a former Massachusetts resident, has always been especially interested in the Jimmy Fund.

Ruling Requested On Sunday Law

BOSTON—Times Film Corporation has asked the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts to rule that the Commissioner of Public Safety, Otis M. Whitney, exceeded constitutionality in banning Sunday showings of the French film, "Game of Love," and complained of his censorship on another film, the Swedish picture, "One Summer Of Happiness." The film company has asked for a petition of certiorari to be brought against the Commonwealth to determine the validity of the authority of his actions and seeks to have him be prohibited from activity in the field of censorship of motion pictures. The petitions seeks to have the court declare for distinct results that the existing Sunday licensing law is unconstitutional; that the words "public entertainment" as used in the statute do not apply to motion pictures; that the Commissioner has no authority to censor motion pictures prior to their showings in theatres; and that the Commissioner's action is arbitrary. Attorney for the film company are Alfred Albert, Albert, Albert, and Tyber, and Felix Bilgrey, New York firm of Bilgrey and Levinson.

No damages were asked. Times Film Corporation stated that "Game Of Love" has been banned outright for Sunday showings, while two scenes and several phrases were deleted from "One Summer Of Happiness." "Game Of Love" won the Grand Priz du Cinema Francais in 1954, while the Swedish film "One Summer Of Happiness" won prizes at the International Film Festival, the Cannes Film Festival, and the Berlin Film Festival.

MRS. F. HARDING
38 Church Street, Boston

Head table guests at the recent Allied Artists day in New England at the Hotel Bradford, Boston, when Boston's own Steve Broidy, president, addressed a group of exhibitors on the production plans of the company were, left to right, John Pavone, AA New Haven branch manager; Herman Mintz, Boston theatre attorney; Herman Rifkin, AA New England franchise holder; Broidy; Martin J. Mullin, toastmaster; Morey "Razz" Goldstein, AA general sales manager; Julian Rifkin, vice-president, Rifkin Theatres; Ben Abrams, AA New England district manager; and John Flinn, AA national director of advertising and publicity.

Donald Sweenie, who continues on in the same capacity under the new lessees. This theatre marks the fourth drive-in to be handled by the Levin-Yanofsky combination. Their first ozoner was the Round Hill, Springfield. Later they took over the reins of the Sundown, Westfield. A month ago they signed the lease on the Hadley, Hadley. As soon as the lease was signed on the Nashoba, plans were in the making for the installation of a wide-screen for CinemaScope pictures.

Over 250 owners, managers, circuit executives and others representing over 500 theatres from Connecticut to the Canadian border, supply houses, film buyers, and bookers attended the initial meeting at the Bradford Hotel of the New England Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV. Alfred Starr explained that the national organization had four "specialist sections." They are legal section, headed by Marcus Cohn; technical section; public relations, headed by Robert Taplinger Associates, Inc.; and research, headed by Dr. Dallas Smyth, economist, University of Illinois. With them rests the tremendous task of assembling pertinent data before the FCC deadline of May 9. Directing or coordinating the efforts of the specialists falls upon the National Committee. Assessments for the committee range from $7.50 yearly for four wall theatres up to 500 seats to $75 for those with over 1,500 seats; and for drive-ins, from $7.50 yearly up to 300 car capacity to $37.50 yearly for those over 600-car capacity.

Further regulation of the licensing of open air theatres was aired at a hearing at the State House. A proposed bill asks that the licensing be brought under the department of public safety, stating that the Commissioner of Public Safety may require changes in the structural condition of the open airers if, in his opinion, the safety of the public requires them, before issuing licenses to the owners. No changes shall be ordered in excess of the requirements of a new building of like character, the bill said. Petitioner is Louis H. Glaser, Malden. At the hearing, Ray Feeley, executive secretary, Independent Exhibitors, Inc., of New England, and Frank Lydon, Allied Theatres of New England, took a strong stand in opposition to the bill, saying that if passed in its present form, the bill would allow the Commissioner to step in at any drive-in and ask for structural changes which could cost the exhibitor almost as much as the original construction. They called the bill devastating and an imposition on theatres and the department alike. They also declared that no evidence had been submitted to show there was any need for safety regulations of drive-ins by the department. Supervision is now under the local municipalities under their own licensing authorities in each city and town and should remain there, they said. Lydon and Feeley together represent 365 theatres in the Commonwealth, of which 65 are drive-ins.

Newport

Twenty-five free passes were given to lucky children for the special western and cartoon show at the Coniston.

The Coniston ran a half-page ad in the local paper advertising its showing of "The Long Gray Line." Because of the length of the film, matinees had to be started at an earlier hour than was usual.

North Hampton

Ronald Fucci, proprietor, North Hampton Drive-In, was fined $25 in Rockingham County Superior Court for causing a fire to be lit without permission.

Portsmouth

A special Saturday morning show for brave boys and girls, featuring two chill-arious movies, was run by the Arcadia. Two were admitted on one ticket, with the admission for one or two at 20 cents.

Officials conducting the investigation of the daring daylight holdup of the Civic here report that the description of the holdup man given by Alberta Maddix, cashier, tallied with that of a bandit who robbed the cashier of a theatre in Lewiston, Me., a few days before. She found herself staring at an ugly-looking gun when she went to hand back the change to an adult matinee customer recently. The gunman made off with $70 in rolled change and bills from the theatre receipts and has not yet been apprehended.

Rhode Island

Providence

Three surrounding drive-ins recently opened for the 1955 season. The latest to bow were the Route 44 Drive-In, Pike Drive-In, and the Somerset Family Drive-In. The latter inaugurated a brand new price policy, which is proving extremely popular. A charge of $1.25 for each car is levied regardless of the number of occupants. . . . Bill Trambukis, Loew's State manager, arranged a special premiere showing of "The Long Gray Line." Special invitations were extended to leading state and city dignitaries, members of the press, radio and television staffs, and religious leaders. . . . So encouraged was the Metropolitan management at the attendance at the first special Saturday morning kiddies show, despite the severe ice storm, that several more have been planned. The most recent offered two full-length features, 12 cartoons, and short subjects; the four-and-one-half-hour show being presented for only 10 cents. Adults had to pay 25 cents. Parents were evidently glad to get their "Angels" away from TV and out of the houses for an entire afternoon at the movies.

The Westminster Playhouse was the locale of the state premiere of "The She-Wolf". . . . The Met continues its policy of presenting the popular Eddie Zack stage shows Sunday matinees and evenings. It is the only live entertainment on tap in this area, insofar as theatres are concerned. . . . Announcement was recently made that Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey's Circus would play this city next June. It will be the first local appearance in five years. . . . Harold C. Stanzler, well-known theatreman, has been appointed a member of the State's Industrial Code Commission for Safety and Health.

The Cranston Auto Theatre was the third nearby openairer to usher in the 1955 drive-in season.

Albert J. Siner, Strand manager, and Mrs. Siner recently anounced the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor DeLaRemee Siner, to Wendall Jefferson Flanders, Air Force, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hart, also of this city. Miss Siner is a graduate of North Providence High School. Her fiance, an alumnus of La Salle Academy, attended Providence College and graduated from the Rhode Island College of Pharmacy. He is now stationed at Shreveport, La. . . . Two more surrounding open-airers inaugurated their 1955 season. The Quonset Drive-In distributed free doughnuts to all patrons, and the Hill also opened.

In the face of loud and boisterous opposition, Nathan Winer, this city, and Christopher Williams, Hoxsie, R I., withdrew their petition to operate an open-air theatre in Norwood, R. I. An overflow crowd, bearing petitions from over 260 land-owners and residents living in the area adjoining the site of the proposed drive-in shouted its hostility when the application came up for consideration by the Town Council.. The applying partners, under the name W and W Associates, Inc., denied that the erection of the open-airer would create traffic problems or result in devaluation of property. In the face of the bitter opposition voiced, the petition was withdrawn. This latest petition was one of several attempts in the past few years to clear the way for construction of an auto-theatre in this section. None has met with success.

The Providence Visitor, official Diocesan newspaper, recently announced that it would no longer accept newspaper advertising featuring films rated by the Legion of Decency in the Class "B" category. Only pictures listed as A-1 or A-2 will be accepted in the future. . . . "The Long Gray Line" held for a second week at Loew's State. . . . A variety of novelty gifts for ladies are being distributed free at the Bay State Drive-In to encourge early arrival at mid-week performances.

A small but significantly clarifying amendment to the Noonan film license fees bill, passed by the Assembly 101-0, postponed action in the Senate for a week. The amendment inserted the word "entire" between "additional" and "copy" in the clause dealing with the charge by motion picture division, State Education Department, for prints. The measure provided that the fee be increased from three to four dollars 'for each one thousand feet or fraction thereof of original film," and from two to four dollars "for each additional entire copy of an original film for which a license or permit has been issued." Addition of "entire" made it clear that the charge for copies, or prints, was to be a total one, not on a per-thousand-foot basis, as currently is the case. The understanding here is that Motion Picture Producers Association backed the bill, because the all-over cost of censorship would be lowered. In fact, a representative of the Association so informed Senator Fred L. Moritt, Brooklyn Democrat and industry champion, when he called on Moritt to explain the measure's objective. Meanwhile, the State Education Department, through counsel Charles A. Brind, Jr., indicated that a memorandum in opposition would be filed with Governor Harriman if the bill passed the Legislature. The Budget Division was believed ready to take similar action.

Daylight saving time will be mandatory throughout New York State, from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October, if Governor Averell Harriman signs the Williamson-Brook bill. The Assembly passed it, 117-30, after a sharp debate. In doing so, the Lower House concurred in Senate action taken five weeks before. Upstate Republican assemblymen opposed the measure on the ground it would cause hardship to farmers. Assemblyman John R. Brook, Manhattan Republican, defended the proposal, explaining its intent was to achieve conformity with neighboring states.

Associated British Pictures, Inc., has been authorized to conduct business in New York. Capital stock is 200 shares, no par value. Attorneys are Friedman and Bareford.

A new captain, Clayton Pantages, is at the helm in the 20th-Fox exchange. He advanced from salesman to manager when Nat C. Rosen moved to the larger Pittsburgh branch in the same capacity. Rosen had been a successful Albany manager for three and a half years, with the company, 25 years. He came here from a sales post in Philadelphia. Pantages arrived on the local scene about two years ago, after previous service in the Boston, New Haven, and Buffalo offices. He started as a student booker in Boston.

A $1,050,000 treble damage anti-trust suit against nine major distributors, three Fabian, two Warner, and two Hellman corporations was filed in U. S. District Court at Utica, N. Y., by Capitol City Theatre Corporation, which operated the Eagle, here, from July 1, 1944, to April 1, 1951. The complaint, drafted by attorney Jacob M. Olshansky, alleged that as a result of an "illegal monopoly, conspiracy, and unlawful acts" by defendants, plaintiff was forced to sell the neighborhood subrun house. All Albany theatres were, in effect, covered by the action, including two now closed, Royal and Paramount. Fabian Theatres Corporation, Fast Theatres, Inc., and Copia Realty Corporation were the Fabian units made defendants; Warner Brothers Circuit Management Corporation and Stanley Mark Strand Corporation, the Warner companies. Albany Royal Theatre Corporation and Patroon Theatre Corporation were the Hellman concerns named. Paramount, Loew's, Warners, 20th-Fox, Universal-International, Columbia, RKO, and United Artists were the distributor defendants targeted in the complaint.

Legalization of bingo, proposed via constitutional amendment in McGahan-Savarese bill, would adversely affect small town and neighborhood theatres and would close some of them. So Senator Harry K. Morton, Hornell Republican, declared in Upper House debate preceding adoption of the measure by a vote of 48 to 8. Morton added that such closings would be felt across the country. Steuben County theatres were "among the first to offer congratulations" when the legal ban on bingo was enforced, Senator Morton revealed. He questioned whether Governor Averell Harriman had considered the adverse effect of bingo's legalization on the amusement industry. The Governor is represented as favoring a quicker approach to such legalization, via a bill removing the penalties for playing bingo in New York State.

Kirk Douglas recently took the oath as a member of the Albany, N. Y., Variety Club, with former chief barker Harry Lamont left, performing the administrative duties. Douglas, a native of nearby Amsterdam, N. Y., was in the city for the premiere of U-I's "Man Without A Star," Strand.

Watertown

Bill Lavery, Schine's Olympic, tied the Marine Corps League in to his engagement of "Battle Cry" recently very effectively, and got wonderful support from them. He built up a military premiere and as a highlight secured the appearance of Marine Major William M. Streeter, who trekked up from Albany especially for the event. The Major appeared on the stage surrounded by many marines in various uniforms, with a color guard, some home on furlough, local dignitaries, etc. To get femme interest, a girl was picked from 12 big stores in town to appear on the stage as "Sweetheart Of The Marine Corps League." Lavery promoted flowers for the event and also had a lobby display of weapons, Japanese souvenirs, etc., the focal point of which was a special electric display showing the actual, cutaway workings of an M-1 rifle. The local marines transported this from and to Syracuse. Further, a group of naval pennants was secured from the Naval Reserve to dress up the marquee. The Marine Corps League made up a theatre party for opening night, getting all dressed up for the occasion, inasmuch as the film was dedicated to their organization in theatre ads, etc. The visiting major was principal speaker at a dinner given in his honor by the Marine Corps League at noon. In the afternoon, he addressed a meeting of the local chapter of the National Defense Committee, following which he made a tape recording at the local radio station, which was played back later in the day. He also made a TV appearance and then appeared at the theatre. Everything was promoted for this event.

In bally of "Gangbusters," John D. O'Rear, manager, Colonial, conceived the idea of presenting Joe Bianco, police reporter, and Sergeant L. D. Jenkins, State Police, with the Philip H. Lord's Gangbusters' Award of Merit. Bianco's story was recently presented on the "Big Story" TV show, and Jenkins had conducted the investigation that was dramatized. A three-column picture showing manager O'Rear presenting the certificates was carried by The Evening News.

MGM's huge glass slipper, advertising "The Glass Slipper," was displayed. After a day in the city it moved on to Reading. The slipper is mounted on a jeep-powered float and attracted widespread attention about the city, although the Police Department refused permission to park it in front of Loew's. . . . A contest conducted by manager John D. O'Rear, Colonial, in conjunction with the showing of "Davey Crockett," proved most popular. Upwards of 70 youngsters participated in the dress-up competition. They appeared on stage, and the winners were selected by the audience. Prizes included baseball gloves, wrist watch, records, kites, and bicycles. The grand prize winners appeared on TV.

For "Big House, U. S. A.," manager William Riding, Loew's, and his assistant, Ken Steckline, arranged extensive radio and TV tieups and put on a street stunt that was the talk of the town. They had a youth dressed up like a convict on the street passing out gag $10 bills.

Censors Suffer Setback In "Game Of Love" Case

BALTIMORE — The Maryland State Board of Motion Picture Censors took another reversal when Chief Judge Emory H. Niles in Baltimore City Court ruled that the film, "Game Of Love," is not "substantially to arouse sexual desires."

This ruling by the court is probably the final instance involving the present chairman, Sydney R. Traub, whose regime has been marked by numerous court decisions reversing the board's interpretation of indecency and other moral delineations.

Traub was not reappointed by Maryland's Governor Theodore McKeldin, and his successor, Mortono Goldstein, a Baltimore lawyer, takes over the chairmanship on May 1.

Judge Niles upheld the appeal of Times Film Corporation, New York, in declaring that although it "may be fairly contended that the film is based upon a narrative of improper conduct, it does not, in the opinion of the court, constitute an incitement to such conduct."

One of the interesting aspects of the case is that both sides accepted the definition of obscenity contained in a Senate bill now pending before the Maryland General Assembly in Annapolis. The bill declares that "a motion picture film or view shall be considered to be obscene if, when considered as a whole, its calculated purpose or dominant effect is substantially to arouse sexual desires, and if the probability of this effect is so great as to outweigh whatever other merits the film may possess."

The front of the Senate was really dressed up for the double bill, "West of Zanzibar" and "Destry." Manager Bernard J Bispeck conceived a real jungle effect complete with that box office. . . . In promotion of "The Man Without A Star," Senate manager Bispeck arranged with the Bantam Book Company to display posters on their seven trucks advertising the film over three weeks in advance of the showing. The company also placed window cards throughout the territory. In another tie-up, with Lever Brothers, the theatre will give away three bars of Lux soap to the first 300 customers on opening day, April 9. Signs advertising the film were also in food stores throughout the area.

John Roach, manager, SW Stanley, Philadelphia, looks on as Fred Bennett, center, popular WPEN disc jockey, recently awarded an Olympic television set to Mrs. Walter J. Byrne, Philadelphia, as first prize winner in Columbia's "The Long Gray Line" word game contest conducted by the station in conjunction with the showing of the film at the theatre.

ALLIED ARTISTS

An Annapolis Story (5513)

DRAMA
81M.

(Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Colorful service film has the angles.

STORY: Annapolis Midshipmen and brothers John Derek and Kevin McCarthy aim to be Navy career men. On a training cruise, Derek is injured, his life saved by McCarthy, and sent to a Naval Hospital. He is visited by Diana Lynn, engaged to McCarthy, and the two are drawn to each other. McCarthy learns of this and the brothers are quite hostile to one another. Circumstances demand that they stay together, however, and they both go to Korea as Navy jet pilots. Lynn goes to Tokyo with her Navy Captain father. Derek gets leave and visits her, but she tells him she has discovered she still loves McCarthy. He returns and the two brothers go out on a flight. McCarthy's plane is hit and he is badly wounded. Derek fights off enemy raiders, talks his brother back to consciousness and stands by as a helicopter rescues him. At a shore hospital, Lynn tells McCarthy of her love.

X-RAY: This entry should have wide appeal for younger moviegoers, especially. The Technicolor hues are bright, and the production captures much of the spirit of the Naval Academy and student life. War footage is well integrated, and for a change all leading players come out alive. The pace is fast, performances spirited, and interest is held throughout. The story line is familiar, but the Derek and Lynn names will help considerably. The screen play is by Dan Ullman and Geoffrey Homes, from a story by the former. Songs heard are "Navy Blue And Gold" and "The Engagement Waltz."

AD LINES: "All The Glory Of Annapolis And The Men Who Rule The Waves"; "Navy Wings Scream Across A Hostile Sky"; "War And Women Tear Brothers Apart—And Put Them Together Again."

High Society (5514)

COMEDY
61M.

ESTIMATE: Average Bowery Boys entry.

CAST: Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall, Bernard Gorcey, Amanda Blake, David Condon, Addison Richards, Dayton Lummis, Ronald Keith, Dave Barry, Bennie Bartlett. Produced by Ben Schwalb; directed by William Beaudine.

STORY: High society crook Dayton Lummis meets the Bowery Boys at their garage, learns Huntz Hall's name is "Jones," sees a way to use him as a foil to grab an inheritance which will go to Ronald Keith unless another claim is made. Leo Gorcey and Bernard Gorcey go with Hall to help him crash high society, leaving Bennie Bartlett and David Condon to operate the garage. They meet Lummis' conniving sister, Amanda Blake, and crooked lawyer Addison Richards. However, they finally catch wise to the plot against Keith and break it up in their usual slapstick way.

X-RAY: Bowery Boys fans will go for this one as they did for the others. It is the usual nonsense, alleged comic action, but where the boys are popular it will rate with the rest of their long running series. Performances and direction are average, and this will do for the lower half. The screen play is by Bert Lawrence and Jerome S. Gottler.

AD LINES: "What A Ball; What A Brawl!"; "The Bowery Boys' Swankiest, Prankiest Laugh Spree"; "Up To Their High Hats In Hilarity."

Shotgun (5515)

81M.

(Print by Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory programmer for the action spots.

CAST: Sterling Hayden, Yvonne DeCarlo, Zachary Scott, Guy Prescott, Robert Wilke, Angela Greene, Paul Marion, John Pickard, Ralph Sanford, Rory Mallinson, Fiona Hale, Ward Wood, Lane Chandler, Al Wyatt, Harry Harvey, Jr. Produced by John C. Champion; directed by Lesley Selander.

STORY: Deputy Sterling Hayden vows to avenge the death of Marshal Lane Chandler, killed by a shotgun wielded by Guy Prescott, whom he trails. Hayden meets Prescott's henchman, Robert Wilke, traveling with half-breed Yvonne De Carlo. He is forced to kill Wilke and take De Carlo along on the hunt through Indian country. Hayden rescues bounty hunter Zachary Scott from Indians and the pair are ambushed by Prescott's forces, whom they kill. Hayden sets out after Prescott, who is selling guns to the Indians, and Scott and DeCarlo follow and are attacked by Apaches. Hayden finds Scott tortured and dying and learns that DeCarlo has been taken prisoner. He fearlessly enters the Indian camp, finds Prescott and DeCarlo, and the chief, struck by his courage, orders a shotgun duel. Prescott loses his nerve, attempts to escape and is killed as a coward by an Apache spear, with Hayden and DeCarlo free to depart.

X-RAY: This programmer will fit neatly into action bills and outdoor spots. The DeCarlo, Hayden, and Scott names can be sold, and the story, while not highly original, holds enough action and surprises to maintain interest. Color is good, performances solid, and production and direction show care. It was written by Clark E. Reynolds and Rory Calhoun.

AD LINES: "His Lust For Revenge Could Be His Destruction"; "The Fury Of The Untamed West And The Man Who Challenged It With A 'Shotgun'"; "He Was Grim, She No Better Than She Should Be, And The Combination Was Dynamite."

COLUMBIA

Cell 2455, Death Row

72M.

ESTIMATE: Prison meller for lower half.

CAST: William Campbell, Robert Campbell, Marian Carr, Kathryn Grant, Harvey Stephens, Vince Edwards, Allen Nourse, Diane De Laire, Bart Bradley, Paul Dubov, Tyler MacDuff, Buck Kartalian, Eleanor Audley, Thom Carney, Joe Forte, Howard Wright, Glenn Gordon, Jimmy Murphy, Jerry Mickelsen, Bruce Sharpe, Wayne Taylor. Produced by Wallace MacDonald; directed by Fred F. Sears.

STORY: William Campbell, waiting in death row for his execution, recalls the events that put him in his present predicament. Campbell gets his start in crime when he is forced to steal food for his poverty stricken family. Kathryn Grant introduces him into a gang of teenage hoodlums. He takes part in every kind of crime, from auto theft to armed robbery, and within a year is leader of the gang. Campbell is captured and sent to reform school, but is paroled for good behavior. He reorganizes his gang and commits a series of holdups, but is caught again and sent San Quentin. Campbell, transferred to an honor farm, manages to escape with the help of girl friend Grant. On his first night out he is captured and sent to Folsom prison. Another parole sets him free, but he is again picked up, this time accused of holding up a couple in a parked car, beating the man into insensibility and assaulting the girl. Campbell begins to study law and acts as his own lawyer at the trial. He loses the trial but gains a stay of execution. Studying law in prison, Campbell manages to win three reprieves from the gas chamber in six years. And on this night Campbell is again informed by the warden that another stay of execution has been granted to him.

X-RAY: This supposedly authenticated film biography has a goodly amount of interest and does not lack in action or violence. Performances and direction are satisfactory and settings convey a certain air of factuality to the film. Screen play is by Jack De Witt, based upon the book by Caryl Chessman. It should be okeh on the lower half. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program price.

AD LINES: "What Starts A Man Upon A Life Of Crime?"; "Only One Man Could Save Him From The Gas Chamber . . . And That Man Was Himself"; "The True Story Of The Incredible Life Of A Public Enemy."

Jungle Moon Men

70M.

ESTIMATE: For the lower half.

CAST: Johnny Weissmuller, Jean Bryon, Helene Stanton, Bill Henry, Myron Healey, Billy Curtis, Michael Granger, Frank Sully, Benjamin F. Chapman, Jr., Kenneth L. Smith, Ed Hinton. Produced by Sam Katzman; directed by Charles S. Gould.

STORY: Johnny Weissmuller and anthropologist Jean Byron go into the country of the midget sized and poison dart equipped Moon Men for research in connection with an ancient Egyptian sun-god. The pair meet Michael Granger, chief of the Arribes natives, who tells them that his son has been kidnapped by the Moon Men. The party is next joined by Bill Henry. Granger's son is found dead wearing an Egyptian costume and a diamond pendant. When Billy Curtis, leader of the Moon Men, is captured, he reveals that the dead man escaped from Priestess Helene Stanton, who wanted him for her priest. A group of Moon Men attack, rescue Curtis, and make off with Henry. Weissmuller and Byron start out for Stanton's Temple and come upon crooked trader Myron Healy and henchmen, who are after the Moon Men's diamonds. It is learned that Henry is to be the new high priest. When Healy attemts to steal the diamonds, Stanton orders the whole group of foreigners killed by lions. Healy and his men are exterminated by the beasts, but Weismuller, Byron, and Henry manage to escape. Priestess Stanton, who has been alive for centuries, is finally disintegrated by the sun when she steps outside the temple. The Granger tribe arrives and the Moon Men agree to live with them in harmony.

X-RAY: This entry is in keeping with the "Jungle Jim" series and should be okeh on the program in action houses. Story, acting, and production are of fair quality and should be accepted by youngsters and non-discriminating adults. The screen play is by Dwight V. Babcock and Jo Pagano.

TIP ON BIDDING: Low Bracket.

AD LINES: "What Was The Dreaded Secret Hidden In The Land Of The Moon Men?" "Johnny Weissmuller Battles Primitive Natives, Ruthless Killers, And Dark Forces From Ancient Egypt"; "A Fortune In Diamonds, An Egyptian Temple In The Heart Of The Jungle, And The Secret Of Immortality."

The Return Of October (733)

COMEDY 89M.

ESTIMATE: Names may help reissue.

CAST: Glenn Ford, Terry Moore, Albert Sharpe, James Gleason, Dame May Whitty, Henry O'Neill, Frederic Tozere, Samuel S. Hinds, Nana Bryant, Lloyd Corrigan, Roland Winters, Stephen Dunne, Gus Schilling, Murray Alper, Horace MacMahon, Victoria Horne, Byron Foulger, Bill Pearson, Russell Hicks, Robert Malcolm, Ray Walker. Produced by Rudolph Mate; directed by Joseph H. Lewis.

STORY: Terry Moore is brought up by her uncle, James Gleason, in the atmosphere of the race track. To Gleason winning the Derby meant everything, and he tells her that if he dies, he will try to come back as a horse to win it. He dies, and Moore is sent to her aunt, Dame May Whitty. While at a horse auction, she is struck by a horse named October, and believes that he is the spirit of Gleason. She and Glenn Ford, a college psychiatry instructor, both bid, finally buy him together. The horse shows promise, and a trial is made at the school track. Ford is blamed by the University president, who is under pressure by the board of trustees to economize. They fall in love, while Ford makes notes on her behavior. Eventually, his paper is published and is used by Whitty's crooked lawyer to try to break her will in which she leaves everything to Moore. Ford proves her sane, and October is entered in the Derby, which he wins, after which he drops dead.

X-RAY: When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of October, 1948, it was said: "Here is a comedy with a slightly different twist and with many humorous situations. Ford and Moore carry off the leads well, and the family as a whole should go for this light, colorful entry. The direction and production are apt, and the effort provides a number of laughs. The film is based on a story by Connie Lee and Karen DeWolf."

TIP ON BIDDING: Reissue price.

AD LINES: "Was He A Horse Or Her Uncle? A Lot Of Money Waited On The Outcome"; "Loads Of Fun And Laughter In This Gay Story Of A Racing Fan Who Was Supposed To Have Returned As A Horse To Win The Derby"; "Believe In Reincarnation? . . . See 'The Return Of October'."

Tight Spot (728)

MELODRAMA 97M.

ESTIMATE: Interesting meller with names to help.

CAST: Ginger Rogers, Edward G. Robinson, Brian Keith, Lucy Marlowe, Lorne Greene, Katherine Anderson, Allen Nourse, Peter Leeds, Doye O'Dell, Eve McVeagh, Helen Wallace, Frank Gerstle, Gloria Ann Simpson, Robert Shield, Norman Keats. Produced by Lewis J. Rachmil; directed by Phil Karlson.

STORY: Convict Ginger Rogers is whisked out of prison and taken in secret to a luxurious hotel suite. She is accompanied on the trip by matron Katherine Anderson and detective Brian Keith. Rogers meets government attorney Edward G. Robinson. The government is preparing a case against gangleader Lorne Greene. Rogers can testify in court that he committed perjury at the time of his naturalization, making his deportation certain. Rogers realizes that to testify would be putting her life in danger. She refuses to take the stand against the gang leader. One of Greene's gunmen sends bullets flying in Rogers' direction, but Keith slays the intruder. It is discovered that Anderson was hit, and she dies. Rogers agrees to testify. Keith is hauled in by Greene, and it is learned he is a crooked cop. Greene orders him to leave a window unlatched in Rogers' suite so that she can be eliminated. He has fallen in love with Rogers, and when the gunman enters, Keith shoots it out with him. Both men are killed but Rogers remains alive and testifies in court.

X-RAY: Although the film deals with a conventional theme, production and screen play are such that the entry maintains a high degree of interest throughout. Acting is well handled. Screen play is by William Bowers. It should do okeh as part of the program.

TIP ON BIDDING: Better program rates.

AD LINES: "She Must Help The People That Sent Her To Prison"; "When You Are Marked For Murder . . . Even The Police Cannot Help"; "They Threw Her In Prison . . . And Now They Wanted Her Life."

IFE

Too Young For Love

DRAMA 88M.

(Italian-French-made)
(Dubbed in English)

ESTIMATE: Satisfactory import for the art spots.

CAST: Marina Vlady, Michel Beck, Aldo Fabrizi, Fernand Gravet, Xenia Valderi, Vittorio Sanipoli, Lolo Braccini, Lauro Gazzolo, Massimo Poanforini, Nando Bruno, Edoardo Passarelli, Paolo Ferrara, Margherita Nicosia. Produced by Niccolo Theodoli; directed by Lionello de Felice.

STORY: Pierre Michel Beck, 15-year-old son of the vice-perfect, Fernand Gravet, of a small town, is maladjusted at school and even more unhappy at home where his mother, Xenia Valderi, is constantly fighting with his father. Beck meets Marina Vlady, a poor girl of 15. They become friends, and Beck finds comfort in the home of the girl and her father, Aldo Fabrizi, a petty criminal. The boy's parents decide to send him to a boarding school. Before leaving, Beck visits Vlady, whose father had just been led away to prison. Alone and afraid, the two children kiss and try to comfort each other in the few hours before they will be separated. Several months later, Beck runs away from school to join Vlady. He learns she is expecting a child as a result of their brief union. Permitted to take his examinations in town, he is in the midst of them when Vlady's child is born. Beck rushes to the hospital to find that she has died in child birth. Beck's parents, horrified at the tragic consequences of their neglect, adopt the baby and determine to embark on a happier life together.

X-RAY: Fine acting accentuates a tender story, both being smoothly welded together by adept direction into fine fare for the art and specialty houses. The production has all the realism necessary to adequately portray its touchy theme. The screen play is by Franco Brusati, Lionello De Felice, and Vittorio Nino Novarese.

AD LINES: "They Had Committed The Crime . . . But Who Were The Real Criminals?" "The Truth About Adolescent Love," "They Were Too Young For Love . . . But That Didn't Stop Them."

The Silver Star (5411)

WESTERN 75M.

ESTIMATE: Fair western.

CAST: Edgar Buchanan, Marie Windsor, Lon Chaney, Earl Lyon, Richard Bartlett, Barton MacLane, Morris Ankrum, Edith Evanson, Steve Rowland, Michael Whalen. Produced by Earl Lyon; directed by Richard Bartlett.

STORY: Earl Lyon is elected sheriff over lawyer Lon Chaney, succeeding Edgar Buchanan, who retired. Lyon doesn't want the job since both his father and grandfather before him died in office, and when bad 'un Richard Bartlett and his gunmen challenge him, he refuses to fight despite urging by his fiancee, Marie Windsor. Buchanan straps on his guns again, goes after the gunman, shoots two of his henchmen, but is wounded. Lyon kills Bartlett in a running gun duel and learns that Chaney is in league with blacksmith Barton MacLane. Chaney had hired Bartlett to kill him, hoping to open the town to gamblers. MacLane is shot by Lyon's friend, Steve Rowland, while Lyon runs Chaney out of town.

X-RAY: Western fans will find this okeh and it has quite a few names in the cast to help out. The original story and screen play by Richard Bartlett and Ian MacDonald is fair, although there is not too much action. Production is average and there is one song, "The Silver Star," composed and sung by Jimmy Wakely.

AD LINES: "Target For A Gunman's Vengeance"; "Crack Of A Bullet And A Coward Became A Killer"; "A Taut Western Tale Of A Sheriff Under Fire."

MGM

Interrupted Melody

BIOGRAPHICAL DRAMA WITH MUSIC 106M.

(CinemaScope) (Eastman Color)

ESTIMATE: Well-made entry has angles.

CAST: Glenn Ford, Eleanor Parker, Roger Moore, Cecil Kellaway, Peter Leeds, Evelyn Ellis, Walter Baldwin, Ann Codee, Leopold Sachse, Stephen Bekassy. Produced by Jack Cummings; directed by Curtis Bernhardt.

STORY: Eleanor Parker (Marjorie Lawrence) journeys from her native Australia to Paris in order to develop her voice. She becomes famous and sings in leading opera houses both in Europe and America. Over protests of her manager brother, Roger Moore, Parker marries Glenn Ford and limits her singing engagements to New York, where she can be close to her husband. In order to get more training, she starts on a tour of Latin America. Tragedy strikes in the form of polio. She is now paralyzed and Ford neglects his practice in order to take her to top specialists and then to Florida. Parker grows more and more depressed. With Ford's aid, she snaps out of her dejection and agrees to make a singing appearance in her wheel chair, but loses courage and flees home. She unsuccessfully attempts suicide. Parker persuades Ford to resume his practice in New York. She then makes appearances in veterans' hospitals, which eventually give her the courage to sing at the Met. At a special performance of "Tristan and Isolde," Parker performs in a wheel chair and stands for the first time during the final scene of the opera.

X-RAY: This film is a highly entertaining entry, liberally endowed with romance, drama, and emotional impact. The inspirational story is smoothly handled both in production and direction, and Parker and Ford contribute fine acting, bolstered by good supporting performances. The dubbed voice of Eileen Farrell tackles a diversity of opera arias in expert fashion. The film should have wide appeal with entertainment angles for all. Written by William Ludwig and Sonya Levien, based on the life story of Marjorie Lawrence. The music includes "O Don Fatale," "Habanera," "Musetta's Waltz," "Finale Act 1 from Il Trovatore," "Un Bel Di Vedremo," "Seguidilla," "Duet," "My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice," "Immolation Scene from Goetterdammerung," excerpts from "Act 3 of Tristan and Isolde," "Annie Laurie," "Over The Rainbow," and "Waltzing Matilda."

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD LINES: "She Had A Great Voice And A Greater Heart"; "The Inspirational Story Of One Of Opera's Greatest Stars"; "They Praised Her Golden Voice And Courageous Spirit."

The Prodigal

MELODRAMA 114M.

(CinemaScope) (Eastman Color)

ESTIMATE: Highly interesting and entertaining entry.

CAST: Lana Turner, Edmund Purdom, Louis Calhern, Audrey Dalton, James Mitchell, Neville Brand, Walter Hampden, Taina Elg, Francis L. Sullivan, Joseph Wiseman, Sandra Descher, John Dehner, Cecil Kellaway, Philip Tonge, David Leonard, Henry Daniell, Paul Cavanagh, Dayton Lummis, Tracey Roberts, Jarma Lewis, Jay Novello, Dorothy Adams. Directed by Richard Thorpe; produced by Charles Schnee.

STORY: In 70 B.C., Edmund Purdom and John Dehner, sons of Hebrew patriarch Walter Hampden, rescue mute runaway slave James Mitchell from being killed by Neville Brand. Purdom buys him from Brand, and as the latter rides off he hurls a spear at Purdom, which is taken in the shoulder by Mitchell. Hampden informs Purdom that he has selected Audrey Dalton for his betrothed. He likes her but doesn't know whether he can love her. He meets Louis Calhern, high priest for the idol Baal, and sees and is entranced with his companion, Lana Turner, high priestess for idol Astarte. Purdom refuses to sell Mitchell back to Calhern and vows to have Turner. He breaks his betrothal and sets out for Damascus with part of his inheritance and Mitchell. Calhern seeks more wealth by buying up the grain harvest and charging the people dearly for the food with the aid of money lender Francis Sullivan, who bows to the charms of Turner. Purdom is brought before her by Taina Elg, virtuous body slave. Before she will submit to him, she decrees that he must buy a huge pearl for the forhead of her idol, but he refuses. Later, at a gambling session, Purdom wins Elg for Mitchell. Again he is tempted by Turner but hasn't enough to buy the pearl and sends Mitchell to Hampden for the rest of his money. He can't wait, however, and borrows from Sullivan, not even bothering to read the contract. Bandits under the command of Brand attack his villa, burn it, kill Elg, capture Mitchell, and steal the gold. Purdom is sold into slavery with Mitchell to Calhern. He can gain his freedom if he will renounce his God, but refuses. The people are ripe for revolt. Turner learns of Purdom's plot and tries to sound an alarm. Brand is killed and Mitchell kills Calhern in revenge for the slaying of Elg. Turner is killed when Purdom refuses to defend her, and the idols are burned. Purdom returns home to find a welcome and Dalton awaiting him ready for his love.

X-RAY: There are all sorts of entertainments to be found in this spectacle for adult audiences. There's a goodly amount of action, sex, intrigue, lavish settings and costumes, cruelty, greed, passion, etc. Based on the Biblical story in Luke, Chapter XV, it is developed at an intriguing pace. The cast does a good job in the main. The direction and production are in the better class. With the proper handling, this can do as well as other attractions with Biblical themes and backgrounds, in addition to which there are numerous exploitation possibilities. The screen play is by Maurice Zimm adapted by Joe Breen, Jr., and Samuel James Larssen.

MELODRAMA 94M.

(Made in Italy)

ESTIMATE: Meller has angles to sell.

CAST: Silvana Mangano, Michael Rennie, Vittorio Gassman, Shelley Winters, Katherine Dunham, Eduardo Ciannelli, Mary Clare, Martitia Palmer, Cecilia Maris. Produced by Carlo Ponti and Dino DeLaurentiis; directed by Robert Rossen.

STORY: Although she lives in poverty and works as a sales girl in a Venetian glass factory Silvana Mangano dreams of becoming a dancer. Her boy friend, Vittorio Gassman, works at the gambling casino. While visiting Gassman at the casino Mangano watches the Katherine Dunham troupe, managed by Shelley Winters, rehearse for the big ball. Count Michael Rennie sees Mangano and invites her to the ball. Mangano goes, and drinking heavily, does a wild mambo with the Dunham troupe. Rennie later attacks her. Winters offers the humiliated Mangano a job as a dancer. Mangano quickly becomes a star performer and returns to Venice at the height of her fame. Gassman asks her to leave and live with him. Mangano agrees and Winters is killed by an auto while trying to make Mangano change her mind. Rennie finds Mangano and proposes marriage. Gassman, who learns that Rennie has a rare blood disease and cannot live long, talks Mangano into marrying Rennie so that they may get his money. Rennie's family snubs Mangano, who soon learns that she really loves Rennie. Mangano tells Gassman the deal is off. The infuriated Gassman fights with Rennie, who is wounded and dies. Rennie's will leaves Mangano all his fortune, but she turns it over to his mother and sister and goes back to the Dunham troupe to pick up her dancing career.

X-RAY: The title does not prepare the viewer for the melodramatic theme and might be the source of some difficulty. Although the plot holds few surprises, the authentic backgrounds and top-flight cast blend the varied elements into an interesting offering. Mangano's dancing and emoting give the film its main spark, with Gassman as the heavy coming in a close second. With a number of strong selling angles this film shapes up as good entry for first-run and class houses, but will probably find the going a bit rough in the small town situations. Several songs are heard, including "New Love, New Wine," "Boogie In Brazil," "It Wasn't The Red Wine," and "Back To Bahia." Screen play is by Guido Piovene, Ivo Perilli, Ennio De Concini, and Robert Rossen.

TIP ON BIDDING: Better program rates.

AD LINES: "A Film As Savage And Exciting As The 'Mambo' "; "Silvana Mangano In Her Most Exciting And Sensational Role"; "Emotions Ripped Bare By The Sensuous Rhythm Of The 'Mambo'."

Run For Cover (5410)

OUTDOOR DRAMA 93M.

(VistaVision) (Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Interesting outdoor drama has names to sell.

CAST: James Cagney, Viveca Lindfors, John Derek, Jean Hersholt, Grant Withers, Jack Lambert, Ernest Borgnine, Irving Bacon, Trevor Bardette, Ray Teal, John Miljan, Denver Pyle, Emerson Treacy, Gus Schilling, Phil Chambers, Harold Kennedy, Joe Haworth. Produced by William H. Pine and William C. Thomas; directed by Nicholas Ray.

STORY: James Cagney meets young John Derek, and the new friends head into Derek's town. A frightened trainman mistakes them for bandits and throws them money bags to avoid trouble. A posse chases the innocent duo, wounding Derek, who is taken to the home of Swedish immigrants Jean Hersholt and his daughter, Viveca Lindfors. Cagney stays on to nurse Derek, who has become bitter, back to health, and the chastened townspeople offer him a job as sheriff. He takes the crippled Derek as deputy and proposes to Lindfors. Derek remains bitter, however, particularly since his affliction seems to keep him from doing his job as Cagney's assistant. He quits as deputy. The bank is robbed and Hersholt killed, with robber Grant Withers revealing that Cagney spent some time in prison. Cagney explains that the charge leading to his imprisonment was false, but the townspeople begin to mistrust him. He and Derek follow the criminals across the desert alone and find the money abandoned and the criminals dead. Derek tries to kill Cagney in a swirling river, revealing that he intends to split the loot with gunman Ernest Borgnine. Cagney survives the rapids, follows Derek to an abandoned building, and shoots Borgnine. He also kills Derek, thinking that he was about to shoot, when in reality Derek saved him from being shot by the wounded Borgnine. Cagney returns with the loot to a much wiser group of townsfolk.

X-RAY: Cagney is at his best in another rugged portrayal and is aided by a story that has sufficient action as well as careful character portrayal. Derek, too, is seen to advantage in a more demanding role than has been his lot of late. The exterior shots in VistaVision have a sparkling clarity and the scenery is some of the west's bests, Direction and production are in the better category and the film also marks the welcome return of Jean Hersholt. Screen play is by Winston Miller. Legion of Decency: B.

TIP ON BIDDING: Better program price.

AD LINES: "A Man And A Boy, Inseparable Yet A World Apart"; "Cagney As You Like Him, Rough And Ready"; "The Magic Of The West In Stunning VistaVision."

Strategic Air Command (5425)

MELODRAMA 114M.

(Technicolor)
(VistaVision)

ESTIMATE: Well-made yarn of present-day air force.

STORY: James Stewart, third baseman for the St. Louis Cardinals, is in spring training, having just signed a fabulous contract, when he receives word from an old friend, General James Millican, that he is being recalled to active duty with the Strategic Air Command, the atom-bomb carrying force which is a big factor in the keeping of the peace. He protests to no avail, and he and his wife of a few months, June Allyson, report to Fort Worth, Tex., for 21 months of duty in the command of General Frank Lovejoy, who trains his men hard. Colonel Stewart learns the ropes on the huge B-36 and soon becomes the commander of a plane. He is assigned a flight as the time nears for Allyson to give birth to a baby. A fire aboard causes most to bail out, but there isn't enough altitude for Stewart or Captain Alex Nicol, another disgruntled recallee, and they crash land in Greenland. When they are rescued several days later, Stewart is informed he is the father of a girl. His shoulder pains him slightly, but he does nothing about it. He is next introduced to the new Stratojet bomber, the B-47. A promotion and the reassignment influences his remaining with the Air Force, which causes a quarrel with Allyson. He almost crashes because of the shoulder injury. He is let go by the Air Force, and it also precludes his returning to active baseball. He is named manager of a minor team and hopes to manage one of the majors.

X-RAY: There are a number of thrilling scenes to be found in this entry devoted to a section of the U.S. Air Force considered highly important in these days of stress. Flight sequences and the huge planes themselves are indeed impressive in the wide-screen presentation as presented in VistaVision. In addition to the planes, the cast turns in fine performances. The direction and production are also in the better category and the story is one well-calculated to hold interest. With some selling and exploitation, this entry could go places. A march, "The Air Force Takes Command," can be heard. The screen play is by Valentine Davies and Beirne Lay, Jr., based on a story by the latter.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD LINES: "The Peace Of The Future Rests With The Men Of The 'Strategic Air Command'"; "She Was Willing To Wait Forever—If Need Be"; "Thrills Galore As The 'Strategic Air Command' Sends Its Planes The World Over."

20TH-FOX

A Man Called Peter (509)

BIOGRAPHICAL DRAMA 119M.

(Color by De Luxe)
(CinemaScope)

ESTIMATE: Highly inspirational film will need selling.

CAST: Richard Todd, Jean Peters, Marjorie Rambeau, Jill Esmond, Les Tremayne, Robert Burton, Gladys Hurlbut, Richard Garrick, Gloria Gordon, Billy Chapin, Sally Corner, Voltaire Perkins, Marietta Canty. Produced by Samuel G. Engel; directed by Henry Koster.

STORY: Richard Todd (Peter Marshall) arrives in America from Scotland and takes all sorts of jobs to help him get through Columbia Theological Seminary, after which he takes a small pastorate in Georgia. He goes to Atlanta where he gains a reputation as an unorthodox preacher, particularly appreciated by younger audiences for his wit and sense of humor in his teachings. One of these is Jean Peters, who is in love with him. After their marriage, Todd is summoned to take over a Presbyterian Church in Washington, known as "The Church of Presidents." One of the powers, Marjorie Rambeau is not particularly responsive to his informality, but his sermons gain fame and soon the church is filled to overflowing. A son, Billy Chapin, is born to Peters. During the war they work hard to help wherever possible and Peters comes down with a form of tuberculosis. After a lengthy session, her faith and his prayers bring her to recovery. Later, Todd has a heart attack which is almost fatal, but on his recovery he sums up the situation as "God not wanting him as yet." Soon after he is asked to become Chaplain to the Senate and becomes even more famous. Another heart attack is fatal. Peters carries on as best she can, bringing up Chapin to appreciate his father and his thoughts.

X-RAY: Though the film concerns itself with the life of a man of God, it is not a religious film as such but rather emphasis is put on human emotions, drama, and romance. Excerpts from some of Peter Marshall's sermons provide inspiration, and many audiences will think all the more highly of theatres presenting the attraction as well as the industry as a whole. Tremendous possibilities are in the offing with the proper presentation, for interest is kept on high pretty much throughout. The cast is fine. The support of churches throughout the country will be solidly behind the film as well that of women's organizations and others, and this, together with a tremendous advertising and promotion campaign, should insure better results boxofficewise. The screen play is by Eleanore Griffin, based on the book by Catherine Marshall.

(Bischoff-Diamond)

ESTIMATE: Okeh programmer.

CAST: Edward G. Robinson, George Raft, Audrey Totter, George Dolenz, Peter Hanson, Peter Van Eyck, Karen Verne, Ralph Smiley, Henri Letondal, John Cliff, Joseph Vitale. Produced by Sam Bischoff and David Diamond; directed by Lewis Allen.

STORY: Atomic scientist George Dolenz is photographed by Ralph Smiley, disguised as an organ grinder, who is challenged by a Royal Canadian Mounted Police Constable. Smiley kills the Mountie. Peter Van Eyck, head of a spy ring, kills him in turn for his blundering. Inspector Edward G. Robinson investigates. In Lisbon, George Raft, ex-bigtime American gangster, is approached to kidnap Dolenz for a large fee, and he enters Canada disguised as an immigrant. He gets his former gang together to assist him as well as former girl-friend Audrey Totter, who is to charm Dolenz after being threatened by Raft. She meets Dolenz and a romance ensues. Meanwhile Dolenz' homely secretary is wined and dined by a gang member to get information, and she is killed when she decides to tell all. Her killer is killed on orders from Raft. Robinson and the FBI start putting pieces together and come up with Raft and his gang identified. Totter tries to get out and warn Robinson, but she and Dolenz are kidnapped, as is Robinson and a truckload of scientific equipment being used as a trap. The radio equipment fails and Robinson is on his own. Also aboard are Raft and his men who come for the payoff, but they are doublecrossed when Van Eyck orders the vessel to sail. Robinson convinces Raft to help him and he is able to send up a distress flare. Raft and Van Eyck battle it out with both being fatally wounded. Raft clears Totter before he dies, and the others seem certain to be saved.

X-RAY: There's a good bit of intrigue and espionage as well as methods of police operation to be found in this yarn. Meller fans should be satisfied for the most part. The cast is okeh and the production and direction suitable to the effort as a whole. The names of Robinson, Raft, and Totter may be of help in the selling, and it should make up okeh as part of the program. The screen play is by Geoffrey Homes and A. L. Bezzerides, based on a story by James Benson Nablo. Maximum aspect ratio: 1.85-1.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "An International Spy Ring Tries To Kidnap An Atomic Scientist . . . DRAMA

(Hecht-Lancaster)

ESTIMATE: High-rating heart warming drama.

CAST: Ernest Borgnine, Betsy Blair, Esther Minciotti, Augusta Ciolli, Joe Mantell, Karen Steele, Jerry Paris, Frank Sutton, Walter Kelley, Robin Morse. Produced by Harold Hecht; directed by Delbert Mann.

STORY: Ernest Borgnine, 35-year-old butcher, is of Italian origin and lives at home with his mother, Esther Minciotti, who is anxious that he get married. Everybody else, including the customers, keeps asking the same question. He tries to get dates, but after the first one they usually aren't available to him. His mother's sister, Augusta Colli, has problems with her daughter-in-law, Karen Steele, who resents her interference in the raising of their child, etc., and things get to the point where she and husband Jerry Paris ask Minciotti to take her in in her big house. Borgnine agrees to go to a dancehall with friend Joe Mantell, also a bachelor. There he meets little success in getting a dancing partner. He is approached by a fellow who offers him some money to take over a date with plain school teacher Betsy Blair. He refuses and later finds her weeping. They get along fine and seem made for each other, each admitting that they are lonely and unwanted. They stop at his home where she meets Minciotti, who fears meeting the same problems her sister has should he get married to her. He gets the needle from his mother about Blair as well as from his friends who call her ugly. He almost bows to the discouragement until he gets hold of his senses and realizes he is letting a fine thing and his future slip through his fingers. He goes to call her brushing off his friends.

X-RAY: A moving, warm, heart touching story deftly told in fine fashion is to be found in this high-rating drama which concerns itself with the problems of the lonely, ordinary people. It's not a sad film. On the contrary there are a number of amusing scenes that break just right so that constant interest is maintained by the viewers. With a relatively unknown cast, the selling must rely on the story matter which in this case is substantial, so that most adults once they have seen the film will admit high enjoyment. The roles are competently carried out with Borgnine and Blair particularly good and the others providing fine support. The direction, production, and screen play are in the better category. It should be noted that the story in slightly shorter version appeared on teleyision some time ago and was a hit in that medium so that there may be a ready audience willing and waiting for the entry. The story and screen play are by Paddy Chayefsky.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher rates.

AD. LINES: "Ever Feel Lonely? 'Marty' Did Too And Did Something About It"; "How Many Times Have You Wished For A Date And Couldn't Get One? 'Marty' Had That Problem And Found The Right Answer"; "Women Went Out Of Their Way To Avoid Him Until The Right Girl Came Along."

The Purple Plain

MELODRAMA

(Filmed in Burma) (Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Well-made, interesting entry.

CAST: Gregory Peck, Win Min Than, Bernard Lee, Maurice Denham, Ram Gopal, Brenda De Banzie, Lyndon Brook, Anthony Bushell, Jack McNaughton, Harold Siddons, Peter Arne, Mya Mya Spencer. Produced by John Bryan; directed by Robert Parrish.

STORY: In 1945 in the Burmese jungle is squadron leader Gregory Peck, who doesn't care whether or not he lives or dies, but bears a charmed life. His feeling stems from seeing his bride of a few hours die in a London air raid while he survived. His commanding officer and the unit doctor Bernard Lee see that his actions are undermining the morale of the men and think seriously of sending him out of the area. When his navigator is hit, a replacement, Lyndon Brook, is sent. Lee takes Peck to visit a nearby Burmese encampment run by a Scots missionary, Brenda De Banzie, where he meets Win Min Than, and they are attracted to each other with much of the tension in him lessening. He is ordered to fly officers Maurice Denham to another base and to break in Brook. A motor catches fire and they are forced to land in enemy territory. Brook breaks a leg and Peck decides that they try to walk out of the jungle and carry Brook. Their water supply is limited, and the going is rough. Denham breaks his collar bone in a fall, and deranged, shoots himself after spilling the available water. Peck pushes on carrying Brook until he is too weak. He leaves him and staggers on for help by himself which he encounters at a river's edge. Brook is taken to a hospital, while Peck's first move is to see Win Min Than.

X-RAY: Containing an interesting yarn embellished by authentic surroundings and settings, this entry has much that should assist in pleasing and attracting audiences. Performances by the cast are good, with Peck doing a particularly fine job with a meaty role. Direction and production are in the better class and the screen play by Eric Ambler based on the novel by H. E. Bates, is ably written, so that interest is kept on high pretty much throughout. Technicolor emphasizes the bleak, hot country-side of Burma and aids in getting across the story in proper fashion.

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher program rates.

AD LINES: "Thrills And Chills On The Plains Of Burma . . . Where A Man Found Life Instead Of The Death He Wanted"; "Raw Adventure In A Land Seldom Photographed"; "He Had A Reason For His Recklessness Until The Right Girl Came Along To Make Him Forget."

ESTIMATE: Good programmer.

CAST: Jeff Morrow, Faith Domergue, Rex Reason, Lance Fuller, Russell Johnson, Robert Nichols, Karl Lindt, Douglas Spencer, Regis Parton. Produced by William Alland; directed by Joseph Newman.

STORY: Scientist Rex Reason is saved from a fatal crash in a jet plane by a mysterious force, and later, he receives mysterious equipment together with assembling instructions. Completed, Jeff Morrow appears on a picture screen to invite him to join in an experiment involving atomic energy, after which the set is destroyed. A pilotless plane deposits him in a remote section of Georgia, where Morrow is in charge of a huge laboratory. He meets scientist Faith Domergue. Sensing that there is a mysterious reason for the work, he and Domergue try to get away but are captured in a small plane by a huge space ship controlled by Morrow. It seems that the latter was in charge of a project to find nuclear energy via new sources to save planet Metaluna from the attacks of another planet in the outer solar system. Fighting off enemy missiles and space ships they land on the near destroyed planet. They are brought before governing head Douglas Spencer and are ordered into a machine that would take away their will power, but Morrow, seeing all is lost, escapes with them in the space ship just as the planet is destroyed. Reason is wounded but manages to get them back to earth so that they can land in their unharmed plane. Wounded, Morrow refuses to accompany them and plunges with his ship into the ocean.

X-RAY: A science fiction entry that is packed with all kinds of gadgets, gimmicks, and queer-looking individuals, this should do okeh as part of the program. providing a number of thrills for interested audiences as well as an interest-holding yarn. The cast is good as is the direction and production and a sneak preview audience seemed to enjoy the proceedings. The screen play is by Franklin Coen and Edward G. ACTION DRAMA

ESTIMATE: Rugged war entry should do okeh in action spots.

CAST: Jack Sernas, Kurt Kasznar, Arnold Moss, Peter Van Eyck, Marcele Dalio, Norman Dupont, Lawrence Dobkin, Pat Blake, Irene Montwill, Alberto Morin, Maurice Marsac, Louis Mercier. Produced by David Weisbart; directed by David Butler.

STORY: Officers are called for to reinforce the besieged fortress of Dienbienphu in Indo-China. Volunteers include Jack Sernas, Kurt Kasznar, Peter Van Eyck, and Norman Dupont. The group is parachuted down into the one mile area of the surrounded fort. Kasznar lands in Red controlled territory. He is slightly wounded while crossing over to friendly land. The four meet Colonel Arnold Moss, commander of the fort. Sernas encounters Lawrence Dobkin, the husband of Sernas' girlfriend in Paris. Words are exchanged. The Reds are closing in, escape routes have been cut off, and the fort seems doomed. Commander Moss receives telegrams of praise from the President of France, Churchill, and Eisenhower. He then instructs his forces to fight to the death. Another message is received promoting the Colonel to General and the officers celebrate with champagne. That night, two spies disguised as Vietnamese officers gain entrance to the fort and proceed to plant explosives. Their plan is foiled by Van Eyck who kills them while being badly wounded himself. Kasznar is killed while searching for water in enemy territory. Dobkin finds himself surrounded and is killed when he attempts to surrender. The Reds start their drive. Sernas and Dupont, with orders from the General, make their way out of the valley with sealed dispatches. The fortress falls after 56 days of battle.

X-RAY: As an attempt at recreating the conditions and brutality of the Dienbienphu fighting the film is highly successful. An air of authenticity surrounds the production, resulting in a well-paced and exciting entry. Acting and direction are satisfactory and photographic quality is okeh. The plot seems timely enough and should be good for maximum exploitation. Screen play is by Irving Wallace.

The Blonde Pick-Up

MELODRAMA 57M.

(Globe Roadshows)

ESTIMATE: Exploitation film for the duallers.

CAST: Peaches Page, Clare Mortensen, Rita Martinez, Timothy Farrell, others. Produced by George Weiss; directed by Robert C. Deterno.

STORY: Timothy Farrell, operator of a gym, signs up Peaches Page to join his group of female wrestlers. He also operates a bookie joint and has an aide who tampers with the horses. A gambling syndicate tries to collect from him and he is subpoenaed by a crime probe. He tries to get Clara Mortensen, world's wrestling champ, and Rita Martinez, champion of Mexico, to throw their match, but they put on a good bout. Farrell then prepares to flee with his ill-gotten funds, with the mob in hot pursuit and police taking up the chase. Farrell is slain, the mobsters are unable to pick up the money that has been spilled from his suitcase, and the police close in and round up the gang.

X-RAY: This gangster meller of the wrestling racket has an exploitable title, two female wrestling bouts, and should be able to cash in in the less discriminating spots if given proper bally. Brief moments of humor lighten an otherwise dull and boring film which is handicapped by a weak plot, poor direction, and wooden acting by all concerned.

Devil Girl From Mars

SCIENCE FICTION DRAMA 77M.

(Spartan) (English-made)

ESTIMATE: Science-fiction import for the lower half.

CAST: Hugh McDermott, Hazel Court, Peter Reynolds, Adrian Corri, Joseph Tomelty. Produced by Edward J. and Harry Lee Danziger; directed by David MacDonald.

STORY: Peter Reynolds, accused murderer, escapes from the authorities and takes refuge in a countryside inn where he is hidden by Adrian Corri, who loves him. Others present are reporter Hugh McDermott, Hazel Court, and professor Joseph Tomelty. When a space ship beaing a girl from Mars drops down nearby, the phone is out of commission, cars won't work, etc., and the inhabitants are helpless. McDermott tries to kill her with a gun, electricity, etc., but fails to harm her. Aboard the ship is also a robot with tremendous power to destroy any object selected. The invader threatens to destroy or take along a young nephew of the innkeeper but McDermott offers to go in his place. He tells the others that he will attempt to destroy the ship after it takes off by setting off the atomic power. He bids Court goodbye and the two realize they have fallen in love. Meanwhile, Reynolds offers to go with the space girl and they depart. After takeoff, he is successful in destroying the ship which disappears with a tremendous explosion saving the world and London for awhile.

X-RAY: This import has some moments of excitement and a number of science-fiction gimmicks as well as a fairly interesting story, average performances and ordinary direction. It can round out the program in neat enough fashion even with its unknown cast.

AD LINES: "She Had The Power Of The Universe In Her Finger Tips"; "Thrills From Another Planet"; "She Wanted To Take Young Men Back To Mars."

The Imposter

MELODRAMA 89M.

(Japanese-made) (English titles)

ESTIMATE: Okeh Oriental import for the art houses.

CAST: Utaemon Ichikawa, Chikako Miyagi, Keiko Kishi, Kokichi Takata, Fijiro Yanagi, Kodayu Ichikawa, Kuniko Ikawa, Minoru Oki, Ayuko Saijo, Jogi Kaieda. Produced by Shigeki Sugiyama and Koichi Takagi; directed by Tatsuo Osone.

STORY: Two claimants to the throne of the Shogun, ruler of Japan, arrive in Tokyo. They both have documents as proof, but one, Kokichi Takata, is an imposter. Takata arrives with a big procession and extensive fanfare, while Minoru Oki, the legitimate claimant, arrives on foot with Ayuko Saijo, his fiancee. Baron Utaemon Ichikawa senses from the first that Takata is an imposter, and is able to prevent an assassination attempt on Oki's life. The true heir takes shelter in Ichikawa's house. Ichikawa's sister, Keiko Kishi, is kidnapped by Takata and imprisoned. Word is sent that an exchange is possible, his sister for Oki. Kishi manages to escape. A beggar informs Takata that he was a witness to a crime several years ago, whereby the documents of inheritance were obtained. An attempt on his life is made by Takata's forces, but refuge is finally taken by the hunted man in Ichikawa's quarters. At the Kabuki theatre, Takata sees his crime reenacted on the stage. Ichikawa jumps up and confronts him. Takata and his henchmen are killed. Oki is recognized as the rightful heir, which Ichikawa, whose love was being sought by Kuniko Ikawa, decides that even though he loves her he is not the right man to be her husband, and sets out for the unknown adventures of the open road.

X-RAY: This film has a distinct Oriental flavor and is dominated by traditional Japanese costumes, customs, and swordplay. The plot is simple and in some ways melodramatic, but has enough of the unorthodox to make it suited for art audiences. In performances, direction, and photography quality runs high. Screen play is by Hyogo Suzuki, based on a story by Mitsuzo Sasaki.

AD LINES: "A Rare Treat From The Orient"; "Another Top Japanese Film"; "From The Heart Of Japan Comes This Bit Of Screen Artistry."

Princess Cinderella

FANTASY 72M.

(Carroll)

(Italian-made)

(Dubbed English dialogue)

ESTIMATE: Should appeal most to juvenile audiences.

CAST: Silvana Jachino, Roberto Villa, Paola Stoppa, Rosetta Tofano, Mario Pisu, Guglielmo Bernabo, Mercedes Brignone, Tina Mannozzi, Teresa Palazzi, Camillo Pilotto, Amelia Chellini, Lago Nais, Mario Gallina, Piero Carbabuci, Renato Chiantoni, Virgilio Botti. Produced by Edoardo Capolino; directed by Sergio Tofano. English version directed by Muriel Levor.

STORY: The film relates the further adventures of Cinderella after she marries Prince Charming. There is to be a court reception for Count Mario Pisu, and Princess Silvano Jachino is to wear her magic slippers. Her stepsisters put wax in the toes of the slippers, resulting in their no longer fitting her. King Guglielmo Barnabo discovers the slippers to be too small and banishes the Princess from the castle. Rosetta Tofano, a dishwasher, chooses to go along with her. Pisu and messenger Paola Stoppa decide to defend Jachino, and take after her. Jachino and Tofano fly by umbrella to a magic cottage where witch Amelia Chellini tricks them into going to the home of ogre Camillo Pilotto. The ogre can't eat the two because his teeth have fallen out, and so he goes to town to visit a dentist. Pisu and Stoppa rescue Jachino and Tofano. Joy is short lived because the ogre throws a bomb which apparently kills the Princess. Good Fairy Lago Nais appears and tells Prince Roberto Villa that if he gets Jachino a drink of water from the enchanted fountain before midnight, all will be well. Villa succeeds.

X-RAY: This film fantasy is well presented, and its settings and acting performances are in keeping with its fairy-tale theme. It should prove good entertainment for juvenile audiences. However, it is not adequate for adult groups and even in art houses it will have rough going. Screen play is by Anton Sto, and Metz, from a story by Sto.

When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of December, 1947, it was said: "Andy Panda is the leader of a circus band, and as the group plays the 'Overture To Zampa,' the various performers are seen going through their paces with comic variations. GOOD." (1351).

COOKIN' WITH GAGS. Paramount—Popeye Cartoons. 7m. Popeye, Bluto, and Olive Oyl go out for a picnic on April Fool's Day. Bluto plays all kinds of mean tricks on Popeye, exploding gadgets and the messing up of the picnic food. Popeye is blamed for all the trouble, and he gets in bad with Olive. At the end, however, Popeye and his spinach get the best of Bluto. FAIR. (E14-3).

DEAR OLD SWITZERLAND. 20th Century-Fox—Terrytoon Topper Reissues. 6m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of December, 1944, it was said: "This covers such things as skiing, St. Bernard dogs, ski trains, the cheese industry, etc., with no particular high spots. FAIR." (5502).

DIZZY DISHES. Paramount—Noveltoons. 6m. Little Audrey rigs up a gadget that washes and dries dishes and sets them up in an orderly pile. Suddenly, Audrey hears over the radio that flying saucers are seen in the sky. She imagines visitors from another planet invade the earth, and her battling them with pots and pans. The dishwashing gadget goes wrong, brings her back to reality and sending the dishes flying across the room. EXCELLENT. (P14-3).

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. MOUSE. MGM—Gold Medal Reprint Cartoons. 8m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of May, 1947, it was said: "Tom, the cat, manages to steal a pint of cream, empties it into a saucer, gets all prepared to have himself a party, when he is interrupted by Jerry, the mouse, who slinks up on the saucer, and helps Tom have his feast. Tom tries all kinds of methods to rid himself of the pesky mouse, but to no avail. Finally, he substitutes a concoction and sets it in front of Jerry, Jerry helps himself to a large portion of the stuff, and, instead of dropping dead, becomes a mighty character. The windup finds Jerry kicking Tom all over the place. GOOD."

HIDE AND SHRIEK. Paramount—Casper Cartoons. 7m. Casper the ghost is visited by Spooky, another ghost. Spooky would much rather scare people out of their wits than play hide and seek with Casper. Spooky so terrifies everyone that Casper is forced to do some scaring himself, directed at Spooky. GOOD. (B14-3).

LIGHTHOUSE MOUSE. Warners—Merrie Melodies. 7m. A mouse disturbed by the beacon lighting at the lighthouse turns it off. The lighthouse keeper orders Sylvester, the cat, to catch the mouse, but the cat runs into trouble from a baby kangaroo whom he imagines to be a big mouse. The kangaroo and the mouse team up and get the cat into trouble with the lighthouse keeper. GOOD. (2713).

PUP ON A PICNIC. MGM—CinemaScope. Cartoons. 7m. A couple of dogs go on a picnic. They find a quiet spot to stretch out and prepare to eat when Tom and Jerry come along. The cat and mouse start a merry chase, Jerry hiding underneath sandwiches and creating an illusion that the sandwiches are alive. The frolicking is interrupted by a group of ants which proceed to cart off all the food and drive the picnickers away. FAIR.

PRIVATE EYE POOCH. U-I—Walter Lantz Cartunes. 6m. Woody Woodpecker is puled out of a jail cell to act as a subject in a taxidermy lesson on how to stuff a woodpecker. Woody escapes and a bloodhound is sent to make the capture. After a merry chase, the pair arrive back at the taxidermy school, but this time the person locked up is the instructor. GOOD. (1326).

RIVER RIBBER. Columbia—Color Favorites Reissues. 6m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of April, 1946, it was said: "This has to do with a crazy steamboat race on the ol' Mississippi between crafts operated by Tall and Small and the Spook, the latter being a ghost and ghost ship. When Small retrieves his good luck rabbit's foot, the boys win the race, and are heralded as heroes, but when the good luck charm is lost again, they wind up getting dumped into the river from a garbage truck. BAD." (7609).

ROBIN RODENTHOOD. Paramount—Herman and Katnip Cartoons. 7m. Herman the mouse plays Robin Hood for his little cousins who are forever harassed by Katnip, the greedy cat. Katnip levies exorbitant taxes on the poor mice, but Herman goes to the cat's castle and evens the score. At first Herman is imprisoned, but ingenuity by the mouse lands Katnip in the jaws of an alligator. GOOD. (H14-2).

SAHARA HARE. Warners—Bugs Bunny Specials. 7m. Bugs Bunny, clad in a bathing suit in the middle of the Sahara Desert, thinks that he's on Miami Beach. Failing to find the Atlantic Ocean, Bugs settles for a dip in a desert oasis water hole. Yosemite Sam, desert outlaw, attacks Bugs, who takes refuge in a deserted Foreign Legion fort. Sam tries to blast his way into the fort, but Bugs outwits Sam at every turn and wins out at the end. GOOD. (2726).

SALT WATER TABBY. MGM—Gold Medal Reprint Cartoons. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of July, 1947, it was said: "Tom is out to enjoy himself at the beach, all set for a picnic, etc., but Jerry, as usual, interferes. This especially irks Tom as he has just met a pretty Tabby, and is on the make; but Jerry insists on being a pest, keeping up the usual chase, in which a crab also joins, much to the discomfiture of Tom. FAIR."

TOUCHE, PUSSY CAT. MGM—CinemaScope Cartoons. 7m. Jerry becomes a mousketeer and engages Tom in a series of vicious duels. The cat seems to have the upper hand at first but Jerry using his ingenuity manages to send Tom floating away on the crest of a flood. GOOD.

YOU WERE NEVER DUCKIER. Warners Blue Ribbon Hit Parades. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of August, 1948, it was said: "Daffy Duck visits the poultry show, notes first prize for the best chicken is $5,000, and first prize for duck is $5, so he decides to pose as a chicken. A baby chicken hawk, out to please his dad, and bring home the world's best chicken, tries to kidnap Daffy, who thinks he is taking him to the chicken judge. When Daffy learns the truth, he puts up a fight, escapes, and gets back to the show in time for the judging. When he loses as the best chicken, he tells the judge he is really a duck, but the little chicken hawk, now posing as a duck, gets the $5 instead. GOOD." (2307).

Comedy

SO YOU WANT TO BE A GLADIATOR. Warners—Joe McDoakes Comedies. 10m. Joe is a musician in King Nero's court. He breaks a string on his lyre and as a punishment is sentenced to be thrown to the lions. A friend of Joe's plans to dress in a lion's suit and switch places with the real lion but the switch is never made. Joe, thinking that the lion is his friend dressed up, proceeds to subdue it, and when he is awarded a slave girl for a prize, Joe's wife proceeds to subdue him. FAIR. (2404).

Musical

ELLIOT LAWRENCE AND HIS ORCHESTRA. Columbia—Thrills Of Music Reissues. 10m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of September, 1948, it was said: "Disc jockey Fred Robbins tosses the jive language around between numbers by the Elliot Lawrence band. Glamorous Mindy Carson sings 'Gypsy In My Soul' and Alan Dale renders 'Oh Marie' in Italian and English. GOOD." (7455).

Color Novelty

DUST EATERS. U-I—Color Parades. 9½m. The cars shown racing in Pennsylvania are not hot-rods, but are known as sportsmens. Speeding around the track, these beat up vehicles saturate their drivers with dust. This particular race is 100 miles, but it is shortened when tragedy strikes in the form of a 10-car pileup. EXCELLENT. (1381).

Novelty

ALL CHIMPS ASHORE. Paramount—Toppers. 10m. Wilbur the chimp steers a small boat. He goes ashore and proceeds to admire the lovelies in a bathing beauty contest. The next moment he's on a ferris wheel causing panic among the riders high up in the air. The chimp also smokes cigarettes and drinks Scotch. GOOD. (M14-4).

HOLLYWOOD COWBOY STARS. Columbia—Screen Snapshots. 10½m. With Jack Carson as m.c., assisted by his wife, Lola Albright, highlights from the screen careers of John Wayne, Jane Russell, Gene Autry, Monty Montana, and a host of trick riders are shown. FAIR. (7853).

JUST WHAT I NEEDED. MGM—Pete Smith Specialties. 9m. Dave O'Brien is one who has to suffer through a variety of results from gifts received and accessories, such as an auto, a motorcycle, and an electric toaster. He fiddles around with all the things and gets into trouble. FAIR.

LITTLE LOST SCENT. U-I—Variety Views. 9m. A young skunk leaves his family and wanders off. He meets two bear cubs, and then in a barnyard meets a cow, some cats, and a dog. Scaring boys on bicycles, he almost winds up under the wheel of the farmer's tractor. The skunk finally decides to join his family and heads home. FAIR. (1342).

THOSE EXCITING DAYS. Warners—Varieties. 10m. The film is composed of newsreels of the events leading up to World War I. The film's highlights include The Russian Czar passing in procession, Germany's Kaiser Wilhelm attending a stag hunt, French recruits marching off to war, Belgium being invaded by Germany, Turkey's largest battleship being sunk by Russian guns, Lloyd George becomes Prime Minister, the German offensive is stopped at the Marne, and Marshal Joffre becomes a national hero. GOOD. (2604).

YOU'RE A TROOPER. Paramount—Pacemakers. 10m. A state trooper comes upon a highway automobile accident. A man is dead and it seems a drunken driver killed him. This seems like a routine case for the police officer, but the evidence is weighed by the coroner, an identification man, and the crime lab technician, with the result being that new evidence points to a hit-and-run driver and not the drunken man. A search is made for the real culprit and he is finally picked up and booked for the crime. (K14-3).

Sports

SWIM AND SURVIVE. Paramount—Grantland Rice Sportlights. 9m. Teen-age girls are seen demonstrating the proper method of life saving. The Red Cross demonstrates their method of saving a drowning man. At a California beach, the surfboard is used to help the life saver reach the victim more quickly. GI's in amphibious training put out gasoline fire on the water's surface and swim under water to avoid being hit by gunfire. FAIR. (R14-6).

A TIP ON BIDDING

WITH EACH SUCCEEDING MONTH bringing fewer and fewer pictures, so that even one major picture failing to deliver an average gross can upset the most stable key run, there seems to be a steady increase in bidding and rumors of bidding. There are even some sales executives among distributors who are known to advocate bidding, and who continue to apply the increased pressure of sales demands on two or three competing theatres in an effort to drive one of them to the feverish demand. That bidding (stretching beyond your economic depth for the hits, and even stretching to hit prices for the medium and little pictures you need to keep your theatre open) is a form of economic self destruction for theatres is now a well established fact. But it takes an unusually honorable distributor, who loves this business and who genuinely wants to see his customers succeed and prosper hand-in-hand with his company, who will dramatically dissuade theatremen from bidding.

That is why the accompanying illustration, handed to me by Pete Rosian, district manager for Universal-International, has made such a profound impression that I want to share it with our theatre subscribers.

Pete Rosian is no Johnny-come-lately. His distribution experience was gained the hard way in a half dozen or more branches throughout the country. He knows theatres—and theatremen—and the most profitable way to merchandise motion pictures. He knows that, regardless of the ambitions of the producers, motion pictures come in the three grades of good, bad, and indifferent. And, as a "company man," he is always out to get the fairest deal he can for his company.

But Pete Rosian is smart in still another way. He has watched over 6,000 theatres close, some of which had to be U-I customers. He has listened to equally experienced theatremen, and he knows why most of these 6,000 theatres closed. He knows that the problems are greater than any one company or any one district manager can solve; but he also knows that, if the mistake of bidding is added to the problems, there are going to be a lot more closed theatres and a lot fewer U-I customers.

The accompanying illustration, wherever he found it, is Pete Rosian's effort to bring sanity to this business. He has a pocket full of them.

Next time you see him, ask him for one!

SOUNDPROOFING NEEDED

DOWN IN RICHMOND, VA., there used to be a famous eating place that boasted: "He Eats At His Own Restaurant!" From this statement the public was supposed to draw some confidence in the quality and delectability of the food.

A "pop-off" by its president at an annual stockholders meeting of one of the national producer-distributors last week merited a top-of-the-sheet, although tongue-in-cheek, story on the influential financial page of The New York Times. From it we learn that this particular company's "picture making facilities for the movies might be worth more dead"; that a definite decision "on the question of ending the production of pictures for distribution to movie theatres" would be made within the next 60 to 90 days; that "he personally favored the step and had notified major theatre operators throughout the country of the impending move"; and that it was "impossible . . . to make a profit from producing pictures for the movies."

Faced with such testimony, the Skourases, the Cohns, the Balabans, and Warners, and Schencks, and Rachmils, and even the Goldwyns, the Broidys, and the Disneys, become supermen indeed. Not only was it "possible" for them to make a profit from producing pictures for the movies; but most of them in 1954 made more profit—on less pictures—and with no theatres—than ever before in the entire history of their companies. What manner of giants are these? They haven't been well appreciated!

But "pop-offs" like these do the industry damage. And even if this didn't matter to the president in question, he should have remembered the potential damage to his own company. Certainly no theatreman will contract for his pictures very far in advance, or place much confidence in his futures, when he himself states that 60 to 90 days will probably produce his company's retirement to the minor leagues.

It so happens that the last really first class and big grossing picture made by this company was "The Quiet Man." At the known risk of never again running a line of their advertising, plain industry horse sense suggests that we advise this president that he should emulate the leading character in this picture.

Like the restauranteur in Richmond, Va., he should "eat at his own," and not tell the customer, whether patron or theatreman, that his stuff is inadequate so go buy somewhere else.

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

ALLIED ARTISTS is more than satisfied with the results of the recently completed 16-city tour of company toppers Steve Broidy and Morey Goldstein, where they reported to exhibitors on the state of the company and where they also requested cooperation from them so that they can go ahead with their contemplated improvement-in-production campaign. This was made clear during a luncheon-interview with Goldstein, vice-president and general sales manager.

KONECOFF

Bookings and pledges of cooperation are pouring in at a record pace, and he expected that come May 1 billings will be at least 50 per cent ahead of any other period in the history of the company. The tour may result in an increase in production of bigger properties by the company following requests and cooperation by exhibitors in addition to the continuance of the smaller pictures if exhibitors want them, which they do according to reaction. In the latter category would fall such releases as "The Bowery Boys" series.

Goldstein estimated that if 10,000 theatres in the country could be persuaded to give AA four dates over an eight to 10 week period even at a minimum rental of $25 per booking, the total could come to a million dollars which would be immediately reinvested in future production. Many exhibitors have pledged at least that number of dates with no minimum price restrictions, according to Goldstein. Films being pushed during the period are "The Big Combo," "Shotgun," "Seven Angry Men," and "The Annapolis Story."

The sales head hit hard at those bookers and buyers who still contract for pictures strictly according to label or point of

Music Hall Sets All-Time Record

NEW YORK—With the Easter holidays giving a considerable lift, the big news on Broadway was Radio City Music Hall hitting an all time record and Loew's State continuing at a phenomenal holdover pace.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Battle Cry" (Warners). Paramount expected the 10th week to tally $30,000.

"A Man Called Peter" (20th-Fox). Roxy did $25,746 on Friday to Sunday, with the second week sure to hit $50,000.

"The Glass Slipper" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with Easter stage show, hit an all time record with $116,000 in the till from Thursday through Sunday and the third week sure of $202,000.

"Mambo" (Paramount). Criterion reported $24,000 for the second session.

"The Wayward Wife" (IFE). Globe claimed $17,000 for the opening week.

"Long John Silver" (DCA). Mayfair reported $15,000 for the first week.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor had a very good $40,000 for the fifth week.

"Man Without A Star" (U-I). Victoria expected the third week to reach $20,000.

"The Purple Plain" (UA). Capitol anticipated the opening week at $55,000.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). A very good $70,000 was expected on the fourth week.

C'Scope Improvements Set

NEW YORK—Darryl F. Zanuck, 20th-Fox production chief recently returned from Europe, reported last week that startling developments in the CinemaScope process with a "revolutionary" improvement will be demonstrated via a test reel for exhibitors by mid-summer. Since a camera development as well as projection improvement is involved, active production in the improved process is not anticipated before the end of the year. Zanuck added that the changes will probably require no booth changes. The improvements will be available to other producers and are said to involve sound as well as vision.

There are presently more than 21,000 CinemaScope installations, 13,070 in the United States and Canada, with the number expected to exceed 30,000 by the end of the year. Zanuck stated that 20th-Fox is encouraging foreign production in CinemaScope, with foreign theatremen installing the system in increasing numbers.

He added that theatregoers abroad, like those here, are primarily interested in subject matter, causing 20th-Fox to invest more in plays and books prior to public presentation. Concerning production for TV, Zanuck reported that 20th-Fox had a clause in their contracts with sponsors permitting the plugging of forthcoming company product. Theatrewise, the company will start between 12 and 14 new films by the end of the year.

Republic May Leave Theatre Field

Yates Says Better Terms From Exhibs Are Needed Or Company Will Devote Full Time To Television

NEW YORK—Herbert J. Yates, president, Republic, announced last week that the company would decide in the next 60 days whether or not to gradually retreat from the production of theatrical films and to concentrate on television production and its laboratory business completely.

The disclosure came at the annual stockholders meeting, in response to a stockholder's question about the future of the company. Yates replied, "We're doing very well in television and in the laboratory field; we're not doing as well as we'd like with production and distribution. It's a question whether we'll stop making pictures for theatres." He added, "The only thing that can change our thinking is a willingness of the four circuit (unidentified) to give our product more playing time and to pay more for them," adding that the circuits have been so advised.

Yates said that the company is signing no term contracts with talent at present, and hopes to be free of such deals by the year's end. Replying to a question as to whether the company would require all its facilities during the transition, Yates said that he believed that the company could reduce the cost of organization, including personnel, more than 25 per cent "in 90 days."

Yates said that by renting its sound stages to TV producers, Republic could earn $1,000,000 yearly. Add to that the laboratory earnings, and the company, he indicated, would be successful.

Discussing the recent deal with MCA for TV rights to old Roy Rogers and Gene Autry westerns, Yates said that MCA paid $1,000,000 in advance, and that Republic expects to receive $1,000,000 annually for the next four years.

Richard W. Altschuler, vice-president and sales manager, told stockholders that it was impossible to predict the business situation in the next six or nine months. He claimed that successful pictures are few and far between, and the industry doesn't know where it stands until the public sees the picture.

He noted that domestic attendance has been decreasing each year, the average weekly attendance falling from 90 to 45 millions in the last 10 years. Smaller situations, he continued, are closing rapidly, and he pointed out that the recent telecast of Mary Martin's "Peter Pan" cut film attendance 50 per cent, keeping 60,000,000 people at home.

Altschuler also said that television was beginning to have a significant impact in Great Britain and predicted a rapid increase in sales of TV sets there now that the government has decided to introduce commercial television.

He called attention to Brazil's recent devaluation of the cruzeire from 20 to 100 to the dollar, and said that the Japanese Diet had before it legislation to limit the number of American pictures admitted.

A motion from the floor to establish a stockholders' committee to investigate the company's affairs and engage an outside auditor was defeated. There were indications, however, that dissident stockholders might act independently to establish such a committee. The vote for the motion was 1,300,000 against, 82,455 in favor.

John J. O'Connell, operating head of Consolidated Molded Products Corporation, wholly owned subsidiary of Republic, reported that CMPC anticipated a very successful year. Business volume last year hit $4,250,000, but the company had a $50,000 loss, due partly to a write-off.

Reelected to the board of directors for a three-year term were John Petrauskas, Jr., William M. Saal, Edwin Van Pelt, and Douglas T. Yates.

A subsequent directors' meeting elected the following officers, Yates, president; Walter L. Titus, Jr., Altschuler, Sidney P. Selow, John J. O'Connell, vice-presidents; Petrauskas, treasurer; Joseph E. McMahon, secretary; Richard S. Rodgers and Harold Lange, assistant treasurers; Albert E. Schiller and Ira Johnson, assistant secretaries; and H. J. Glick and Gordon T. Kay, assistant secretary-treasurers.

O'Donnell Featured Speaker At AJA Campaign Dinner

PHILADELPHIA—Barney Balaban and Paramount were lauded here last week for their work in Israel by R. J. O'Donnell, vice-president and general manager, Interstate Circuit, Dallas.

O'Donnell, speaking at the annual dinner of the 1955 Allied Jewish Appeal before more than 150 persons, at the Drake Hotel, told how he had learned during his visit to Israel that through the good offices of Barney Balaban, it was decided that a Paramount exchange would be opened in that country, although there were only 113 theatre accounts.

O'Donnell continued, "An amazing thing happened, Balaban refused to take any of the accumulated money out of Israel and during the period, the money was devaluated by 75 per cent, and the backlog of funds, about $800,000, over-night became $200,000."

Exhibs Win Decision In Clearance Action

PHILADELPHIA—A verdict of $425,000 against seven major film distributors in favor of the Norris Amusement Company, Norristown, Pa., which had charged violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, was returned last week by a mixed jury after 10 hours of deliberation in U.S. Federal Court.

The firm, comprised of six brothers and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Sablosky, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Sablosky, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Sablosky, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sablosky, Mr. and Mrs. David Sablosky, and Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Sablosky, contended in its suit, which started on Feb. 11 before U.S. District Court Judge Alan K. Grim, that its Norristown, Pa., theatres "did not receive product for showing there until long after their popular appeal was gone" and that the distributor defendants "had violated an agreement under which their theatres were to get product not later than 21 to 30 days after first-run exhibition in Philadelphia." The plaintiffs also claimed they had to close two theatres because of this "unreasonable restraint of trade."

The defendants were 20th Century-Fox, Paramount, RKO, Warners, Columbia, U-I, and Loew's, Inc. The theatres involved are the Norris and Grand, Norristown, Pa.

Under the terms of the Sherman act, treble damages are fixed by the court where the verdict is rendered, which would result in claims totaling $1,275,000 against the distributors. When filed, the plaintiffs asked for $5,775,000 in triple damages.

Counsel for the plaintiffs, Dilworth, Paxson, Kalish, and Green, stated they considered the verdict "favorable." Lawyers for the defendants in the action have not announced any plans for an appeal. This was the first anti-trust case heard here before a jury.

The Sabloskys, with partners, also operate the first-run Arcadia, Philadelphia, but this house was not involved in the suit.

Ezell Circuit Okehs Expansion

DALLAS—The board of directors of Claude Ezell and Associates last week approved a $2,400,000 expansion program for the coming year.

The Ezell company has acquired property in Houston for a 2,000-car drive-in, and negotiations are pending on five additional properties in the state. Claude Ezell, president, reported that in 1954 the company had spent over $900,000 in improvements, including new 40 by 80 feet fiberglas screens, CinemaScope lenses, seven new snack bars, and other improvements in its 21 theatres.

The proposed improvements include enlarging three theatres to over 1,000-car capacity, building new ramps and additional speakers, and the enlarging of three snack bars.

Allied's Myers And Solons Attack Anti-Trust Report As Weakening

WASHINGTON—Abram F. Myers, general counsel, Allied States Association, and several key members of Congress joined last week in attacking the report of the Attorney General's anti-trust study committee, on the grounds that the report, if adopted, would weaken the anti-trust laws.

Chairmen of three Congressional committees promised to hold hearings and investigate the situation despite the statements of the co-chairmen of the study committee that most of the members felt that the recommendations would strengthen the anti-trust laws.

House Judiciary Committee chairman Cellars, Democrat, New York, whose committee will handle the discretionary damages legislation, said, "One of the most effective deterrents to anti-trust violations is the provision for mandatory treble damages to the injured party in private actions. Although no finding is made that this provision has had any adverse effect on the public interest, the report urges that the provision for treble damages be made discretionary rather than mandatory." Cellers promised that his special anti-trust committee would hold early hearings on the report, and said that the study committee's recommendations, "with a few exceptions, advocate a substantial weakening of the anti-trust laws." He specifically cited the suggestion that divestiture be used only in very limited situations and that the Justice Department be given only the authority to use a civil investigative demand instead of a full subpoena in connection with anti-trust investigations in the future.

House Small Business Committee chairman Patman, Democrat, Texas, also attacked the discretionary treble damages provision as "softening anti-trust enforcement." Claiming that the report proposes that "there be read into our anti-trust laws concepts that will impede and prolong the prosecution of violators," Patman called the Attorney General's committee "a high pressure private lobby to get anti-trust laws repealed." He promised that if the Judiciary Committee didn't act, the Small Business Committee would investigate.

Senate Small Business Committee chairman Sparkman, Democrat, Alabama, called the Attorney General's committee a "group composed in large part of corporation lawyers and big business apoligists" and added that Attorney General Brownell and co-chairmen of the study committee Barnes, assistant attorney general, and S. Chesterfield Oppenheim, Michigan professor, would soon be called before his committee.

Senator Kefauver, Democrat, Tennessee, attacked the report as a further weakening of the anti-trust laws. Myers claimed that he had not had time to study the recommendations carefully, but said he was sure that the general tenor is to weaken the anti-trust laws. He added, "In view of the composition of the committee, I am surprised that they didn't advocate complete repeal of the anti-trust laws.

Both Sides Deny Asking For FCC Toll-TV Extension

NEW YORK—Both sides in the battle against toll-TV expressed surprise last week at reports from Washington that the FCC had received so many requests for an extension of the May 9 deadline for filing written statements that a changed time schedule was in prospect.

A spokesman for the Committee against Pay-As-You-See TV said emphatically that the antis had not made any request for additional time, and proponents were equally forceful in disclaiming responsibility for any such overtures to the commission.

Meanwhile, Zenith Radio Corporation announced that it had retained Paul B. Mowrey, TV consultant and former network executive, for special activities connected with the company's subscription TV program.

AMPP Marks Code Birthday

HOLLYWOOD—The 20th anniversary of the adoption of the film code last week brought forth a tribute from the board of directors of the Association of Motion Picture Producers.

The AMPP statement called the code "a major factor in making films acceptable to reasonable minds the world over," and claimed that it had "created discipline in the thinking of Hollywood producers which is a measure of their maturity."

The statement paid tribute for their part in creating and supporting the code "to Martin Quigley, who conceived and wrote the code; to Will H. Hays, whose support brought acceptance from the industry; to Father Daniel Lord; to Joseph I. Breen, who for 20 years gave the code administration authority to make it effective; to Geoffrey Shurlock, now head of the code organization and from the beginning prime factor in its administration; and to leaders of the film industry through whose efforts the code was made effective."

Pickford Outbids Goldwyn

HOLLYWOOD—Mary Pickford outbid Samuel Goldwyn by $24,000 for their nine-acre jointly-owned studio last week. In sealed bids, Pickford bid $1,525,000, Goldwyn $1,501,000, the bids including property and all buildings on it.

It is expected the date for the court auction, at which bids by both parties and also by other interested parties may be increased, will be set this week. Other parties must bid 10 per cent more than either Pickford or Goldwyn.

N. J. Allied Meet Set

NEW YORK—Wilbur Snaper, president, Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey, Inc., announced that the Concord Hotel, Kiamesha, Lake, N. Y., had again been chosen as the convention site for June 21-22-23. A full program of fun, sports, entertainment, and business is promised at the 36th annual session.

Wile Discounts Talk Of City Censorship

COLUMBUS, O.—Rumors that some Ohio cities might enact municipal censorship if the state fails to pass a new censorship law were discounted last week by Robert Wile, secretary, ITOO, as the judiciary subcommittee of House of Representatives concluded hearings on proposed censorship laws.

"If the state decides it cannot write a constitutional censorship law, no city could do so either," said Wile. Wile presented letters opposing censorship from Judge Don J. Young, Jr., Huron County probate and juvenile jurist, and Oliver Schroeder, Jr., associate professor of constitutional law, Western Reserve University. Both said obscenity can be punished by present or strengthened penal laws. Schroeder said movies should be in "no better or worse position than newspapers, radio, and TV" in the matter of obscenity. He said the Supreme Court "has left no doubt that prior restraint of mass communications media violates the constitution." Judge Young said he is personally opposed to censorship and that "any kind of censorship seems wrong in principle."

John Harlor, Columbus attorney representing MPA will submit briefs to subcommittee outlining recent court decisions affecting censorship. Statements favoring censorship were read by representatives of Ohio Council of Chuches and Ohio Association of School Principals.

Campaign to revive censorship is "misinformed, misguided and dangerous," said Norman Nadel, theatre editor, Columbus Citizen, in his column. He said that "well-meaning individuals and groups" are doing a disservice to their children by overlooking "the most dangerous point in the whole situation," namely that they are protecting their children by asking for censorship. "They actually are campaigning to deprive them of the most precious American liberty, the right of free expression." Nadel said there is no such thing as a little censorship. "You cannot break one part of the Constitution without affecting the rest," he said in the editorial.

Binford Routed By Columbia

MEMPHIS—The Memphis board of censors last week reversed its ruling banning the showing of Columbia's "Bamboo Prison," in the face of a threatened suit testing not only the banning of "Bamboo Prison" but also the constitutionality of the Memphis censor laws. It was the first such a reversal.

Colonel William W. Goodman, attorney for Columbia, expressed disappointment at the move of Lloyd T. Binford, head of the censor board. He said, "We no longer have a suit and will not file the bill to test the constitutionality of the Memphis censor laws. Binford approached the management of Malco which wanted to show the film and Norman Colquhuon, local manager for Columbia, asking if something could be deleted from the picture. We refused to delete anything. We did not ask the board to reverse itself. I wish they hadn't. I do not like censorship per se, and especially the 'Bamboo Prison' kind."

Conciliation Service Set By Illinois Exhibs

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—At a meeting of the board of directors, United Theatre Owners of Illinois, TOA affiliate, held at Starved Rock State Lodge, it was voted to organize "a conciliation service" to aid the smaller exhibitors in their difficulties with distributors.

Support was given the joint committee in its fight against Pay-As-You-See TV, and a state-wide rally at Peoria on April 18 to further acquaint all exhibitors with the threat posed by the Zenith proposal for subscription television as filed with the Federal Communications Commission was scheduled.

Opposition to two legislative bills before the Illinois General Assembly was voiced. One bill would prohibit any drive-in screen that was visible from the highway, and the other would give county authorities the police powers of censorship.

An election of officers selected George Kerasotes, Springfield, as president; Edward Zorn, Pontiac, chairman of the board; Ralph Lawler, Peoria, vice-president; and Joseph Sikes, Waukegan, secretary and treasurer.

Starr, Martin To Speak At Anti Toll-TV Rally

PEORIA, ILL.—Alfred Starr, Nashville, Tenn., chairman, executive committee, Theatre Owners of America, and co-chairman, Joint Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, and E. D. Martin, president, TOA, will be the headline speakers at the statewide rally of exhibitors here at the Pere Marquette Hotel, according to George Kerasotes, Springfield, Ill., new president, United Theatre Owners of Illinois.

The meeting has been called to alert exhibitors on the crisis in regard to applications before the Federal Communications Commission to permit home subscription television showings of first-run films. Other speakers expected are David Wallerstein, Chicago, Balaban and Katz, who will speak on the relationship of TV advertising to the motion picture theatres; Norman Pyle, Chicago, MGM public relations executive, who will speak on "New Methods of Theatre Exploitation"; and Kerasotes, who will discuss proposed state legislation and the new concilliation service.

A special prevue screening and a cocktail party will be added events. Ralph Lawler, Peoria Drive-In operator and new state vice-president, is chairman of the meeting. Kerasotes announced the appointment of Ansley Tracy, Galesburg Drive-In, Galesburg, as the new director, Peoria group, and Jim Fenogio, Times, Oglesby, Ill., as new regional vice-president, Peoria group.

Lopert Trio To UA

NEW YORK—Robert S. Benjamin, board chairman, United Artists, and Ilya E. Lopert, president, Lopert Films Distributing Corporation, announced jointly last week that UA will distribute three important Lopert releases, Sir Laurence Olivier's "Richard III," Sir Carol Reed's "The Lucky Kid," and "The Man Who Loved Redheads."

Suit Seeks To Block Hughes RKO Stock Sale

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Plans of Howard Hughes to sell his RKO Pictures stock to Atlas Corporation were attacked last week in the Court of Chancery here. An RKO stockholder, Goldie Bodek, sought an injunction restraining him from selling his RKO shares to Atlas for more than $6 per share or, in the alternative, that Hughes be accountable to RKO for any excess he receives.

The complaint pointed out that Hughes bought the assets of RKO for a price equivalent to $6 per share, and charged that because of his desire to sell to Atlas for substantially more, Hughes has been wasting corporate assets by not investing. The resulting loss claimed is about $1,000,000. According to the complaint, RKO has $17,800,000 cash in bank and a tax loss carry forward of about $30,000,000.

In addition to enjoining Hughes from selling or making him accountable for receiving more than $6 per share, the plaintiff asked the court to compel RKO to make a distribution, and to invest, as well as asking the defendants to account for the failure to invest. Named as defendants in the action are Hughes, other directors, and RKO Pictures Corporation. The suit was filed by Wilmington attorney Robert C. Barab.

AFL Raps Foreign Production

HOLLYWOOD—The AFL Film Council last week denounced the "run-away" making of overseas films as "constantly threatening the living standards of American craftsmen," and demanded that the film companies should discuss all future overseas productions with the Foreign Production Committee of the council of labor organizations.

The resolution asks that the AMPP, SIMPP, and IMPPA stop making pictures abroad in order to avoid paying American wages and also wants those producers who are making pictures that must be produced in foreign countries for the benefit of the authentic locale to take a larger American crew with them on location junkets.

Anti-Trust Suit Filed

ST. LOUIS—Earl E. Williams and Pauline Williams, co-owners, 400-seat Venita, Herculaneum, Mo., last week filed a $300,000 treble damages anti-trust suit in the United States District Court here against 10 film distributors and the Miller Theatres, Inc., operators of theatres in Crystal City and Festus, Mo., charging they were forced to close the theatre in June, 1952, because distributors "illegally refused" to give them first-run motion pictures for exhibition in the Venita. Distributor defendants included Paramount, Columbia, Warners, 20th-Fox, U-I, Loew's, Inc., United Artists, Republic, and Monogram.

NEW YORK—Net operating profits of American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres for 1954 were $4,722,000 as compared to $4,480,000 for 1953, Leonard H. Goldenson, president, announced last fortnight in the annual report to stockholders.

Theatre income was $115,916,000 as against $114,926,000 in 1953, which was reported to be an increase of $3,276,000 over 1953 when adjustments are made for theatres divested.

The American Broadcasting division showed an operating income in 1954 of $70,424,000, as against $54,758,000 in 1953. However, the ABC division was reported to have suffered a loss "slightly larger" than in 1953, reflecting, according to Goldenson, expenditures necessary to develop the TV network.

Total income for the company for 1954 was $188,796,000, an increase of almost 10 per cent over 1953's figure of $172,196,000. The net profit of $4,722,000 represents $1.06 per share of common stock, after preferred dividends of $534,000. The 1953 dividend was $11 per share of common, after preferred dividends of $488,000.

Capital gains for 1954 were $210,000 or five cents per common share, compared with $4,516,000 in 1953, due to the sale of TV station WBKB. Working capital was slightly higher at $26,080,000, despite heavy cash outlays. Theatre expenditures were $5,862,000, mostly for wide-screen and sound equipment.

Goldenson reported the company had a whole or partial interest in 639 theatres, 260 of which have complete CinemaScope and stereophonic sound installations. AB-PT is required to divest itself of 42 theatres by Sept. 3, 1955, to complete the requirements of the consent judgment.

"Sinbad" Gets Code Seal

NEW YORK—RKO's "Son Of Sinbad" was granted a Production Code seal last week following deletions requested by the Production Code Administration. RKO has set a May 28 release date for the picture. "Son Of Sinbad" was held back from release for about a year, during which time the company declined to make the requested changes.

"The French Line," controversial Jane Russell vehicle, was also given a PCA seal following re-editing to conform to Code requirements. "The French Line" was formerly released without a PCA seal.

Martin Answers Yates

NEW YORK—A letter sent last week to Herbert J. Yates, president, Republic Pictures, E. D. Martin, president, Theatre Owners of America, called a statement attributed to Yates that his company was withdrawing from theatrical production because of lack of exhibitor support an "inconsistent and unrealistic position."

The letter points out that Republic has been supported since its beginning by films primarily for theatrical exhibition. It is also stressed that the statements and reports of almost all other producers and distributors show "tremendous improvement and very profitable operations."

Communion Breakfast Honors Fitzgibbons

TORONTO—Both the motion picture industry and one of its leaders in Canada, John J. Fitzgibbons, president and managing director, Famous Players Canadian Corporation, were honored at the entertainment industry's fourth annual Toronto Communion breakfast by His Eminence James C. Cardinal McGuigan.

His Eminence pointed out that in the theatre many unseen persons work behind the scenes "to make the star a glorious performer," and like those people, John Fitzgibbons had done just that in working for St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto.

"He was the human instrument behind the success of the St. Michael's Hospital campaign, its greatest supporter, its greatest driving-power. I've seen this going on for many years. I've never said anything before, but John J. Fitzgibbons has been the greatest driving force behind the institution. He was behind the scene. He was the man pulling the strings to see that the curtain never fell."

Fitzgibbons is chairman of the board of governors of St. Michael's. The Cardinal took the opportunity of thanking the industry, particularly, for allowing the use of houses without charge on Sunday as places of worship.

Many immigrant Catholics, he said, were desirous of worshipping in their own language, and people must have a place to say Mass before a parish can be started. "I don't think we have ever been refused the use of a theatre on a Sunday for Holy Mass and the ministrations of religion. I wish to thank the managers of the theatres and I hope the word is passed on to others."

Co-chairmen for the Communion breakfast were Jack Fitzgibbons, Jr., and Clare Appel, while Winston Barron was toastmaster.

Canadian Comment

The work of Dan Krendel, dough guy for the Variety Club of Toronto, in working with out-of-town theatre benefit nights staged by local and district managers, earned for him the 1954 Heart Award. In accepting the award, Krendel said that the thanks should go to those who helped him earn it, the managers in Guelph, Peterborough, North Bay, St. Catharines, Hamilton, and other communities, and I would like to accept it in trust for them." Chief Barker Harry Mandell made the announcement after receiving a sealed envelope handed him by Heart Award committee chairman William Summerville, Jr. He then called upon John J. Fitzgibbons to present the marble scroll symbolizing the honor. A likeable but forceful personality has made Dan Krendel a popular man in the industry. He became dough guy several years ago, and the announcement of his victory, which was made at the same time as a large photo blowup was unveiled, drew a large ovation.

Gina Lollobrigida and producer Harold Hecht recently concluded a deal in Rome, Italy, setting the star for a role opposite Burt Lancaster in Hecht-Lancaster's "Trapeze" for UA release. Looking on is Dr. Milko Skofie, Miss Lollobrigida's husband.

Plenty of activity on the Canadian production front would indicate, if announcements can be any criterion, that Canada is definitely headed to the top of world film production. An announcement was made by David Coplan, managing director, Canadian Film Industries, and its subsidiaries, of a $750,000 construction program, giving it the largest sound stage in the U.S. and Canada outside of Hollywood. The building 100 by 150, is being built by Howell and Sons, one of the continent's leading studio builders. A carpentry, machine, and plaster shop is also planned, along with dressing rooms. A Gebaert color tank is also planned, capable of handling Eastman color and other compatible processes. Shelly Films Limited is also to have a new studio-lab building. Construction of the $150,000 building, with equipment rated at $200,000, is expected to begin quite soon, with delays encountered after the floods of Hurricane Hazel last fall. Another ambitious production program was also announced by Meridian Productions Corporation, Ltd., organized six months ago by Ralph Foster and Julian Roffman. At present the company is working on a film on Marilyn Bell, conqueror of Lake Ontario, with Roffman shooting the Len Peterson script. Work is to begin soon on a feature film, "Child's Play," to be directed by Jules Bricken and produced by Roffman. Joint U.S.-Canada financing is planned.

The recent world premiere of 20th-Fox's "That Lady," Carlton, London, England, was attended by international royalty, entertainment luminaries, and the cream of London society. Seen, left to right, are Mrs. Basil Litchfield; Pierre Galante, fiance of Olivia De Havilland; Litchfield; Sy Bartlett; Pat Owens; and Miss De Havilland, star of the film.

England

In London, Britain's two largest independent circuits, excluding the Rank and ABC groups, continue to acquire new theatres. Star Cinemas, London, Ltd., acquired four theatres in Sheffield, bringing the number of theatres under their control to 106. The four new properties cost 150,000 Pounds. Sol Sheckman, chairman and governing director, Essoldo Circuit, Ltd., announced the purchase of the 2,300 seater Palace, Hanley. This brings the Essoldo circuit's strength to 178 theatres. Both circuits are carrying out extensive CinemaScope installations.

Mexico

In Mexico City, exhibitors here are pointing to high operating costs and a ceiling on admissions in an attempt to head off demands by the National Cinematographic Industry Workers Union for higher wages for its members. The collective labor contracts, which must be revised in May will feature heavy pay demands, and STIC has made it clear that, if necessary, it will call a general strike against theatres to get what it wants. The union claims that Mexico's theatres are doing more business than ever before, while exhibitors say that their profits, while they have increased, are about what they were five years ago when the cost of living was lower.

origin, which he said, if continued, will put a lot of people out of business. He felt they were in a rapidly diminishing minority. Said Goldstein, there is no patent on quality in product these days and if given a chance in these days of product shortage by exhibitors Allied Artists can come through with needed and wanted product.

The tour, which had two primary purposes, to acquaint the industry with the ambitious plans of Allied Artists and to measure the degree of receptivity to those plans by exhibitors, has resulted in a deluge of playdates to local branch offices with final compilation still to come. He deemed the initial results impressive with reception and reaction beyond expectations.

He termed the reaction a healthy one for the business, reporting that exhibitors came from distances of 400 miles to attend the meetings. The trip also indicated to him that there is such a thing as good will in the business, with many exhibitors going out of their way to express gratitude for the meets.

At present the company expects to release two big films each month for the rest of the year, as well as 15 smaller ones over the nine months remaining. Plans for the future still call for the expenditure of 25 millions on quality product over the next 16 or 17 months.

On matters other than Allied Artists, Goldstein, who is a distribution representative on the matter of arbitration, felt personally that even though arbitration is not finalized, there is no reason why an all-industry roundtable meeting between exhibitors and company heads should not be held. However, he stated that at the start distributor representatives made it quite clear that the matter of arbitration should first receive disposal before the roundtable discussion was set.

He saw no reason why an arbitration pact should not be concluded since but a few points remain in the final draft. Questioned as to whether the distributors are prepared to go ahead with arbitration should only the Theatre Owners of America approve the agreement, he assumed that they were and that the system would go into work despite lack of participation by other exhibitor factions.

On the matter of early release of features to armed forces installations, Goldstein said that he met with Pentagon officials but that no conclusion has been reached.

Also present were Ed Morey, executive vice-president, and Doug Rosen, head, Canadian distribution company of Allied Artists products.

DEPARTMENT ON GINA: The May issue of Esquire is Gina Lollobrigida's as evidenced by a cover and wonderful likenesses on two three-page gatefolds, which is a first for the magazine. One of the huge likenesses is a full-length photograph (wowee), while the other side contains a full length, color painting of Gina. The issue is brightened considerably. . . . While on the subject of that lovely lady, it should be noted that along with the engagement of her latest release by IFE at the Globe, there appears in the lobby a display of some of the outstanding fotos taken of her while in town recently as well as portrait paintings by well-known artists.

Makelim Contracts Grow

OKLAHOMA CITY—Hal R. Makelim, in a telegram to the Oklahoma Allied convention last week, stated that, to date, he had 3,456 exhibitors' contracts for the Makelim plan of guaranteed play dates.

High Court Rejects Censorship Challenge

WASHINGTON—The U.S. Supreme Court last week rejected a sweeping challenge to movie censorship powers of cities and states. In a brief order, the high court refused six to three to consider an appeal by the American Civil Liberties Union against a ban on "The Miracle" in Chicago.

The court majority dismissed the appeal "for want of a final judgment" in the lower courts. The CLU contended it is unconstitutional interference with free speech to ban films before they are actually shown to the public and to require licenses for their exhibition.

In a ruling on the same film in 1952, the Supreme Court held that motion pictures cannot be barred on grounds they are sacrilegious. Chicago banned "The Miracle" because it was allegedly obscene and immoral.

The ACLU said criminal penalties for exhibiting obscene or immoral films are enough of a safeguard to prevent their showing. The Circuit Court of Cook County, acting on an appeal by the ACLU, declared the city censorship statute unconstitutional on July 21, 1953. The decision was later reversed by the Illinois Supreme Court, which held that the city has the right to require the submission of films for censorship and to deny a permit to those found obscene.

Albany's Favorite Star Returns To Promote "Man Without A Star" There And Elsewhere

Left, a group of models welcomes Kirk Douglas to Philadelphia for a motorcade which went through the downtown streets in a tie-up with Oldsmobile.

Above, a delegation of Senators from the west, arranged and headed by Senator Frank Barrett, Wyoming, greeted Douglas and some beef.

Welcome Home

KIRK DOUGLAS, touring for advance promotion of Universal-International's "Man Without A Star," came home to Albany recently where Mayor Erastus Corning proclaimed his two-day stay to be "Kirk Douglas Days."

Douglas arrived after successful personal appearances in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Washington, but Albany went all out to welcome its famous native son.

Douglas first met local press representatives at breakfast, and then made several radio appearances in connection with the opening.

He was also a participant in a luncheon sponsored by the Variety Club of Albany and The Albany Times Union for the benefit of Albany's Big Brother fund. Douglas was guest of honor at a "Welcome Home" dinner at the Hotel Sheraton-Ten Eyck, where the guests included Governor Averell Harriman, members of the State Legislature, members of Douglas' family from nearby Amsterdam where he was born and grew up, his high school and University teachers and Albany civic leaders.

The second day, Douglas visited Governor Harriman at the State Capitol, and was introduced before the Legislature. He then went on to the Strand, where he was interviewed on stage for a broadcast by Alex Blake, station WABY disc jockey. He later made two more stage appearances at the Troy and another at the Strand.

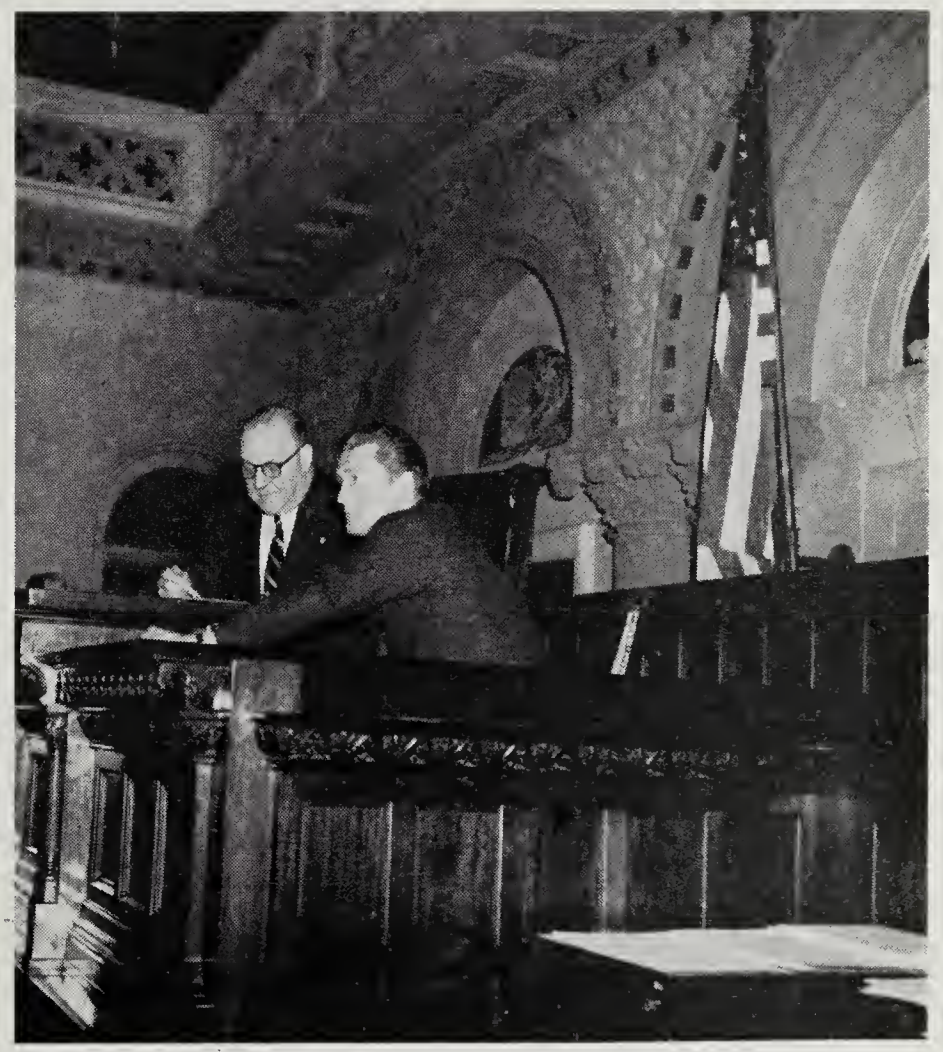
Mayor Corning's proclamation read in part, "Whereas Mr. Douglas, by virtue of his screen achievements, which have been seen throughout the world, has brought honor and prestige to our community . . . March 21-22 will be known as Kirk Douglas Days throughout this city to suitably honor a famous native son."

Douglas later left Albany to continue his six-city tour in Buffalo and Detroit.

Below, Douglas with Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas at a private showing of "Man Without A Star" at the Motion Picture Association in Washington.



While in Albany, Douglas visited an old friend, Salvatore Riccie, in a veterans' hospital.

Douglas' trip ta Albany gave him time to visit with members af the high school fraternity he had joined while in school in Amsterdam, N. Y.

Douglas meets Governor Averell Harriman at the state capitol. Gene Brannigan, minority leader of the Assembly, introduced Douglas to legislatars.

Douglas made an appearance on the flaar af State Assembly in Albany, and is seen on the podium with Oswald Heck, Speaker of the Assembly.

Douglas was interviewed by trade press representatives at breakfast. Note Mel Kanecoff, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR associate editor, without pipe.

Douglas is shown as he makes a personal appearance on the stage of the Strand, Albany.

Douglas visited the Universal-Internationanl exchange in Albany, headed by branch manager Norman Weitman, while publicizing "Man Without A Star."

Salesmen Accuse Distribs

NEW YORK—The bargaining committee of the Colosseum of Motion Picture Salesmen of America last week issued a statement accusing the distributors of "not having up to this time bargained in good faith," and assuring the membership of the union that any agreement entered into will be "fair, honest, and reasonable."

The report states that the distributors seek to put a $100 weekly limit on the salary of a salesman, and continues, "This would mean the decimation of the sales force and the exodus of high-calibre, hard-hitting salesmen to other fields of endeavor."

The committee reported that there has been a decrease of approximately 63 salesmen in the industry in the past 18 months. "Territories have been split up, thereby placing an additional burden on the remaining salesmen. The duties of the salesmen have become more onerous than ever, and the cry of the exhibitors for government regulation of film rental has added to the responsibility of the salesmen in dealing with them on behalf of their companies."

Gulf States Allied Reelects Berenson

EDGEWATER PARK, MISS.—Abe Berensen, New Orleans, was reelected president of Allied Theatre Owners of the Gulf States last week. He was also designated as national director.

The election followed the convention of the group at the Gulf Hotel, which heard Rube Schor, president, National Allied, state that high rentals were denying the big pictures to independent exhibitors.

Herbert Greenblatt, RKO sales manager, gave assurances to the exhibitors that his company would make product available soon. Julius Gordon, Beaumont, Tex., urged the exhibitors to stand together in opposition to toll-TV, and the convention voted to spearhead a drive for funds for the Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV.

Charles Manley, Manley, Inc., discussed the assistance given by the popcorn suppliers to theatremen in helping them to merchandise their products. The members reaffirmed their stand in favor of National Allied's move to seek congressional action on the industry's problems.

Others elected to office by the convention were F. G. Prat, Jr., vice-president; Nick Lamantia, secretary; and Edward Ortte, treasurer. Elected to the board of directors were E. R. Sellers, Locks Bolen, W. M. Sendy, Joe Barcelona, T. G. Soloman, Lefty Cheramie, and Lamantia.

U-I Exercises Warrants

WASHINGTON—U-I reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission last week that warrants for the sale of 16,760 shares of common stock at $10 per share were exercised during the three-month period ended March 31. The transactions reduced the number of such warrants outstanding to 33,323, excluding 12,800 held in the treasury.

About People

NEW YORK—Motion Picture Association head Eric Johnston last week announced that he has designated Marc M. Spiegel, MPEA continental manager, to represent the Association at the Cannes Film Festival which begins April 25. Johnston will be unable to attend due to previous government commitments. In addition to "Marty," United Artists, and "The Country Girl," Paramount, nominated by the MPEA selection committee, the Film Festival Committee itself has invited the showing of "East Of Eden," Warners, and "Bad Day At Black Rock," MGM, at the event. It will also invite he entry of "Carmen Jones," 20th-Fox, providing the French authorities are successful in obtaining an exception for the single showing from the French holder of the Bizet publishing rights.

NEW YORK—Jerome Pickman, Paramount vice-president in charge of publicity, advertising, and exploitation, last week announced the appointment of David Hanna to supervise production publicity for "War And Peace," which will be filmed by the Ponti-De Laurentiis organization in Italy, Finland, and Yugoslavia.

BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

"Long John Silver" Reaps Bally Harvest

NEW YORK—For the first time in the history of the motion picture industry, 400 theatres in this city representing every independent chain of exhibitors, joined in the promotion of a single motion picture, which had its premiere at Brandt's Mayfair.

The picture is "Long John Silver," produced and distributed by Distributors Corporation of America. The promotion was announced in full page ads by Macy's and officially kicked off by Mayor Robert F. Wagner and superintendent of schools William Jansen.

Called the Macy's Children's Week promotion, the program is built around a treasure hunt with local theatres participating. More than 3,000,000 "treasure" keys are being given away in 400 local theatres. Macy's Department Store has put up more than $60,000 worth of prizes which will be given to patrons receiving the treasure keys. The key holder goes to Macy's . . . fits his key into one of the locks displayed at the store, and, if the key fits, receives his treasure in merchandise.

To help spark the promotion, Macy's has purchased more than 100 pages of advertisement in local dailies, in which they promote their tiein to the "Long John Silver" Treasure Hunt.

Among the top prizes offered are a trip to any "Treasure Island" picked by the grand prize winner. In addition, Macy's is also offering such prizes as 10 free summer vacations for winning couples, a free summer vacation for young winners at Dodgertown, the boys club operated by the Brooklyn Dodgers at Vero Beach, Fla. Other prizes include 50, 21-inch color television sets, 100 bicycles, 500 pairs of roller skates, and other minor merchandise prizes.

In addition, to increase the strong promotional tiein to "Long John Silver," Macy's has agreed to distribute more than 1,000,000 eye patches plugging the picture. Store windows in the main store as well as in outlying stores will feature "Long John Silver." In-store promotion involving displays and posters will also be done. Also set up by Macy's and the film are a steady stream of saturating radio and television announcements reminding listeners of the picture's engagement at the Mayfair, and of the city-wide treasure hunt.

Civic youth organizations such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Cub Scouts, Brownies and Police Athletic League have also been tied in to the promotion by both DCA and Macy's. As part of their in-store promotion, Macy's has also announced that Police Athletic League boxing matches would be held at the store with such ex-ring champions as Henry Armstrong, Tony Canzonieri, James Braddock, and Barney Ross, slated to referee the matches. Also slated are PAL, Boy Scout, and Girl Scout ping-pong matches and favorite pet contests.

The New York campaign was tried out in extensive campaigns along the same order in three other cities before the picture hit here. In Providence, "Long John Silver" was tied in with Newberry's Department Store. In Philadelphia, Gimbels joined in the promotion, and in Washington, Hecht's Department Store tied in with the motion picture, all resulting in full page ads and extensive and unusual promotion. DCA plans such merchandising promotions in every city throughout the country.

This is the new travel-ad now available from National Screen Service and intended for ballyhoo use as illustrated atop of automobiles without injury to the cars.

These attractive 40x60 lobby displays were created by the advertising department, Stanley Warner Theatres, Philadelphia, to publicize the "Spring Movie Festival." Insert cards for subsequent months read: "May Round-Up. A Month Of Hit Pictures and Special Events"; and "Hit After Hit During Our June Jubilee. Join In Our Festive Events."

"Daddy Long Legs" Campaign Launched

NEW YORK—A massive campaign of national and local level promotion, keyed to support all theatre engagements of 20th-Fox's "Daddy Long Legs" in CinemaScope, has been arranged by the film company with the Fred Astaire Dance Studios, it was announced last week.

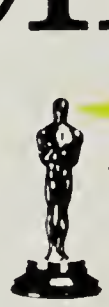
The campaign, which gets underway immediately and extends through June, will see each of 135 Astaire dance studios in key cities across the country programming important advertising, publicity, and exploitation drives.

A unique and key portion of the overall campaign will be the introduction and publicizing of a new dance, "The Sluefoot," which is performed in the production, scheduled for release this May.

One of the highlights of the dance studio tie-up will be additional promotional power generated through Dance Magazine, which is cooperating through sponsorship of a national dance contest which will result in prizes including trips to Hollywood and New York.

The May issue of Dance, which is the foremost interpreter of popular dancing in America, will feature Fred Astaire and Leslie Caron on its cover and an announcement of the national contest.

The May cover will be used as a poster in all Astaire studios and will be featured on newsstands. The 135 Astaire studios will also arrange for local promotions and tieins in connection with the contest pointing towards maximum concentration at point-of-sale and during the advance buildup for the playdate.



Additional plans are being made for a special "Sluefoot Party Night" to be celebrated in every Astaire studio in the country at which local press and radio notables will be invited to take part in the event. This party will be heavily publicized and exploited in connection with the local debut of the CinemaScope musical.

"Sinbad" Gets The Works

HOLLYWOOD—RKO will back "Son Of Sinbad," Howard Hughes' Technicolor-Superscope production, with one of the largest and most comprehensive advertising, publicity, and exploitation campaigns in RKO's history, it was announced last week by J. R. Grainger, president. An over-all budget of $300,000 has been allotted to include the trade papers, a 100 per cent thirty-day 24-sheet posting campaign in 32 exchange cities in the United States, and national magazines. The magazine campaign will concentrate on full-color pages in Collier's, Life, Look, and the Sunday supplements, American Weekly, Parade, and This Week, for a combined circulation of 40,157,242.

The film, down for June release, stars Dale Robertson, Sally Forrest, Vincent Price and Lili St. Cyr.

Benedict Appointed

NEW YORK—Lowell Benedict has been named national magazine publicity contact for 20th-Fox, it was announced last week by Edward E. Sullivan, publicity manager for the company. He replaces Robert Fleisher, who resigned recently. Benedict comes to his new post with long experience in the industry.

Broidy Tour Completed; AA President Lauds Result

SAN FRANCISCO—Speaking to 104 exhibitors representing 265 theatres, Steve Broidy, Allied Artists president, last fortnight said that sympathy and charity are not the answer to exhibitor-distributor relations.

"It is only when two selfish interests such as yours and ours can be made compatible with each other that there will be mutual benefits," Broidy declared. This was the 13th exhibitor group with which Broidy has met since beginning a nationwide tour with Morey R. Goldstein, vice-president and general sales manager.

The Allied Artists executive was introduced by Rotus Harvey, director, Independent Theatre Owners of Northern California. The exhibitor leader praised Broidy for his endeavors on behalf of the industry.

With his extensive tour coming to an end, Broidy stated that his meetings with showman on their own grounds have been the most gratifying experience in his 23 years in the motion picture business.

To the Parents of PHILADELPHIA'S OWN ACADEMY AWARD Winner GRACE KELLY BEST ACTRESS OF THE YEAR

Mr. & Mrs. John B. Kelly
3901 Henry Avenue
East Falls, Pa.

Dear Jack and Margaret,

Today I can say with pardonable pride "I told you so!" The little girl I have known from childhood is the deserving winner of the coveted Academy Award. It seems like yesterday that together we watched Gracie perform in local amateur plays. You asked my opinion and I recall assuring you she had the makings of a fine actress.

Today there's another champion in the Kelly family. I share your pride and am privileged in presenting her triumphant 'Oscar' performance in "The Country Girl" at the Midtown. This film is turning in the biggest gross of any Paramount picture ever shown in Philadelphia. Over 280,000 people have seen it to date, further tribute to your talented daughter's popularity.

Congratulations to you both. I am also writing my sentiments to Grace on this day of days in her life.

Sincerely,
Bill Goldman

The Editor Speaks

"ON THE WATERFRONT" sweeps the boards in the Oscar Derby, thus establishing the significant fact that quality in motion picture entertainment, whether embellished in any of the new exciting technical advances or still remaining in the basic medium of black and white, medium size screen, can still be the most important factor.

PAUL MANNING

"ON THE WATERFRONT" points strongly to another thought, more and more the brilliant artisans of the Broadway stage are being drawn towards the medium of the motion picture screen. And it is also becoming apparent that once embarked upon their film chores they are not being hampered by their employers to use any of the old, time worn, cliches in their work.

COMING INTO bright focus today in our industry are these men and women of the legitimate theatre, with their exceptional talent for transforming a bare stage into a moving, breathing scene of life. Given the added scope of the motion picture camera, the superlative luxury of plenty of money, top talent (this does not necessarily mean names) and ample time for preparation, the really capable men of the legitimate theatre can bring new and throbbing life to our screens.

THIS EDITOR SALUTES the voters who swept "On The Waterfront" to its smash victory. This stirring film literally slashed into an actual problem facing a segment of our people today. Relentlessly, it exposed one of the scabby sores festering upon the body of a small group of Americans struggling to live as other Americans, and established itself as a cinematic classic.

Jane Wyman, an Academy Award nominee herself, poses with film editors nominated for the coveted "Oscars" at the colorful ACE affair which drew top industryites.

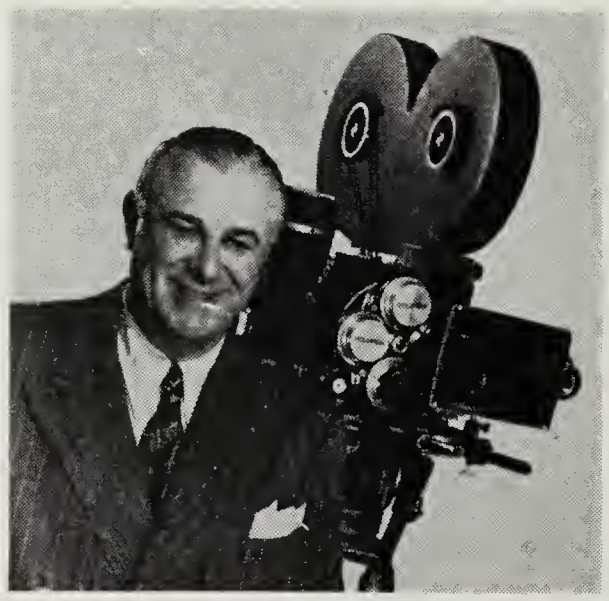
KEYNOTE SPEAKER at the annual awards banquet of the America Cinema Editors, veteran movie maker Louis B. Mayer, spoke out with great conviction on the future of this industry.

HONORING THE GATHERED film editors, who had voted awards to the editors of "The High And The Mighty," Ralph Dawson; "The Caine Mutiny," William Lyon and Henry Batista; "On The Waterfront," Gene Melford; "20,000 Leagues Under The Sea," Elmo Williams; and "Seven Brides For Seven Brothers," Ralph Winters, Mayer sounded a note of vigorous faith and vitality.

SINGLING OUT television for the main portion of his talk, Mayer said, "Aside from big sporting events, national or international spot news coverage, I do not regard television as offering any more competition to the screen than radio did. . . . Burning up material as television does, their problem is far, far greater than ours in achieving quality of product. They are also limited in scope of presentation, no matter how finely written, directed, or produced a program may be."

ANOTHER POINT Mayer brought up was the subject of color television. "It will have it's effect, certainly. But, I believe, only momentarily and of short duration. I recall, as most of you do, when Technicolor first became available to us. It was a great novelty and people bought tickets just to see anything in color. But soon the novelty wore off, and, as always, it was learned that nothing ever takes the place of top entertainment values."

MAYER PAID HIGH TRIBUTE to the America Cinema Editors, their talent and ability, and the creative efforts they contribute to the success of finished motion picture. He said, "In recent years, with the wide screens, multiple and quadmultiple sound tracks, this and that and the other color processes, the job of the conscientious film editor has become a real challenge. And no words are needed from me to remind you of the vital importance of your craftsmanship in the teams that produce motion pictures today."



A Man Who Loves Hollywood And Shows It

HOLLYWOOD HISTORY has been written in many ways. It has been spread across the pages of the nation's press in bold black type—both its misdeeds and its achievements. It has been charted in the ups and down of the financial pages. It has been veneered and polished in the slick folios of the magazines.

BUT THERE'S an unofficial history of 25 years of Hollywood's span, comprising several hundred miles of film. It is the life work of a man named Ralph Staub.

IT IS A STORY behind the story of Hollywood, warm, human, filled with nostalgia and laughs and a few tears. Staub didn't set out to record the growth of a city or an industry. Staub's history is personal. It is a pictorial record of the people who are—or who were—Hollywood.

WHEN RALPH STAUB set out to film his series of short subjects, he believed public interest in motion pictures went beyond the films. He believed audiences were interested in the people they saw on the screen—in the way those people lived, how they dressed, their problems, the way they spent their leisure time, how they fitted into their own community. He has never had reason to change his viewpoint.

RALPH STAUB

STAUB HAS NEVER let Hollywood down. He has demonstrated by his own success that the best news about Hollywood is good news. In his entire film file there is not a foot of negative devoted to scandal. His concern is to bring to the millions of moviegoers the opportunity to be on a friendly basis with the people who make up the glamour legend of motion pictures.

HE HAS SHOWN the stars in their homes, with their families, going about the daily business of living. He knows them as few people in the motion picture industry know them. To borrow a phrase from a screen magazine's well-read department, "He was there." He was there to photograph Doug Fairbanks, Sr., after a day on the set of "The Iron Mask." He was there when Carole Lombard took off on a bond-selling mission from which she never returned. He was there when Al Jolson put his knee prints in the cement in the forecourt of Grauman's Chinese. He has covered Hollywood's weddings, its christenings, its community acivities.

AS PRODUCER - DIRECTOR - CAMERAMAN of "Screen Snapshots" fame, he has operated on the theory that people everywhere consider Hollywood a part of their own lives—that they look upon Hollywood as America's own—a city to point to with pride, to gossip about endlessly, and to become part of their own dream of success. Staub has made 777 short subjects and has been three times nominated for Academy Awards. He is currently producing a two-reel short subject for Variety Clubs International on the Heart Fund activities of the various tents, all this adding up to a considerable accomplishment for a man who loves his home town.

Mervyn LeRoy Completes A Hollywood Cycle

The colorful director of many of moviedom's top hits celebrates his return to the Warners lot where his career was started by directing two major films at the same time.

ONE OF HOLLYWOOD'S greatest talents and most prolific directors is Mervyn LeRoy. He recently completed a remarkable directorial fete by working on two films simultaneously. This happened as a result of the sudden illness of John Ford, who was directing Warners' "Mister Roberts." LeRoy filled in for Ford as co-director, at the same time continuing with "Strange Lady In Town."

AMONG LEROY'S EFFORTS which are regarded as Hollywood classics are such all time greats as "Little Ceasar," "Tugboat Annie," "Oil For The Lamps Of China," "Anthony Adverse," "Waterloo Bridge," "Random Harvest," "Madame Curie," "Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo," and "Quo Vadis."

LEROY WAS 11 when he became an actor. His part required him to climb a tree and yell, "The Yanks Are Coming!" Opening night he did just that, but in his eagerness he fell out of the tree. The audience loved it. His salary was raised immediately from three to five dollars a week, and he was told to fall out of the tree every night. LeRoy learned early that comedy pays well in show business.

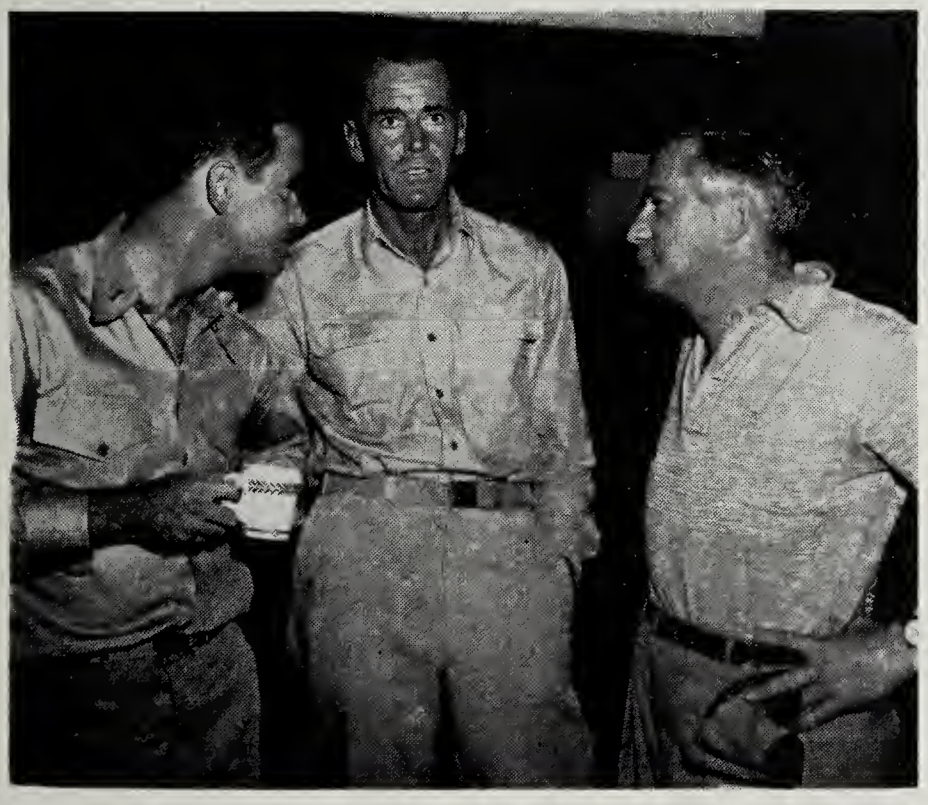
IN 1917 LEROY came to Hollywood to try his luck in the youthful picture business. His funds had almost run out before he landed at Famous Players-Lasky Studio in the wardrobe department at $12.50 per week. From this beginning he worked himself into assistant cameraman for a Cecil B. DeMille unit.

AFTER HE HAD WRITTEN comedy scenes for 20 pictures, he asked John McCormick, the studio head, for a chance to direct. He was assigned to direct Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes in "No Place To Go." That was in 1928, and LeRoy's career has not been stalled since.

MERVYN LEROY

LEROY WAS ON THE LOT during the fast moving and exciting era that followed the introduction of sound pictures by Warners and the purchase by Warners of the First National Studios.

THE WARNERS HEAD regarded LeRoy as one of Hollywood's most promising young directors, and they assigned him some of the company's most dynamic stories. He proved the judgment of his new bosses by making outstanding hits of "Little Ceasar," "Five Star Final," and "Fugitive From A Chain Gang."



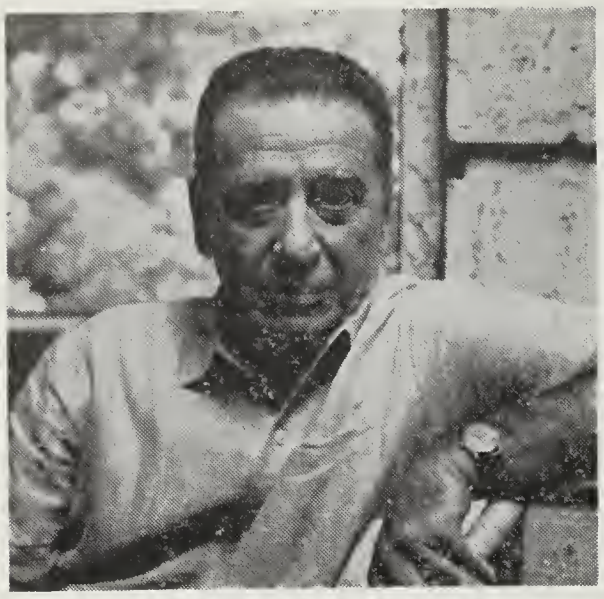
DESPITE HIS seeming Midas touch and the fact that his films were financially successful as well as cinematically sound, LeRoy was still known as the "boy director" because of his youthful appearance. Not until he was given the job of producer as well as director for "The King And The Chorus Girl" with Fernand Gravet and Joan Blondell was the youthful tag dropped. The boy wonder had grown up with a vengeance.

THIS IS THE MAN who dreamed as a boy of becoming a newspaper reporter, sold papers near a theatre, and was drawn into show business via the stage. His varied and colorful career spans those years when the movies discovered its voice, and the features for which he is responsible are among the all-time Hollywood greats.

LONG ON EXPERIENCE on either side of the camera and with a sense of humor attested to by the fact that during the days of his comedy writing career he announced himself as "First National's Comedy Constructor" because the appellation, "gag man," offended him aesthetically, LeRoy is quick to recognize talent and motion picture possibilities in others. There is no substitute for the years of industry activity that prove the uncovering of talent is no accident.

LANA TURNER WAS GIVEN her first screen role by LeRoy in "They Won't Forget." When he went to MGM the following year, he signed his contract with the proviso that the unknown girl be signed. He has directed many of the great stars of filmdom, including Clark Gable, Judy Garland, Spencer Tracey, Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Esther Williams, Vivien Leigh, Marie Dressler, Wallace Beery, Gloria Swanson, and Edward G. Robinson, among others.

LEROY'S SUCCESS has now completed a cycle. He is back at Warners where he started. When he left Warners in 1939 to sign with MGM, he began a new run of successes and outstanding accomplishments that included the producing "The Wizard Of Oz" and directing "Waterloo Bridge." However, Warners counts 1955 as a banner year for it heralds the returning to its fold of Mervyn LeRoy.—P. M.



Director LeRoy takes advantage of a lull on the set of Warners' "Mr. Roberts" to discuss a scene with actors Henry Fonda, recreating the title role he made famous on Broadway, and Jack Lemmon, fast climbing newcomer. LeRoy took over when director John Ford was taken ill and found himself directing two major features at once.

The other production which the versatile LeRoy was tackling at the same time as "Mr. Roberts" was "Strange Lady In Town," and he is snapped by the still cameraman on the set between takes with Greer Garson, musical composer Dimitri Tiomkin, whose "High And The Mighty" score recently won an Academy Award, and Dana Andrews.

Meet Leland Hayward

LELAND HAYWARD

LELAND HAYWARD is a man with the fabulous record of as many successes as the number of phases of the entertainment business he has entered. His triumphs in the legitimate theatre and on Broadway are legend. He produced such all-time stage hits as "Mister Roberts," "South Pacific," "Call Me Madam," "State Of The Union," "Point Of No Return," and "Anne Of The Thousand Days."

HE RECENTLY ENTERED the field of motion picture production and his first effort, soon to be released, is "Mister Roberts." He enlisted the services of the man who immortalized the role, Henry Fonda, and supporting him with such established stars as James Cagney, William Powell, and Jack Lemmon, it appears that this film, as with all else Leland Hayward does, will be listed as another success. The other films on his slate include "The Spirit Of St. Louis," "The Old Man And The Sea," and "Point Of No Return." All of these films will be made under the Hayward banner for Warners presentation.

HAYWARD WAS BORN in Nebraska City, Neb. He has been successively publicity man, film salesman, talent scout, story editor, agent, and producer.

HE WAS ALWAYS fascinated by the entertainment field, and after entering Princeton with the class of 1923, he decided to leave at the end of his freshman year. His first affiliation with show business came when he started to work as a traveling press agent for United Artists. In this capacity he did publicity for such famous stars as Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, and director David W. Griffith.

HE LATER JOINED the scenario department at First National Studios, and was given a roving European assignment looking for suitable screen material. With the advent of talking pictures, Hayward saw the need of the studios for scripts suited to the new medium. He could also foresee a demand for stage trained actors. With this in mind he returned to New York and for $10,000 bought a third interest in the American Play Company headed by Jack Rumsey. In the first year they sold $3,500,000 worth of plays to Hollywood.

THEN HAYWARD FORMED a partnership with another dynamo, the late Myron Selznick. They established offices in Hollywood and New York and were regarded as the leading agents for stars, writers and directors. Among their well known clients were James Stewart, Fredric March, Henry Fonda, Charles Laughton, Fred Astaire, Greta Garbo, Myrna Loy, Edna Ferber, Ernest Hemingway, and Ben Hecht.

IN 1937, Hayward and Selznick split up, and in 1945, Hayward wearying of the agency business, sold out to the Music Corporation of America. This move paved the way for his entry into the Broadway and finally Hollywood production ranks.

GOOD THINGS TO COME FROM HOLLYWOOD . . .

United Artists' "Marty"

"Marty" is a picture which everyone will understand and enjoy.

It is one of those rare little gems that sneak up on us every once in awhile—that we keep hearing about while it is being made, keep hearing nice things, not too sensational, but rather nice pleasant rumors about the fact that the story is good, the cast is good, etc., etc.

Then, like a slow starting but powerful storm, it bursts upon your horizon and you realize that here is a tremendous screen force.

The title role is played by Ernest Borgnine, who scored big as "Fatso" the sadistic sergeant in "From Here To Eternity." Borgnine gives "Marty" a realism which moviegoers will not easily forget, a warm but dramatic quality which establishes him firmly as one of our top players.

The very competent team of Harold Hecht and Burt Lancaster show their ingenuity and versatility in selecting this work of the brilliant TV playright, Paddy Chayefsky, for screen adaptation; and also in getting the sensitive direction of Delbert Mann, who doesn't miss a trick in fashioning a picture which will be very, very hard to top.

To the entire cast, all practically unknown to the vast movie audience, to the members of the technical staff, and to Harold and Burt goes this department's heartiest congratulations for a great picture.—P. M.

Kings Host Bullfight

MEXICO CITY—In a truly royal gesture, the King Brothers played host to 62,000 Mexicans at the Plaza De Mexico bull fights with everything free. Frank and Maurice King hired the Plaza, the matadors, the picadors, the hot dog concessions, the tamales, the enchilades, etc., and everything was on the house. While everyone was enjoying himself, cameras were turning to record the colorful event for a scene in the CinemaScope-color production, "The Boy And The Bull," which RKO will distribute.

NEWS OF THE Territory

BRANCHES

Atlanta

Harry Feinstein, New England zone manager, Stanley Warner Theatres, has returned to New Haven after a vacation in Florida. . . . Linda Einfeld, daughter of Charles Einfeld, 20th-Fox vice-president, was visiting in Coral Gables, Fla., from Florida. . . . A. J. Knight, Palm Drive-In, Largo, Fla., has returned there from Atlanta.

The Crescent Amusement Company, Nashville, Tenn., has contracted for the construction of a $300,000 shopping center in Cleveland, Tenn., which will house two variety stores and a drugstore. A section of the building, not yet assigned, may later be developed as a theatre.

The Alabama Theatres Association, Motion Picture Exhibitors of Florida, and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners and Operators of Georgia, together with all the film distributors operating in the Atlanta and Jacksonville exchange areas, are undertaking one of the greatest box-office stimulant campaigns ever. This promotional campaign will be called Southeastern Movie Festival and will run from May 16 to June 16. Plans are being made for a gigantic joint kickoff meeting to be held at the Biltmore Hotel, on May 15-17. Plans also call for the film companies to premiere three or more big productions in the states of Alabama, Florida, and Georgia, with saturation bookings throughout these states.

Fred Levy, 77, local department store owner, Louisville, Ky., but better known in the industry as a pioneer exhibitor, died in Miami, Fla., with funeral held in Louisville. . . . Governor Frank Clement has signed a measure passed by the Tennessee state legislature giving county courts the authority to legalize Sunday shows outside city incorporation lines. This is being hailed by drive-in owners as a long needed direct approach. Motion picture interests came through the legislative session unscathed, with more than $70,000,000 added to the tax income of one per cent in the sale tax. Only theatres' sales of 15 per cent or more are affected.

The new Melbourne Drive-In, Melbourne, Fla., was opened with a Hollywood night, County Commissioner Joe Eickman cut the ribbon at the entrance, and Mayors from a number of surrounding cities appeared. . . . The Ritz, Ybor City, Fla., has installed CinemaScope. . . . Robert Skaggs, Sr., former manager, Florida, Jacksonville, has been appointed city manager of their theatres in St. Augustine, Fla.

Dan Sangaree, manager, Desoto, Arcadia, Fla., moves over as manager, Ritz, Bartow, Fla. Cliff Bailey, manager, Ritz, goes as manager, Desoto, Arcadia. Both are owned by Florida State Theatres. . . . The Gulf-Winds Drive-In, St. Petersburg, Fla., has closed for an indefinite period for repair work. . . . The Sunset Drive-In, Knoxville, Tenn., will soon reopen for the season. . . . The Phillip Drive-In, Colquit, Ga., will soon open.

Byron Adams, branch manager, United Artists, checked in at his office after a sales meeting in Chicago. . . . A manager's meeting was held in Atlanta at RKO to discuss plans for the Southeastern Movie Festival . . . George Pabst, UA district manager, was in at the local office. . . . Also in was Carly Floyd, president, Floyd Theatres in Florida, and Harvey Garland, Florida State Theatres, Jacksonville.

Mrs. Ted Toddy, wife of Ted, Toddy Pictures, is getting along just fine after falling down the steps at the office.

Atlantans enjoyed a new television experience. A comparatively small audience of 300 persons at the Tower joined crowds in 32 American cities who saw for the first time a Broadway production reproduced on a large screen through closed-circuit television as it was being performed in New York's Adelphi. The Atlantans paid from $1 to $10 to see the program which was for the benefit of CARE and ANTA.

Richard Todd, who plays the title role of 20th Century-Fox's "Man Called Peter," was to attend the opening of that CinemaScope production at the Fox. . . . The Florida State Retailers Association has become the first such association to publicly go on record against toll television, it was disclosed. The association, meeting in Orlando, Fla., passed a resolution calling upon the Federal Communications Commission and Congress to "keep the air free in line with the philosophy on which American broadcasting has been established." The resolution warned that pay-as-you-see television would add to a "stay at home" trend of present consumers and further result in the lessening of the large listening audience offered by free radio and television.

President Ed Stevens, Stevens Pictures, was back in his office after visiting his Miami, Fla., branch. . . . Jimmy Hobbs, branch manager, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges, was back after a business trip to Florida.

Jimmy Bello, Astor and Capital Films, was off for a trip to Tennessee. . . . Jimmy Campbell and Ben Jordan, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges sales representative, was in for a visit. J. E. McLeory, Allied Artists, Charlotte, was in for a visit wih his family.

Mrs. Polly Puckett and Miss Betty Landers, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges, were welcomed into WOMPI at the monthly meeting at the local Variety Club. Eleven members agreed to furnish automobiles for the Old Newsboys Day Drive parade, sponsored annually by the Variety Club and Atlanta-Journal and Atlanta Constitution.

Charlotte

David Williams, salesman, IFE, is touring the eastern region contacting exhibitors in New Bern, N. C., Washington, N. C., and Elizabeth City, N. C. A screening of "Wayward Wife," IFE release, was held in the Fox Screening room.

W. G. Driver, independent salesman, was in the peach belt area, Candor, N. C., West End, N. C., and Southern Pines, N. C., and states that the peach crop is a complete failure due to a cold wave. It is going to affect theatres in that section, and hundreds of workers have been laid off.

L. L. Theimer, Bill Talbert, Piedmont Promotions and Booking Service, and Max Reinhardt, Reinhardt Enterprises, have opened Atlas Promotion and Advertising, Inc., now presently located in the Latta Arcade, Charlotte. Primary function of the company is to properly exploit pictures for theatres and they intend to carry a full line of advertising, such as false fronts, and radio and television spots.

Women of the Motion Picture Industry, the sixth organization in the United States, will have their first regular luncheon meeting on April 27 at Thacker's Restaurant. . . . W. F. Harris, Harris Theatre Sales, is running for city councilman in the coming election.

Jerry Gold, MPEOF president, has asked all theatre owners of the state to consider booking Danny Kaye's "Assignment Children" to acquaint the public with the world-wide work of UNICEF. . . . The season's first midnight horror shows appeared at the Ribault and Atlantic Drive-Ins. . . . Joe Charles, manager, Capitol, came back from a visit to Tampa, Fla.

Memphis

Moses Silman, Lux, Luxora, Ark., was in on his way to a 10-day vacation to New Orleans. . . . Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Azar, Lincoln and Harlem, Greenville, Miss., came through on their way home from three weeks spent at Hot Springs, Ark. . . . That bounce in the walk of Allied Artists branch manager, Bailey Prichard has turned into a strut at first sight of that granddaughter. Her first plane flight to see grandad didn't faze her.

Maybe the Memphis Board of Censors aren't doing so badly. They banned "The Blackboard Jungle" and Atlanta has banned the same picture with the reason, "This does not apply to Atlanta." . . . Greenville theatre owners in Mississippi met with the PTA and agreed to try to "screen" weekend movies more carefully with child audiences in mind.

New Orleans

Pat Wagner, Theatres Service, observed her birthday. . . . Ralph Hogan, who departed from MGM's sales staff a few months ago to enter outside business, has returned. Carlton Bien, who had replaced Hogan, is back again as salesman in the Washington trade territory. . . . Deepest sympathy is extended to Arthur Baggett, Village, Bonita, La., in the loss of his wife.

Friends and UA fellow workers are taking a gander at that sparkler on Jean Davis' third finger left. Wedding bells will soon ring for her. . . . Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Goodrow and Mrs. Goodrow's father, Captain Rose, visited with the former's son, Freddy, and family in Thibodaux, La. . . . Guy Adams, manager, Columbia, Hammond, La., is slowly recovering from second degree burns on face and body caused by the explosion of the boiler in the theatre when he struck a match to light the pilot light.

Heartfelt sympathy to Mrs. Mary Morris, cashier, Paramount, and a member of the WOMPI's, in the loss of her mother, and to Mrs. Jesse D. Tinsley, Jonesboro Drive-In operator, in the loss of her husband. . . . Thank you Doyle Maynard, Don, Natchitoches, La., for your renewal subscription to Motion Picture Exhibitor.

Miami

In Fort Lauderdale, Fla., the Dixie Manor Drive-In opened with free admission to the first 100 cars and free candy to all children. . . . Services were held for Mrs. Josehine Pierce who died in a local hospital. She was head of the cinema section of the Army during World War I and once was in charge of the old Vitagraph Film Corporation.

Jack Fink, manager, Park, Tampa, Fla., was in to attend the Wometco Old Guard party-ette held at the Variety Club. Following a buffet supper, the organization held a business meeting at which the following were elected to the board of governors, Burton Clark, manager, Boulevard Drive-In, North Miami Beach, Fla.; Walter Klements, manager, Mayfair Art; Dick Treccase, manager, Sunset, South Miami, Fla.; Sonny Shepherd, district manager; and Van Myers, head, confection department. Clark was elected for two years, the others for one. Wally Becker, chairman, will remain on the board for another year. Following the election, the Old Guard members and their guests enjoyed entertainment presented both by members and by professionals.

Gene Race, manager, Parkway, enjoyed lunch with a friend of his early days in Europe, actor Paul Lukas. Lukas and Race were in the Hungarian army together and at one time were roommates. . . . The committee of 1,000, Variety Club's gift to Variety Children's Hospital, kicked off its 1955 campaign with announcement of a $20,000 gift from a local resident, Mrs. Ernest Scott. Heartened by this generous gift, chairman Leo Adeeb and his lieutenants mapped plans for a campaign to raise $100,000. Members of Variety women's committee will take complete charge of the Miami Beach drive, with Mrs. Gilbert Chaplin, general women's chairman, appointing Mrs. Nora Bell chairman of committee work. Mrs. Scott's totally unexpected gift means the committee can start with 20 per cent of its goal already achieved. Anoher unusual gift received was $114 from "The committee of 60," employees of Miami Springs Villas.

Carole Kalphat is new in the Wometco offices, replacing Roger Doan, resigned to return to schooling. . . . Paul Grosso has been appointed maintenance chief, Wometco Theatres properties in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. . . . The Gateway, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., had a free Easter holiday show for the children. . . . Howard B. Shaw, formerly with Reela Films, is now assistant to Maurey Ashmann, Television Film Art Service, Inc. . . . Elmer Radloff, comptroller, Wometco Theatres, is proud of daughter Helen Lee Radloff, who was elected to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Producer Sam Katzman was interviewed in the lobby of the RKO Orpheum, New Orleans, recently at the world premiere of Columbia's "New Orleans Uncensored." Looking on are stars Arthur Franz and Beverly Garland and local notables.

Variety Club of Greater Miami has issued its first number of "Variety Barker," a bulletin for members. Maurey Ashmann, chief barker, in the first issue told his fellow members "Your card and key to Variety Club brings you the association of fellowship of many like yourself . . . your efforts for Variety pay the highest returns possible . . . just visit the hospital and see the youngsters . . . that's the story your heart will understand better than words."

Arthur Godfrey starred as master of ceremonies at Variety Club of Greater Miami's eighth annual "Show of Shows" in the Miami Beach Auditorium. Milton Berle and Terry Moore added their talent to the very successful evening. Les Rohde and his band supplied the music. Co-chairmen were Sonny Shepherd and Al Weiss.

Friends were extending sympathy to Ann Welling, former secretary, Cincinnati Motion Picture Theatres, Inc., on the death of her brother.

Cleveland

Theatre attendance hit a week-end low when a nine-inch snowfall and high wind hit the area. Some of the larger neighborhood theatres reported a total audience of 15 people Saturday night. Most drive-ins, many of which opened the previous day, closed again. There were two exceptions to this general condition, the Fairmount and Detroit. Both were playing a one-day pre-release of Republic's "A Doctor in the House." Leonard Greenberger, manager, Fairmount, says he had more than 1,000 paid admissions, while the Detroit, according to Leonard Mishkind, had an audience of about 44 people.

Richard Todd, star in the 20th-Fox production, "A Man Called Peter," was scheduled to be in. A press luncheon at the Statler Hotel was arranged. Todd is making a seven-city personal appearance tour in seven days, taking him to Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Detroit, and Atlanta, as well as Cleveland.

Jim Levitt Universal-International city salesman, is home from the hospital convalescing from minor surgery. . . . Republic held a buffet luncheon housewarming party to welcome industry members to its new Film Building street level location. Hosts were Jules Livingston, branch manager, and salesmen Justin Spiegle and Joe Krenitz. It's the space formerly occupied by Eagle Lion.

Herbert Ochs, Ochs Drive-In Management Company, returned from Dania, Fla., where he and Mrs. Ochs have been vacationing, and is shoulder deep in activities. Six of his seven Canadian drive-ins were to open on April 7. The seventh, the Porcupine Drive-In, Timmins, Ontario, has a May 1 opening date. In addition, Ochs is overseeing construction of the new 750-car Pearl Road Drive-In, here, which he, in association with James J. Barton, former state representative, and Ben L. Ogron, Ohio Theatre Supply Company, is building. Henry Hellriegel, local theatre contractor, has been awarded the contract to construct the concessions buildings. Owners are shooting at a May 30 opening.

Cleveland exhibitors are wholeheartedly back of Wilbur Snaper's (New Jersey Allied president) move to get producers to make available more prints of pictures suitable for special children's matinees. Claiming the movie going habit is formed early, they feel that in the long view producers will benefit by issuing new prints even if they do not show an immediate profit. . . . Chris Spanoudis, Ohio Theatre Supply Company, spent a week at the Strong electric plant to get special knowledge of the Strong products for the benefit of the theatre owners he serves.

Two Marion, O., theatres are shutting down definitely on April 11. They are the Palace and Marion, formerly Northio houses. No reason for the shutdown is announced. . . . The Hough-79th Street, here, which closed recently, has been reopened by a new lessee, Raymond J. Kneier. . . . Solons Explore Ohio Censor Problem

COLUMBUS, O. — Judiciary subcommittee of the Ohio House of Representatives has been exploring the problem of whether it is possible to write a censorship law that will meet constitutional tests. Chairman E. G. James, Republican, Caldwell, said it was not the province of the subcommittee to declare whether such a law should be recommended but only to find out whether there is a firm legal base for a new law.

John C. Harlor, Columbus attorney representing the Motion Picture Association, said the U. S. Supreme Court has not declared film censorship unconstitutional because the court "always decides cases on the narrowest issue possible. The court selects a very patently unconstiutional part of the statute, namely the criteria under which censors were obliged to act."

Dean Frank Strong, Ohio State University College of Law, told the subcommittee that there is "enough honest difference of opinion" about the constitutionality of censorship to permit passage of a new Ohio censor law" but that "no one can guarantee the constitutionality of any censor statute."

Robert Wile, secretary, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, said the proposed censorship law limited to patrons under 21 cannot be enforced. He said, "How can you bar a 20-year-old Marine or an 18-year-old married couple?" Wile said he would support Thomas Osborne, assistant prosecutor of Cuyahoga county, in enforcement of police laws against objectionable films. Osborne spoke earlier to the full committee in favor of censorship. Wile refuted statements that films show explicit methods of committing crime. He exhibited a current magazine article titled "Six Ways to Steal a Car." Wile said he would favor making it a penal offense to show films which demonstrate how to use narcotics.

He said Communist propaganda can't be banned by law and said the only film shown in Ohio with such propaganda was "Salt of the Earth." Wile some months ago warned Ohio exhibitors about the nature of the film. Wile, a member of the Bexley Parent-Teacher Association, said he was not contacted about whether he was in favor of the association's support of the Committee for Decent Films in Ohio and questioned whether many PTA members were advised of the action.

In refuting statements by Rep. James Kilbane, Cleveland, that many Ohio theatres were showing "lewd" films, Wile said that 99 percent of Ohio theatres show none but code-approved films.

The Ohio Civil Liberties Union has been active in attack on proposed censorship. Speakers before the subcommittee included Warren Hill, law professor, Ohio State University; Morton Icove, Cleveland attorney, chairman of the union's censorship committee; and Rev. Jesse Cavileer, pastor of the First Unitarian Society, Cleveland. Oscar Steiner, chairman, sent a letter to the subcommittee protesting censorship.

Icove said he would like to have an immediate ruling from Attorney General William O'Neill on constitutionality of proposed laws. He said legislators who have sworn to uphold the constitution would violate their oaths if they approved censorship laws which they believe to be unconstitutional. He said obscene films could be quickly controlled by strict enforcement of present penal laws and by greater penalties.

"Limited pre-control" of films is as "necessary now as it was in the past," said Dr. Clyde Hissong, former Ohio chief film censor. He attacked "strike-it-rich" producers and distributors who have attempted to cash in on lack of effective state censorship.

station wagon, a gift of the Standard Club. Cooperative Theatre twin heads, Irving and Adolph Goldberg, headed the presentation.

It took six New York Central cars to bring 300 people along with Flora Ward Hinline to the Music Hall for one of the largest single groups to see "Cinerama Holiday." . . . Cinerama's district manager, Frank Upton, is off to St. Louis again to iron out the managing director problem there.

Meanwhile, their Kanawha will continue in operation. . . . The Cameraphone, operated by the Warner circuit and Morris Finkel, has been acquired by the Mervis Brothers. An extensive modernization program is being planned with a large screen and anamorphic lenses being installed.

George Zeppos, Rex, Wheeling, W. Va., has recuperated from his recent illness and is now on the road to recovery. . . . The cadets from Linsly Military Institute paraded and performed in conjunction with the opening of the "Long Gray Line" at the Capitol, Wheeling.

Drive-ins opened included Ohio Drive-In, Follansbee; Riverside, Rayland, O.; Starlight, Wexford, Pa.; and Kane, Kane, Pa. . . . MGM will bring a "Glass Slipper" float to town to help exploit the new Leslie Caron show, coming to downtown Penn. A Cinderella will be chosen in the local campaign.

On May 16, the Stanley will carry the Marciano-Cockell heavyweight championship fight via theatre TV. . . . Jack Judd, Columbia manager, reports that they will stage a multiple and saturation area release May 11, when "Cell Block 2445" and "Seminole Uprising" will break in 100 theatres.

Bob Bowman, Stanley Warner district manager for the Erie, Pa., area, is vacationing in Florida. . . . Allied Artists will move from present offices to new quarters formerly occupied by Lou Hanna. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Malone have sold the supermarket in Cheswick and will now concentrate only on their theatre interests at Cheswick and Springdale, Pa.

Pennsylvania Democratic chairman Joseph Barr stripped Alden Phelps, Waterford Drive-In operator, Waterford, Pa., and Erie county Democratic chairman, of patronage command. Now Phelps will break with the party and run for Erie county commissioner against seven other contenders. . . . Carlton, DuBois, Pa., has been dismantled and the Sears Department Store will lease it for commercial use.

The Stahl, Homestead, Pa., is being converted into a skating rink. The theatre has been leased for conversion by John Stahl, who was a pioneer exhibitor. . . . Joe Mazzei is now doing his own buying and booking since his withdrawal from the Co-op combine. . . . W. E. Anderson, veteran Mount Jewett exhibitor, confirms that he has secured the Huntington Drive-In and will operate it starting this spring. His daughter, Susan, is back home after being hospitalized.

Cliff Brown left for Virginia where he will compete in the annual charity golf tournament. His Temple, Kane, Pa., is being managed in his absence by his father-in-law. . . . Gus Vaveris opened up his Mundy's Corners Drive-In, Johnstown, Pa., with $1 a carload. . . . The Gray, Spangler, Pa., closed its doors after operating for the past 20 years. This was due to the serious condition of the coal mining business in this area. The final admission was 10 cents to all with no takers.

Cuba Walker, Ideal Circuit, Johnstown, Pa., has installed anamorphic lenses at her Ideal and Roxy, leaving the Laurel and Hollywood the only two theatres operating without anamorphic lenses. . . . Adolph Farkas, Lyric and Rialto, Johnstown, Pa., left for a vacation to Washington in order to see the well known cherry blossoms.

Columbus

Proposal to establish statewide daylight savings time, opposed by theatremen, was killed by a vote of 10-2 in the House of Representatives committee for state government. A number of Ohio theatremen spoke before the committee opposing the measure. . . . Rabbi Samuel Gup, 61, chaplain of the Columbus Variety Club and former rabbi of Temple Israel here, died in University Hospital. Among his many public-spirited interests was service on an advisory council to the Ohio film censorship board.

Manager Robert Sokol, Loew's Broad, discovered a compatriot of Peter Marshall, whose life story is told in 20th-Fox's "A Man Called Peter." The Chief Ben American Horse, cousin of Chief Crazy Horse, accompanied by his granddaughter Princess Darlene Rooks, who are touring key cities on behalf of U-I's "Chief Crazy Horse," recently visited Toledo, O., where they are seen being welcomed by Mayor Czelusta as Al Dennis, manager, Rivoli, looks on. The Indians were made honorary citizens of Toledo.

local man, William Marshall, was born in Coatbridge, Scotland, home town of the Scottish minister. The Columbus resident, a carpenter who came to Columbus from Scotland six years ago, said he is not related to Marshall. Scenes for the CinemaScope feature were filmed in Coatbridge.

Hollywood-produced war movies can inspire young men to enlist but they can also create "lopsided or distorted impressions of service life that are rough to erase," said Brigadier General F. H. Lamson-Scribner, commander of Marine Air Reserve Training. He was here to participate in the annual military inspection and review at Port Columbus Naval Air Station. He said enlistments here had jumped since "Battle Cry" was shown, but "some mothers might think twice about allowing their sons to enlist in the Marines after seeing the not-so-tame love affairs of the Leathernecks."

Veteran screen actor Monte Blue was honor guest at the recent dedication of the new Milo-Grogan Boys' Club. He was welcomed by Leo Yassenoff, executive vice-president, Boys' Clubs of Columbus, and owner, Academy Circuit.

anamorphic lenses. . . . Four central Ohio drive-ins were scheduled to open for the spring season. These include three Miles auto theatres, East Main, Scioto Drive, and West Broad, plus the Kingman, near Delaware. . . . Manager Robert Sokol, Loew's Broad, received many enthusiastic comments from those who attended a special preview of "A Man Called Peter," Easter week attraction at the Broad.

Marion

Managers of three local theatres said the houses will be shuttered following refusal of Marion City Council to repeal the three percent admissions tax as requested by theatremen. James Rairdon, manager, Palace and Marion, said his houses would be closed April 12, and Lee Kramer, manager, Ohio, said that house would be dark June 1. The tax has yielded about $20,000 per year with $6,000 of that amount coming from Marion theatres, said Don Quaintance, chairman of the finance committee, City Council. The tax has been in effect since 1947. Rairdon said the theatres could be considered as paying the tax, since admissions were not increased at the time the tax was imposed. Northio Theatres Corporation, Detroit, operates the Palace and Marion. Selected Theatres Company, Cleveland, operates the Ohio.

West Virginia

Huntington

The East Outdoor and the Ceredo Drive-In have both reopened for the season. Both have been remodeled and CinemaScope equipment installed.

SAVEABLE REVIEW SERVICES were an innovation by MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR in 1936. Prior to that year many Trade Papers reviewed features and shorts, or at least listed them for reference purposes;—but none followed any uniform style or method that permitted saving in other than a heterogeneous glob in a scissors and paste pot scrapbook.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR changed all this! In 1936 it introduced a separate, saveable section, in which all reviews and indexes relating to any particular year were carefully brought to the executive theatreman for his current and future knowledge. Now imitated or adapted by most other Trade Papers, the basic method has never been improved.

But MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR went further than this! ONLY MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, down through the years, has maintained a 100% Review Coverage of ALL features and of ALL shorts, whether foreign or domestic, that were available to Executive Theatreman consideration. ONLY in MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR has continued to appear the MOST COMPLETE of all Reviewing Services. The record speaks for itself!

An enthusiastic welcome was given to President Steve Broidy and Morey R. Goldstein, vice-president and general sales manager, Allied Artists, as they described forthcoming productions and told the story of the new organization and its transition to major studio status. The two executives were hosts at a luncheon attended by about 100 theatremen. Dave Wallerstein, vice-president, Balaban and Katz, who emceed, extended a warm greeting to Broidy and Goldstein and complimented them on the "great strides your young company has made in an earthy campaign." Goldstein said, "This in typical of welcomes we have received in our trip around the country. We found great receptivity to our programs which far exceeded our optimism. Old buyers bought on labels. We found everywhere exhibitors are ready to give us necessary support." Wallerstein lauded Broidy for his long and faithful service to the industry. In turn Broidy paid tribute to Walter Immerman, B and K, and Jack Kirsch, president, Allied Theatres of Illinois, "who gave us contracts in dull times." Broidy said, "We are finding it more profitable to produce 20 pictures instead of 10 and 400 instead of 150. The answer is expansion. With the decline of 2-D, this is the time to move."

Harry Sears reports that despite rain, snow, sleet, ice, and other assorted spring weather, his Double Drive-In came close to a record. . . . Harris Dudelson, midwestern sales manager, Buena Vista, and his wife are sojourning in Florida. Irwin Lang, booker, is serving in the meantime. . . . The Allied of Iowa, Nebraska and Mid-Central, in a recent bulletin to its members, pointed out that it will be interesting to see what happens to Disney's "Davy Crockett" film when shown in the movie houses after being shown to three times as many people on TV. The bulletin raised the question whether many of the ticket buyers will expect something different than shown on TV and will the movie success of the picture lead other producers to believe that they can make product for both markets.

Kansas City

Morey R. Goldstein, Allied Artists vice-president and general sales manager, addressing 110 exhibitors and circuit heads representing 240 theatres, said, "I hope that Kansas City will remember 1955 as the year it welcomed two majors into the city, the Athletics and Allied Artists." At the luncheon meeting, Goldstein and Steve Broidy, Allied Artists president, were introduced by Senn Lawler, division manager, Fox Midwest Theatres. Goldstein told the group that because of the success of the saturation booking in this area of "Seven Angry Men," which was dated in 135 theatres, Allied Artists now plans to hold a saturation world premiere of "Wichita," a CinemaScope production, in the Kansas City territory with the kick-off to be in Wichita, Kans.

Federal Judge John Barnes denied "without prejudice" an amicus curiae petition by the American Civil Liberties Union in support of the complaint brought by the IFC Distributors, Inc., against the Chicago Moving Picture Operators Union for its refusal to permit projectionists to show "Salt of the Earth." The court left the way open for further action by the ACLU. The ACLU petition recited, "May a private interest group, which occupies a critical position in relation to the stream of communication, act in a manner which effectively sets that group up as a censorship board for an entire community? Motion pictures are a form of expression which is accorded the same guarantee of freedom as are newspapers. This is a clear ruling of the U. S. Supreme Court. Motion pictures are thus considered to be a part of the free flow of communications in our society. The position occupied by the moving picture operators union in Chicago with respect to the exhibition of motion pictures is a sensitive one, and by historical accident, arising out of the growing complexity of forms of communication, is affected by the public interest. As seen in this case, a decision by the union not to show a particular picture amounts to an absolute exclusion of a picture. This is censorship. The community can be deprived of its right to judge the merits or demerits of any particular film. It has been denied this right in this instant case. We are not concerned with individual action on the part of isolated individuals or isolated groups. We are here concerned with the action of a group which occupies a monopolistic position with respect to the entire stream of one form of communication in a large area, Chicago."

Loew's newest drive-in, Hallandale, Fla., near the Gulf Stream Race Track, is spending much of his time between Boston and the Florida spot. The theatre will hold 700 cars when it is completed.

Herman Mintz, well known theatre attorney, and Mrs. Mintz have sailed for an extensive European trip to be gone until late in June. . . . Al and Irving Cohen, Ritz, Lewiston, Maine, were in the district where they signed a contract with Myer Rottenberg for his modern plaid dinnerware deal.

Theatre Candy Company has taken on the exclusive representation of My Selection Brand Pizza, Paterson, N. J., for distribution in the New England territory. According to Phil Lowe, Theatre Candy, the nine-inch pizza is the hottest food item in the drive-in refreshment stand today and is fast catching on throughout the country. Called the "family-size" pizza, it sells for 60 cents and has proved to be a good profit-margin item for drive-in owners. The New Jersey company supplies the crust and the filling and these ingredients are baked on the premises, thus insuring freshness and proper temperature. Smith Management Company first introduced this large pizza in New England after successfully testing it in their mid-western theatres. Phil Lowe reports that the following drive-ins in New England are now selling this item, Natick, Saugus, Medford, Seekonk, Bellingham and Sturbridge, all in Massachusetts; Plainville, East Windsor, Norwalk, Waterbury, and two theatres in Groton, all in Connecticut; and Johnston, Rhode Island.

For the campaign on "Living Desert," John Berry, manager, Gorman, Framingham, Mass., arranged with the local paper to run a series of six articles for six days plugging the wonders of nature represented in the film. He also had two excellent window displays of stuffed animals and stills and set up a contest among pupils of the high school science class, giving theatre passes as prizes. Over Station WKOX he arranged a series of "Animals I Have Known" contests with six albums of background music as prizes.

An anti-trust suit, claiming $1,500,000 in damages, has been filed in the District Court here by Kelmar Theatre Company, Harold Markell, owner and operator, Eliot, Cambridge, Mass. The plaintiff is claiming restraint of trade, monopoly, conspiracy, and improper runs, clearances and availabilities. The defendants are American Theatres Corporation, New England Theatres, Inc., Loew's Boston Theatres, RKO Theatres, Keith-Massachusetts Corporation, Paramount, Loew's, Inc., 20th-Fox Film Corporation, TCF Film Corporation, Warner Brothers, RKO, United Artists, U-I and Columbia. The suit was filed from the office of George S. Ryan and W. Bradley Ryan.

Lloyd M. Mills, manager, Smith Management Company's Cinema, Framingham, Mass., in the Shoppers World received a certificate of appreciation from the Framingham Artists Guild, presented by Orville Dennison, secretary, Framingham Chamber of Commerce. Mills organized the Artists Guild over a year ago to foster and create an interest in art locally. The Artists Guild is responsible for the weekly art displays in the lounge of the Cinema. While the Cinema does not operate as an art theatre, but rather on a high standard of domestic films, many patrons are drawn each week to the theatre to view the canvasses on exhibition.

When William T. Powell was called to the home office of Smith Management Company from his post as district manager, St. Louis, he was given the title of head of exploitation and advertising for the circuit. A native of Burlington, Vt., Bill has been with the circuit for many years following his service with Paramount-Publix here and Western Massachusetts in Pittsfield. He has placed Wilfred R. Tully at the Natick Drive-in for training under manager James Collins. He reports that Smith Management Company has taken over the management of the Starlight Drive-In, Croton-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., and has placed William Haggett as manager there. Haggett was formerly assistant at Smith's Route 3 Drive-In, Rutherford, N. J. When Powell left St. Louis, his post was given to Sidney Sayetta, who has also been given the Kansas City area district managership. Sayetta was the former manager, Smith's Airway Drive-In, St. Louis. Powell recently became a grandfather for the eighth time when his daughter, Mrs. Wilson Dougherty, gave birth to a son named Daniel Edward Dougherty in Springfield, Mass., where the baby's father is a dentist.

Irving Finn, manager, St. George, Framingham, Mass., staged a street float parade for the campaign on "Long Gray Line," tieing in with the Army. With a lobby display of exceptional attraction, both promotions caused public interest for the picture which helped business at the boxoffice. . . . When James Cagney was in for personal appearances plugging Paramount's "Run For Cover," he told the press that he is leaving shortly for the west coast to make "Lincoln McKeever," to be distributed by United Artists.

House Bill 718, petitioned by Joseph Wisniowski, Chicopee, asking for two operators in a projection booth when a film more than 16 millimeters and more than 10 inches in length is used for the continuous exhibition of motion pictures, has been reported adversely in committee and the House has accepted the committee's report. House Bill 1295 which would legalize March 17 as a state holiday passed the House but has been refused in the Senate for a third reading and is thrown out. A perennial bill, it will undoubtedly be brought up again in the next annual session. Should the bill be passed another year, it would benefit theatres, as holiday prices could be maintained through the day.

Because of the success of the first managerial contest conducted by New England Theatres, Inc., officials of the company have arranged for a second contest to run for 13 weeks. The top winners in the first managerial contest were Joseph Sadur, Olympia, Chelsea; James Davis, Paramount, Lynn; and Lawrence Burke, Capitol, Pittsfield. Cash prizes will again be offered to the winners in this second "Profit and Prestige" contest.

Two models, left, recently distributed tabloid heralds on Columbia's "New Orleans Uncensored," E. M. Loew's, Hartford, Conn., at busy street corners, while George E. Landers, division manager, had several eye-appealing five-foot cutouts of Helene Stanton, featured in the film, placed beside poles as shown on the right.

was an informal reception with Rear Admiral Snackenberg, USN, and Herbert J. Yates, president, Republic, as co-hosts. Arrangements were in the capable hands of Jack Saef, New England Theatres, and Judson Parker, Republic branch manager, with the staff of the public relations department of the Navy. Steve Edwards, director of publicity and exploitation, Republic, represented Yates, who was unable to attend.

Irving Hillman, manager, Roger Sherman, set a coloring contest with the Journal Courier to bally "Revenge of the Creature." . . . A Biddy Loop basketball benefit show was held at the Roger Sherman. . . . Henry Cohan, manager, Dixwell, received a long bit of publicity for "Bad Day at Black Rock" when he had Ernest Borgnine on the marquee of his theatre, playing up the neighborhood angle. Ernie spent many happy days at the Dixwell and his father still lives above five blocks from the theatre. Borgnine's relatives were Cohan's guests at the opening of the film at the Dixwell.

One of the best exploitation setups in the newspapers in months was that set by manager Irving Hillman, Roger Sherman, when a double truck of advertising pages was inserted in the Journal Courier with co-op advertisers and a list of spring hits coming to the Stanley Warner house in the celebration of the 28th anniversary. . . . The second annual Easter Bunny Party at the Paramount was held, featuring a stage show with TV talent, free comic books, prizes, and other angles.

Manager Morris Rosenthal and assistant Don Young, Loew's Poli, were working on angles for bally of "A Man Called Peter." . . . Paramount was the latest theatre to employ an automatic answering service for handling phone calls relative to film program, etc. . . . Harry Fishman, Fishman Theatres, returned from Florida.

With the better weather, progress of the drive-ins which are being constructed will be speeded up. The freak snow storm held up the grading, etc., for a few days, but at the various locations, heavier equipment was being brought in. Screens and projection installations were also being set up in others and by May 1, there should be some opening of the new drive-ins. In Bridgeport, Conn., there is a possibility of a June opening for the Lockwood and Gordon outdoor theatre. Phil Cahill is reported to have started with grading, etc., in Clinton.

Stereophonic sound has been installed at the Poquonock Bridge and Waterford Drive-Ins. . . . Phil Gravitz, MGM branch manager, celebrated his 25th anniversary with the company by having a party for his employees after work. Phil started with the company in New York as office boy at the age of 17 and worked his way up the ladder to head of the local office, where he has been for the last five years. . . . Barney Pitkin, RKO branch manager, returned from Florida. . . . Harry Feinstein, Stanley Warner zone manager, returned from the southlands. . . . George Somma, New Haven branch manager, was to attend the Republic eastern sales meeting at the home office in New York. . . . E. M. Loew's, Hartford, ran a newspaper scrambled name contest to bally "Three for the Show."

MGM home office and field executives initiated the first of a series of promotion meetings with exhibitor groups to discuss publicity, advertising, and exploitation plans for "The Prodigal." MGM is encouraging exhibitor discussions in an endeavor to get advanced campaigns underway well ahead of opening dates. A campaign of extensive activity on local and national levels was detailed at a meeting called by Harry Shaw, division manager, Loew Poli Circuit, with Lou Brown, advertising and publicity manager, and area theatre managers attending. Oscar Doob, special MGM home office representative, and Arthur Canton, eastern press division head, spoke to the theatre men and explained what the company had in mind for the full realization of the potentialities in "The Prodigal."

Hartford

Drive-ins continue to hold the trade spotlight. One of Connecticut's most ambitious outdoor projects, a twin drive-in and shopping center, with cost estimated at over $500,000, was disclosed last week by Bob Schwartz and Mrs. Florence Musman, who operate the Lake Drive-In and Ville, Waterbury; Park, Thomaston; and Center Drive-In, Derby. The two executives announced plans to start construction of the theatre-shopping center venture in the summer of 1956, following completion of a nearby expressway. The 45-acre site was purchased from the Scovill Manufacturing Company, Waterbury, for a reported $60,000. Space for about 10 stores, including a giant supermarket and clothing shops, will be available for lease, according to Mrs. Musman.

Sperie Perakos, general manager, Perakos Theatre Associates, New Britain, Conn., is hoping for an early May opening of the company's second drive-in, the $200,000, 800-car capacity Southington Drive-In, being built by Ames Construction Company on a site approximately 14 miles south of here. . . . Tony Scavatto, manager, East Hartford Family Drive-In, South Windsor, Conn., has returned from an Arizona vacation. . . . The Bristol, Bristol, Conn., has followed the move by two other Jason Theatrical Enterprises' houses, the Gem, Willimantic, and Palace, Torrington, in resuming weekday matinees starting at 1:30. All three situations are first-run. . . . The Hamilton, Waterbury, Conn., has a new glassware giveaway.

For Filmakers' "Crashout," Ray McNamara, Allyn, distributed 10,000 heralds, and used a false front. Window displays were set up in several nearby empty store windows.

First double CinemaScope bill to play an area drive-in was booked into the Pike Drive-In by Paul W. Amadeo, general manager, Turnpike Theatre Corporation. The theatre played "Track of the Cat" and "Sitting Bull," with Amadeo advertising, "See 'em on the Pike's Giant Screen—See the Difference!"

Waterbury

Robert Schwartz and associates last week announced the purchase of 45 acres of land for the construction of a twin drive-in theatre and a shopping center. The twin drive-in will have a capacity of 1,000 cars on one side of the screen and 800 on the other. Schwartz, who operates four theatres in the area, will operate the drive-in and rent out the stores in the center.

Avery Lamphier announced last week the abandonment of plans to continue construction of a drive-in theatre on the Litchfield Road, "because of so much public unrest and to avoid another battle." A recent appeal of an injunction against the theatre was given an unfavorable decision by the Supreme Court of Errors. Meanwhile, police announced the receipt of a petition protesting the application of Fred Quartrane to build a drive-in on the north side of Frost Bridge Road. Reason given for the protest was the traffic situation that would be caused on Frost Bridge Road.

Roy Taylor, who has been in the United States eight weeks, was in recently meeting members of the press and appearing on radio and television. Taylor was in town in connection with the showing of "Long John Silver."

The Navy staged a balloon drop over Portland as a promotion scheme with the showing of "The Bridges At Toko-Ri" at the State. In 50 of the 1,000 balloons were free tickets to the film and one held a $25 U. S. Defense Savings Bond. The Navy sent a helicopter over the city 30 minutes before the arrival of the balloon plane. Manager Ralph Tully presented a special edition of the novel to the commanding captain. A special lobby display of Navy equipment added to the promotion scheme.

After a lengthy legislative discussion, a bill authorizing firemen, assigned to motion picture theatres and other places of amusement, to exercise full police powers, was passed by both houses of the Rhode Island assembly and signed by Governor Dennis J. Roberts. The enactment now provides that firemen have the same privileges in quelling disturbances and making arrests as policemen, thus affording places of entertainment double protection at all times. . . . In its efforts to place the Metropolitan in the forefront of local downtown houses, the management recently made arrangements with a nearby parking lot to handle cars of their patrons for a 10 cent fee. This is by far the lowest rate available in the downtown area and is drawing increasing numbers of patrons to the Met.

E. M. Loew's Drive-In, Providence-Pawtucket city-line, was the last of the local or surrounding open-airers to inaugurate the 1955 season. . . . The RKO Albee recently came up with a bargain Saturday night show. Dave Levin presented a special midnight Science-Fiction Shock Show in addition to the regular-programmed "Underwater." Patrons who attended the late Saturday night performance were invited to stay and see "It Came From Outer Space" and "Invaders from Mars" at no extra charge.

The Westminster Playhouse was the site of the state premiere of "Beauties of the Night." . . . In response to requests from patrons, the Avon Cinema, which specializes in presenting attractions which receive the most votes from their followers, brought back Greta Garbo in "Camille."

Court Considers New Tax Question

ALBANY — The Court of Appeals, which received a supplemental brief filed by New York City and which expected another from metropolitan exhibitors covering the effect of the recently-enacted "legislative intent" bill was to announce a decision around April 11. The exhibitors were given additional time in which to record an answering brief concerning breakage collection of the amusement tax.

The city's document, prepared by corporation counsel Peter Campbell Brown, after discussing the "legislative intent" and retroactive features of the measure, declared that "Retroactive curative legislation is valid so long as it does not violate constitutional rights. The conclusions reached with respect to curative legislation generally apply also to curative tax legislation.

"Retroactive tax legislation is valid unless it reaches so far into the past as to constitute a deprivation of property without due process of law.

"The plaintiffs may argue," stated the brief, "that distinctions may be drawn because the tax we are here dealing with involves the collection of the tax by theatres from patrons. Such distinction might have merit if the plaintiffs had not collected the tax from their patrons. In fact, however, the plaintiffs have collected the tax from patrons in accordance with the local tax law. They were required to do this by every court order issued in this case except that of the Appellate Division, and the Apellate Division refused to grant the plaintiffs the injunctive relief which they sought. Thus the plaintiffs do not have the slightest basis for claiming deprivation of property without due process of law. All they were required to do is to pay over tax moneys which they have already actually collected from their patrons."

Finally, the brief asserted that "the enactment of the amendment and the arguments advanced in this brief obviously are not to be deemed as an admission that in the absence of the amendment, the local tax law or its 'breakage' provision would be invalid. The amendment to the enabling act was sought by New York City and other municipal corporations to insure against any possibility that their fiscal condition would be upset by an adverse decision. Its enactment, however, does not indicate any recognition of the law of power to do what has been done in the past with regard to fractions of a cent. It is our view that this court may reverse on the basis of the arguments originally advanced or on the basis of the new amendment or both."

Attorneys are Adler and Schwartz. . . . The Monroe Stories, Inc., has been authorized to carry on a motion picture and television business in New York. Capital stock is 200 shares, no par value. Attorneys are Goldstein, Golenbock, and Barell.

A spring snowstorm that equaled any of the past winter, with a fall as high as 20 inches and drifts piling 15 feet, blocked city streets and country highways in many parts of western and central New York and affected theatre business. At least one area drive-in, Harry Lamont's Riverview, Rotterdam, N. Y., was so hard hit that it suspended operations until the following weekend. Lamont not only placed Riverview Drive-In on weekend operation, but also delayed for at least a week opening Sunset Drive-In, Kingston.

The Senate defeated, before adjourning, the Noonan motion picture license charges bill, which the Assembly had unanimously approved March 17. Vote in the Upper House was 34-16, party lines being split. Senator Greenberg asserted that enactment would cost the state an estimated $262,000 in revenue. Senator O'Connor conceded the bill would decrease the amount, but declared there would still be "100 per cent" profit on the operation of licensing by State Education Department's motion picture division. He pointed out that, in establishing film censorship in 1922, the intent was to make the administering agency self sustaining, not profit-producing. Senators Greenberg and Moritt criticized the cloudy language of the act. They believed it would substantially increase revenue, whereas it sharply decreased it by a change of the basis on which print fees were levied. Senator Greenberg intimated that the bill's genesis was in Hollywood, where the major producers would be the principal beneficiaries. Putting "duty to the state and the public above personal interest," Senator Morritt voted against the measure, despite the fact its enactment would save several thousand dollars to a film company of which he is counsel.

Buffalo

Jack Mundstuk, manager, MGM exchange, has received acceptances from a number of executives of the Premiere Operating Corporation, which owns a circuit of theatres across the border in Canada, signifying that they intend to be in for the big MGM Ticket Selling Workshop on April 18 in the Hotel Statler. In the Premiere delegation will be D. Exler, circuit supervisor; A. Davidson, publicity department; D. Kinlock, Hollywood, Toronto; M. Bloom, Capitol, New Toronto; L. Allen, Willow, Willowdale; S. Burton, Strand, Port Colborne; S. Smart, Capitol, Port Hope; E. Pooley, Park, Cobourg; and G. Fluker, Capitol, Paris.

William Graham, for several years office manager, 20th-Fox exchange, has taken on a similar post in the Boston office of the same company. In addition to office work, Graham had also been covering the Syracuse district as a salesman. That area now will be covered by William Gehring, Jr., son of William C. Gehring, executive assistant general sales manager in the home office, who, by the way, at one time was a salesman in the local exchange.

20th-Fox is losing a good assistant shipper, but the Yankees baseball outfit may be getting a future star player. He is Arthur Buczkowski, who is resigning his post and is going to the Yanks camp in Hattisburg, Miss., to start training with other rookies. Art is 18 years old and is a catcher. . . . Harold Hughes, who has been associated with several distributing offices in past years, and who more recently has been booking and buying for the Silver Lake Drive-In, Perry, N. Y., has been named manager, Colonial, a community house in the Gammel Circuit.

Rochester's Bausch and Lomb Optical Company won a special Academy Award for developing the lenses which made CinemaScope possible, as well as other scientific contributions. Carl S. Hallauer, B and L president, in Hollywood for the occasion, accepted the award. It was the second time in three years that technical contributions of a Rochester firm won an Academy Award. The Eastman Kodak company was the recipient in 1953 for advances in color film.

The Buffalo Variety Club's testimonial dinner in honor of Dave Miller, who has retired after being prominently identified with the distribution end of the industry for some 35 years, will be staged April 18 in the Empire Room of the Statler. Myron Gross, Co-Operative Theatres, and William Dipson, Dipson Theatres, have been named co-chairmen. The following have been appointed vice-chairmen, Ed DeBarry, manager, Paramount exchange; George H. Mackenna, Basil's Lafayette; Murray Whiteman, past chief barker; Arthur Krolick, UPT district manager, and Bert Ryde, business agent, projectionists union.

Mrs. Lydia Behling and husband, Albert C., who operate the Ellen Terry, are celebrating the beginning of their 45th year in Buffalo motion picture exhibition. They took over the Ellen Terry 28 years ago. On Sunday mornings, the Ellen Terry is a church, for masses for Coronation of the Blessed Virgin parish.

Mayor Steven Pankow has appointed Stanley Kozanowski, manager, Rivoli, as chairman of the city's Motion Picture Operators' Examining Board. Others named are Acting Fire Commissioner William M. Daly; Vincent R. McFaul, general manager, Shea Circuit, Buffalo and Niagara Falls; Joseph Warda, manager, Lancaster, Lancaster, N. Y.; Raymond J. Fahey, Seneca projectionist; Florian J. Jerozal; Elmer C. Winegar; Max Rosing, Roosevelt; and George H. Meckenna, manager, Basil's Lafayette. There are 163 licensed operators in Buffalo. New applicants who qualify pay $5 for the first year and $2 annually thereafter for renewals. The license is good anywhere in the state. Deadline for filing applications is May 10. The applications may be obtained in the license directors office in City Hall.

Manager Ed Miller is about to present another one night stage show at the Buffalo Paramount. On April 30, there will be two reserved-seat performances put on by a group of popular stars, including Nat "King" Cole, The Drifters, LaVern Baker, Leo DeLyon and Erskine Hawkins and his orchestra. . . . Jack Mundstuk, MGM Buffalo branch manager, attended a meeting of branch and district managers of the eastern territory under John P. Byrne's supervision in the Astor Hotel, New York.

Jack Chinell, manager, RKO branch, was in New York for a sales meeting in the Warwick Hotel, with Walter Branson, RKO world-wide sales manager, presiding. . . . The CARE-ANTA Benefit Album, presented in a closed-circuit telecast in the Center, was poorly patronized. The telecast was locally sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and a local CARE committee, which organizations leased the theatre for the occasion. The reserved seat ticket sale, with prices running up to $7, was a small one. Said Ardis Smith in The Buffalo Evening News, "There were more folks involved in proceedings on the big screen than looked and listened here."

Richard T. Kemper, zone manager, Dipson Theatres, was resplendent in his all white Buffalo Bill costume at the annual Spring Saints and Sinners joyfest in the Buffalo Statler. . . . Sidney S. Kulick, Bell Film Exchange, New York, was in setting up dates on "Four Ways Out" and "Princess Cinderella." While in town, Sid visited with Arthur Krolick, UPT district manager, and Myron Gross, Buffalo Co-Operative Theatres.

Ralph Iannuzzi, eastern district manager, Warners, was in the other day for conferences with branch manager Nat Marcus and visits with managers. By the way, Nat's son, William, who was making a name for himself as a reporter on The Buffalo Courier-Express before he went into the service, was expected home for the Easter holidays.

NEWS OF THE Territory

Philadelphia

Crosstown

Bill Kanefsky, manager, Studio, adds a personal touch for his foreign film patrons. When a new foreign language film is shown at the theatre he learns how to greet the natives in their mother tongues. He has already mastered German, Russian, Swedish, Italian, Hebrew and French. When it came to the current prize-winning Japanese film, "Gate of Hell" it became a problem. He found out there was no phrase for a general greeting, it all depended on the time of the day. So, if a Japanese enters the theatre in the morning he will be greeted by Bill with "Ohio!" In the afternoon it's "Kon nichi wa!" and for the evening patrons Bill booms forth with a genial "Kom ban wa!"

Charles Beilan, branch manager, Warners, reports that results in the recent Brotherhood Week drive were disappointing due to the fact that all the various charity drives came at practically the same time. Stanley Warner Theatres collected $1,182.36, with the total so far for all theatres $1,813.88.

It was happy birthday for James P. Clark, head, Highway Express, and assistant to Democratic City Chairman William Green, and the event was celebrated with a party at his New Hope, Pa., home.

Charlen Zagrans, RKO branch manager, attended a company sales meeting at the Hotel Warwick, New York City.

UA publicist Max Miller is on a diet and hopes to work off even more poundage while in Washington, D. C., working on "Marty" and "The Purple Plain."

Irving Blumberg, now Warner publicist here and in Washington, D. C., was getting acclimated with his new post. George Fishman remains as Washington, D. C., public relations contact.

The trade was saddened by the death of Benjamin F. Seligman, former manager and secretary-treasurer, Strand Theatre Corporation, which operated the Strand here for many years. He was 61 years old. Born in Philadelphia, Seligman had been in the entertainment business since his youth as a manager of vaudeville and motion picture houses. He managed theatres in a number of large cities in the east, including the old Victoria, Philadelphia, before moving to Wilmington where he was manager, Strand, for 31 years, most of which was in partnership with the late D. L. Topkis. Following the latter's death, he continued in the triple capacity of secretary-treasurer-manager until July, 1950. At that time, Seligman abandoned his connection with the Strand which was taken over for a time by Benjamin Shindler, owner-operator, Ace, but in January, 1951, the Strand closed its doors as a motion picture theatre. Seligman was a 32nd degree Mason. Surviving are a daughter, four brothers, seven nephews, a niece, and one granddaughter. Funeral services and interment were private following a viewing at the McCrery Funeral Home, Wilmington.

A new ruling exempting newsreels from censorship has been passed by the State Legislature and signed by Governor Theodore McKeldin. As a result, movie-goers will now see uncensored newsreels. The same bill calls for continuance of censoring for feature films, cartoons, and comedies, but the new regulations are more in line with recent rulings by the Supreme Court, limiting the area in which censors can snip scenes from films. In other words, the banning by Maryland's State Board of Motion Picture Censors is now limited to "obscenity, debasing morals, or inciting to crime." The law now also permits an appeal to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The Theatrical Stage Employees Union, Local 19, suffered the loss of its business manager when George M. Weisman died suddenly. He was stricken while downtown shopping. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mabel Weisman. Weisman was connected with the Stanley stage crew at the time of his death. . . . H. Paul Rome, president, Rome Theatres, was married to Frances Grovner, Washington. The couple spent a short honeymoon in New York.

Claude Land, manager, Silver, Silver Springs, Md., is a patient for surgery at Brady Institute in Johns Hopkins Hospital. . . . George S. — MAN WITH HIS HAT IN HIS HAND (THE EXHIBITOR'S TRANSLATION)

YOU Can't Afford Not To Have Your...
BUYING and BOOKING

Gentlemen:

In reply to your editorial, A MAN WITH HIS HAT IN HIS HAND, you have hit the nail on the head; but the trouble with this business can be cured with a few more old sayings. For instance, Shakespeare said, "The plays the thing" and he was right. After a wide-screen and CinemaScope installation I find that the play is still the thing that brings them in. Also, Teddy Roosevelt said, "Speak softly but carry a big stick." After trying to buy film, play on availability, and get adjustments on poor grosses for five years, I find that I am trying to fight a tiger with a buying power equal to a match stick. As of today I am going to join a booking outfit that has a big buying power. I want to join the one with the biggest stick so that when they just tap a distributor, they will raise a bump maybe a foot high. As a small grass roots exhibitor, I find that the film agents can not help much, so it goes up the line to main office. The main office sets the scales and make the decisions that affect us. I say let the buying be done in the main office by a representative for the exhibitors, or, as this would be very impractical, two or three big combines of booking bureaus. If we little fellows don't get together, we are going to be taking a licking from now on. My advice is join the biggest stick as soon as possible.

A new drive-in will open the latter part of this month on the Oldtown Road next to the historic site of the Jane Frazier home of pre-Revolutionary War days. To be known as the Starlight Drive-In, it will be operated by Edgar Duke Growden, Harold S. Hyde, and their wives. The new enterprise is incorporated as the Hy-Grow Theatre Corporation. Hyde will be president; Mrs. Thelma A. Growden, vice-president; Edgar D. Growden, treasurer and general manager; and Mrs. Hyde, secretary. Growden said the outdoor theatre will have a screen 40 by 80 feet. An RCA high fidelity sound system will be part of the equipment going into the projection booth, while the individual in-car speakers will be plastic construction outside. A 10 year lease on a tract of fifty acres has been obtained from the owner of the property. The Starlight will have space for 400 cars to begin with but can easily be expanded to accommodate 1,000 cars. Instead of any fencing around the operation, trees will be planted to enclose the field. There will be two lanes both for entrance and exit.

This truck-borne ballyhoo stunt was recently employed by the New, Baltimore, Md., for Columbia's "Women's Prison" and attracted plenty of attention.

Leonardtown

The Park, Lexington Park, Md., had a special kiddies matinee featuring a "Festival of Walt Disney Cartoons" on Good Friday when the children had a school holiday. . . . The 235 Drive-In, California, Md., opened for the season. The spot is now equipped for CinemaScope showings. . . . Excitement was caused by a chimney fire at the home of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR correspondent George Morgan Knight and his mother, but firemen extinguished it before much damage was caused.

Pennsylvania

Coatesville

W. B. Huffman, manager, Y.M.C.A., along with Amy N. Huffman, R.N., are now operating the Huffman Nursing and Convalescent Home at Whitford, Pa.

Freeland

Irving Refowich, Refowich, has taken over the Hazleton Drive-In, Drums, Pa., from C. Rossie, Jr. The 400-car spot has been set for CinemaScope with a screen 100 feet by 40 feet and opened this week-end.

Reading

Paul E. Glase, manager, Embassy and other Fabian interests here, compiler of the "Lest We Forget" necrology record appearing under his name for many years, issued his 17th edition. It covers two years this time, 1953 and 1954. Copies of the 24-page booklet go not only to every state in the union, picture studios, and libraries, newspapers and public officials, but also to friends of Glase in Japan, England, Greece, India, and several other countries. More than 200 biographies of greats in the picture, stage, radio, and television world were condensed for the current issue.

The Rajah, as has been the case now and then in previous years, is again a church. The Seventh Day Adventists have rented the big house for special services, free admission, by a visiting evangelist.

As in other pre-Easter seasons, the Cecil B. deMille picture, "King of Kings," is again being shown free to Lenten crowds in this city. It used to be screened in the Rajah. Now the showings are in the Astor and Strand, mornings only. An offering is taken but admission is free. The Reading Council of Churches is sponsor. . . . Theatre managers are interested in the outcome of "Bingo" game legalizing bills in the Pennsylvania Legislature.

A great many observers see what looks like a split in the church leaders' ranks in this locality over the issue of "Bingo" legalizers. Most of these leaders were so pronounced in opposition to legalizing of horse race betting that they bitterly opposed giving the voters even the privilege of voting for or against the proposal. Now, although "Bingo" is definitely gambling, the church groups are headed two ways, one group seeing it only as a "harmless" amusement, even if illegal, and the other lukewarmly urging a ban on the "Bingo" game.

Francis Hock, veteran doorman, Warner, suffered a head injury when he fell on the sidewalk in front of the theatre. He was admitted to St. Joseph's Hospital. . . . Preparations are underway for early reopening of the Mount Penn Drive-In, east of this city. The Reading Drive-In is already in operation.

Scranton

Manager Bill Kays, Capitol, in his current showing of "Romeo and Juliet," has received full interest and cooperation of all the school officials of the area. A meeting of the principals of county schools and the county superintendant of schools, Robert Minnier, was held in the Chamber of Commerce at which time special student tickets were distributed for each school. A special screening of the film was held at the Orient for school attaches of both county and city parochial and public schools.

West Virginia

Keyser

Mr. and Mrs. John W. H. Buchanan have returned from the British West Indies where they spent a few days vacationing. Mrs. Buchanan is the owner and operator, Carskadon Theatres' Keysey and Music Hall. Work has finally been completed on the stage settings at the Music Hall. A lovely atmosphere awaits their patrons with soft red lighting against a burgundy velvet curtain. Either side of the stage is enhanced with bright gold standards. Alston E. Hunt, manager, and John C. Stewart, with assistance from projectionist John Wilson, take full credits for this improvement.

Variety Club

Tent 13, Philadelphia

A membership meeting is scheduled for April 19. Dinner will be "on the house" and will be served in the Burgundy Room of the Bellevue Stratford Hotel. Howard Klein, famous hypnotist, will be an added feature and furnish a demonstration of his art. "Johnny Night," set for June 1, will be discussed at the dinner.

"The Good Die Young" was screened through the courtesy of United Artists.

"Fight Nights" on the large TV screen with beer and pretzels "on the house" every Wednesday are proving very popular.

Man-to-man talk about "That LADY"

SOON you will share the intimate, scandalous details of history's most notorious mistress of palaces, whose boudoir was a salon, whose secret love affairs were the target of mobs. The most provocative story in years... the picture that shocked a nation. No wonder it was acclaimed as an international best-seller and then as a tremendous Broadway success in which Katharine Cornell chose to star. Now it comes to you in all its grandeur and passion. Photographed on location amidst the breath-taking vistas of Spain in the full majesty of CinemaScope and Color by DE LUXE.

TOA CALLS TO ACTION

IN WORDS MORE REMINISCENT of the fire and whip of Abe Myers than of the admittedly "peace-loving people" of the TOA, president E. D. Martin blasted forth in a bulletin dated April 8 that placed the TOA squarely beside Allied States in relation to "the devastating and precarious position of exhibitors, large and small," and to "distribution's apparent indifference."

Summarizing the various proposals and promises that have been made for the remedying of conditions and for the holding of an "all industry conference to consider and to discuss industry grievances." Martin states that the TOA "can no longer hold the position that the completion of an arbitration system must precede the industry conference. It is now untenable. The crucial times and the crying need for relief dictate that the industry conference be held immediately, and that a constructive program of relief result from it.

"We hasten to state that no part of our present statement should be taken to mean that our interest in an industry system of arbitration is any the less keen. But first things come first! What is needed now, more than anything else, is immediate and substantial relief from the inequitable conditions of licensing, and from the outrageous and prohibitive rentals being demanded by distributors. Not only have these conditions and terms made it difficult for exhibitors to make a reasonable return on their investments, but they have prevented the accumulation of exhibitor capital reserves so that newer and improved theatres might result.

"It is not possible to think of an industry, other than the motion picture industry, wherein the source of supply displays such indifference and such callousness toward its customers!"

To properly evaluate these statements it must be remembered that not only is Martin the president of the more conservative of the two national theatre owner organizations, but he is also one of the virile and progressive younger men who will conceivably be responsible for this industry's future. Born and raised in movie theatres, loving the movie industry as the one best, and now heading his family's important Martin Circuit of the mid-south, his views can not be considered screwball or those of a professional agitator.

We believe in his honesty of purpose, in his sincerity, and in the judgment back of his final admonition: "The time for calling the all industry conference is now!"

In this day of film shortages, high percentage demands, and competitive bidding, we want to back it by repeating it. "The time for calling the all industry conference is now!"

A NOD TO MR. YATES

TO KEEP THE RECORD STRAIGHT, and to be completely fair to Herbert J. Yates, president of Republic Pictures, following our editorial, "SOUNDPROOFING NEEDED" (April 13), we are giving similar prominence and attention to his statement, received April 12, but too late to affect our earlier comment.

Referring to the data published in great detail by The New York Times and elsewhere on April 6 Yates stated:

"Republic's production policy has been grossly misstated and was not authorized by me or Republic's Board of Directors.

"Our production policy remains unchanged. In fact, we plan to complete and deliver to exhibitors during the first six months of 1955, 14 deluxe pictures and 6 special pictures, a total of 20 pictures, which exceeds the entire number of pictures produced during 1954, and our branch managers were so informed on March 22 in Chicago. Our studio in Hollywood is already planning production for the second six months of 1955.

"Further information regarding titles, casts, release dates, etc., will be promptly furnished you by our branch managers."

We think it is safe to assure Mr. Yates that if his pictures during the coming season have the entertainment values of cast, story, direction, and locale that the public wants, there never has been a better market or a bigger potential gross. And theatremen, faced with a product shortage, will do their level best to encourage all worthwhile production effort.

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

WHEN DARRYL ZANUCK, production head at 20th-Fox, returned recently from Europe, a press confab was in order and the following are some of his observations with much of top news being covered at press time in the last issue.

KONECOFF

CinemaScope installations are proceeding at the rate of 200 weekly. . . . It is just as successful in non-TV areas as in those having TV competition. . . . Startling new developments have been promised in CinemaScope with a demonstration reel for exhibs to be ready by summer-time. Sound as well as screen image will be involved but no alterations in the booth are anticipated. . . . New lenses will be made available to all producers. . . . European producers, once they tried the medium, like it and schedule more and more of their productions in it. . . . Local production there is being encouraged wherever possible. . . . He is violently against CinemaScope features in black-and-white saying practically any subject can be made using color.

Accent on future company productions will continue to be on pre-sold subjects such as hit books, plays, and timely subjects. . . . Audiences are more interested in subject matter than in name casts. . . . More early investing will be handled by the company in plays and books prior to public presentation. . . . Picture schedules will not be held up so that name players can be used but rather the best in casting will be utilized talent-wise. . . . If Marilyn Monroe returns, she may be starred in "Bus Stop," but if she sits out the three years remaining in her contract, she may be sued for damages, he opined.

With regards to shows produced by the studio for TV and sponsors, these will

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

"Slipper" Still Fits Boxoffice

NEW YORK—Without a single new attraction, most of the Broadway first runs were holding their own over the weekend, with several houses, including Radio City Music Hall and Loew's State, doing outstanding business.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Battle Cry" (Warners). Paramount claimed the 11th week would hit $26,000.

"A Man Called Peter" (20th-Fox). Roxy did $25,286 on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the third week expected to tally $42,000.

"The Glass Slipper" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, garnered $121,600 from Thursday through Sunday, with the fourth week sure of $175,000.

"Mambo" (Paramount). Criterion reported $17,000 for the third week.

"The Wayward Wife" (IFE). Globe claimed $13,000 for the second week.

"Long John Silver" (DCA). Mayfair was down to $10,000 on the second week.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor continued good with $38,000 anticipated for the sixth week.

"Man Without A Star" (U-I). Victoria dropped to $14,000 on the fourth week.

"The Purple Plain" (UA). Capitol was down to $39,000 on the second session.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). State reported a very good $41,000 for the fifth week.

20th-Fox, CBS Set Series

NEW YORK—A far-reaching agreement was concluded last week by 20th-Fox with the Columbia Broadcasting System, whereby the film company will produce a series of 39 television-motion picture films based on the classic "My Friend Flicka" stories. The agreement was reached between Spyros P. Skouras, president, Fox, and William S. Paley, chairman of the board, CBS, with Thomas G. Rockwell, president, General Artists Corporation, negotiating the deal.

The half-hour films will be produced by the new TCF Productions organization in black and white and color at the company's Western Avenue studios. The TCF unit is a subsidiary of the 20th-Fox studios headed by Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, and is supervised directly by Sid Rogell, Zanuck's executive production manager.

In every program of the series, 20th-Fox will provide added attraction by devoting some segment of the show to new and unusual highlights of forthcoming films being made for the nation's theatres. The incorporation of advanced scenes, star appearances, and clips pointing up the unique locales of many CinemaScope productions, will provide exhibitors with potent trailers.

The large-scale utilization of the television medium to promote theatre exhition of motion pictures is expected to bring about a greater liaison between theatremen and station operators.

TOA Asks Immediate Industry Talk

Rhoden Heads Poll Campaign For COMPO

NEW YORK—Elmer C. Rhoden, president, National Theatres, has consented to act as national chairman of the nation-wide public poll which is to be conducted later this year by COMPO to register the people's choice of the year's best picture, best performances, and most promising young players.

Announcement of Rhoden's acceptance of the post was made last week by the COMPO governing committee consisting of Sam Pinanski, Wilbur Snaper, and Al Lichtman.

Rhoden says he has been given assurances by the heads of the leading national circuits that their theatres will participate in the voting, which will begin Thanksgiving Day and end the night of Dec. 7.

Rhoden said, "This audience award will have other benefits. Unlike the Academy Awards, which express the choice of Hollywood's professional people, these audience awards will give the whole American people an opportunity to express their preferences in entertainment. As a guide to the future, this obviously should be helpful to our producers in planning their productions. The audience awards, moreover, will bring into focus the superior qualities of a number of pictures. This will increase their boxoffice value and make it possible to re-release them during the pre-Christmas period when few if any new pictures are usually available. This should be of value both to theatres and distributors.

The Audience Poll Planning Committee is composed of Mrs. Alice N. Gorham, United Detroit Theatres, chairman; Ralph W. Russell, Palace, Canton, O.; Emil Bernstecker, Wilby-Kincey Theatres, Atlanta; Paul Levi, American Theatres Corporation, Boston; Senn Lawler, Fox Midwest Theatres, Kansas City; Roy E. Kalver, Adams, Decatur, Ind., president, Allied Theatres of Indiana; William A. Carroll, Indianapolis, alternate for Kalver; Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., and Paul Lyday, a member of Ricketson's staff in Fox Inter-Mountain Theatres, Denver.

Hayworth, Columbia Split

NEW YORK—Rita Hayworth has been suspended by Columbia Pictures for failing to report for work on a new picture and beginning legal action to terminate her contract.

Bartley C. Crum, counsel for Hayworth, said that she had made it clear to the company when she signed the contract that she wished to finish work on "Joseph And His Brethren" by June 25, so that she might take her daughter Yasmin to visit her father and grandfather, Prince Aly Khan and the Aga Khan.

Meanwhile, Columbia is said to have served notice that Hayworth cannot work for United Artists until she completes her contract with Columbia.

Last week Hayworth filed suit in Federal Court, asking that the contract be terminated. She asked also for $75,000 as half of the salary due to her.

Dembow Elected NSS President; Robbins Stays As Board Head

NEW YORK—Herman Robbins, president and chairman of the board of directors, National Screen Service Corporation, recommended last week at a special meeting of the board that the two positions be separated into two distinct offices, a chairman of the board and a president, the chairman to be the chief executive officer, and the president to be the chief operating officer.

Robbins, who held the two posts for 25 annual successive elections, had his suggestion praised by the board, and in line with NSS policy of promotion from within the ranks, George F. Dembrow was elected president, with Robbins remaining as chairman of the board. Burton E. Robbins was promoted and elected by the board to succeed Dembow as vice-presdent in charge of sales. He is the son of Robbins.

286 Drive-Ins Charted

NEW YORK—The latitude and longitude of 286 drive-ins have been added to aeronautical charts as prominent landmarks, it was announced last week by Theatre Owners of America.

TOA had been requested last year by the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association to help secure the exact position of the open-airers as aids to flyers at night. The drive-ins are in 36 states.

FCC Examiner Favors Exhibitor

WASHINGTON—A Federal Communications Commission examiner last week recommended that Columbia Amusement Company, Inc., be given a channel six television station at Paducah, Kentucky. Although the examiner favored Columbia over a competing applicant, Paducah Newspapers, Inc., the latter firm can appeal his decision to the full FCC.

Exhibs Reverse Stand, Join Allied In Request That Roundtable Talks Precede Stymied Arbitration Task

NEW YORK—Theatre Owners of America last week suddenly reversed its stand that the arbitration question should be settled before the calling of an all-industry conference and lined up with National Allied in demanding a conference now.

The statement said their former position was now "untenable" in view of the "intention of distribution to keep the scope of arbitration and the avenues of relief as narrow as possible." Although the report stated that TOA would remain keenly interested in an industry system of arbitration, it continued, "What is needed now, more than anything else, is immediate and substantial relief from the inequitable conditions of licensing and from the outrageous and prohibitive rentals being demanded by distributors."

TOA claimed that exhibitors were "lulled into complacency" by distribution statements such as those by Al Lichtman at the 1954 TOA convention when he said, "We should and must work together cooperatively and honestly and we should not seek to profit at each other's expense. Our profits should only be earned jointly from the public." The exhibitor organization also claimed that the decision to go along with distribution and settle arbitration before the all industry conference, was based on several statements by Lichtman to the effect that only one point of conflict remained to be settled in the arbitration scheme, and that that point could be quickly cleared up.

"We have learned that what Lichtman said was not so," continued the statement. "Much more than one point separated the thinking of exhibition and distribution. The road leading to completion is far and long, and due to no fault of exhibition."

The statement claimed that distribution, by refusing to listen to the justifiable complaints of exhibitors, has refused to go along with the philosophy that this is an interdependent industry. It calls on distribution to choose the road, saying that one leads to "peace, harmony, and the greatest good for the greatest number; along the other lies strife, jungle warfare, and chaos."

Screen, TV Writers Meet

HOLLYWOOD—Motion picture and television writers last week opened their first national convention here in an effort to correlate the activities of Writers Guild of America, west and east, so that the two units will take the same stand on all issues.

Items on the agenda of the three-day conference include the election of a national chairman for a two year term, who will act as liaison between the two coasts, signing an affiliation agreement between the two organizations, agreement on joint corporate procedures, etc. Paul Franklin acts as chairman.

Kansas Abolishes Film Censorship; First To Come Becomes First To Go

TOPEKA, KANS.—A bill abolishing the 42-year-old Kansas censor board was signed last week by Governor Fred Hall. It will become effective July 1.

The bill, rushed through the state legislature at the last minute and requiring the clock stopping device to give the governor time to sign it, makes Kansas, the first state to set up a censor board, the first state to repeal it. Hope was expressed by many industryites, including Eric Johnston, president, MPAA, that the Kansas action would be followed by the other five states having censor boards, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and Ohio.

It is especially hoped that Ohio, whose legislature is now considering legislation to make new censor laws to replace those lately declared unconstitutional, will take the hint.

The Kansas censor laws were also recently declared in violation of the state constitution, although a final decision of the State Supreme Court handed down shortly after the passage of the bill, reversed the lower court decision.

The Kansas board was established in 1913. Abolishing the board will save the industry about $60,000 annually in inspection and license fees, which averaged about $1 per reel, one of the most reasonable of the state censor board fees.

The case involving the constitutionality of Kansas's censor law was started by Holmby, Inc., and United Artists over "The Moon Is Blue." The Supreme Court's decision in favor of the censor board will have the effect of banning the showing of the film until July 1.

COMPO Cites TV Claim

NEW YORK—A TV claim that "television has substantially reduced the time the average family devotes to its newspapers" was cited last week by COMPO as one of the reasons why newspapers should be influencing people to go out of their homes to increase the effectiveness of their retail advertising, in the 41st of the series of COMPO ads in Editor and Publisher.

"In any effort to increase the effectiveness of its retail advertising," the ad says, "a newspaper should have a bright, exciting entertainment page that gives more news about the movies and the attractions at local theatres. This can be an important means of bringing people out of their homes."

"Blackboard" Tagged "Adult"

MEMPHIS — "Blackboard Jungle" will open here on April 22 "For adults only," in violation of a ban by the Memphis and Shelby County Board of Censors, but with the approval of the mayor.

The censor board has no power under the present laws to classify pictures as "for adults only," so the management of Loew's State, which is planning to screen the film under orders from the home office, will be technically liable to arrest if the board does not remove the ban by that time.

ABC, Warners Finalize Agreement On TV Plans

NEW YORK—Warners and American Broadcasting Company last week announced that negotiations for a television-motion picture series were climaxed by the signing of a long term contract between the two companies.

The contract calls for the Warner studios to prepare a series of 39 full hour features, titled "Warner Brothers Presents," each of which is to be based on one of three pictures, "Casablanca," "King's Row," and "Cheyenne." These weekly programs will be completely self-contained stories, and at least six minutes of each program will be devoted to taking the viewers on location, either behind the scenes or on actual outdoor location of a full length Warner feature in the making.

Sales Managers Agree On Need For Kid Films

NEW YORK—The sales managers committee of the MPAA last week agreed that distributors should make every effort to assure that the greatest possible number of films suitable for children are made available to exhibitors.

The sales managers set up a special sub-committee to work with the MPAA in finding out what must be done to increase the effectiveness of the children's film library and to offer more opportunities for the showing of films especially suited to the needs of children.

The sub-committee, consisting of Bernard Goodman, Warners, and Monroe Goodman, Paramount, was formed as a result of requests from exhibitors that more children's films should be made available through the MPAA's Children's Film Library.

The sales managers committee also approved a report from chairman Morey Goldstein on the discussions with defense department officials on the question of distribution arrangements for theatres in military installations.

Goldstein stated that meetings had provided a basis for continuation of discussions of a basis that he felt would be satisfactory to both exhibition and the defense department.

Color Only For C'Scope

NEW YORK—Darryl Zanuck last week expressed the opinion that the making of CinemaScope pictures in black and white would be a step backward, and said that CinemaScope license agreements prohibit its use for black and white productions. "We believe that any picture, no matter what the subject matter, is better if made in color," he said.

Schwartz Mourned

NEW YORK—Herbert J. Schwartz, 68, president, City Stores Company, and member of the board, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, died suddenly last week of a heart attack.

RKO Circuit Earnings Steady, Schwartz Says

WILMINGTON, DEL.—Stockholders of RKO Theatres Corporation were told by Sol A. Schwartz, president, at the annual meeting last week that he is confident business will be good, dependent on the quality and quantity of pictures available.

Earnings in the first eight weeks, he said, were a little ahead of last year, although March was "not quite up to our hopes." The outlook for July, August, and September he called brighter with stronger product in the offing.

Absence of any representative of the auditors at the meeting was protested by stockholder Lewis D. Gilbert, New York, representing 110 shares by proxy, who also objected to the auditor's certificate in the annual report being addressed to the directors and not to the stockholders as well. He said he would use next year's proxy statement to seek election of the auditors by the stockholders instead of by the board of directors. Gilbert further declared he would use the proxy statement if his request that the "custom of sending post meeting reports" be resumed is opposed by management.

Except for Schwartz, who presided, Theodore R. Colborn was the only director present at the meeting. Urging that all directors attend, Gilbert assailed the abscences, particularly that of Albert A. List, who with his family, according to the proxy statement, has a beneficial interest in approximately 30 per cent of the corporation's voting securities.

RKO is now operating 81 theatres and has four leased to others. The number of employes is less than last year. Concessions are operated by a number of concessionaires and RKO believes it attains the highest percentages possible from them. Carpet purchases are competitive. On income, receipts last year were a little better than the previous year, and any reduction in number of theatres reduces not only the gross but expenses as well.

The average price paid on stock acquired through options was $3.99. Advertising expense in 1954 approximated $1,800,000 and was a little less than in 1953. Legal fees were nominal. RKO has no plans to retire more stock.

Reduction of RKO's capital from $3,914,913 to $3,330,936 by retiring 583,977 shares of $1 par common stock was approved by a vote of 2,521,726 shares to 5,894 against. All 2,527,610 shares present were voted for each of the seven directors reelected, Schwartz, Colborn, List, David J. Greene, Dudley J. Layman, A. Louis Oresman, and Edward C. Raftery. Officers were also reelected.

Allied Unit Fights Toll-TV

CHICAGO—Allied of Illinois' board last week appointed a committee to work on gaining exhibitor support in the Chicago exchange area for the Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV.

They also went on record as opposing two bills recently introduced in the Illinois Legislature. One bill deals with consorship by counties in unincorporated cities, the other would prohibit the construction or maintenance of drive-in screens visible on state highways.

NARTB Will Fight Toll-TV Approval

WASHINGTON—The board of the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters last week voted to fight the proposals for toll-TV before the Federal Communications Commission.

The resolution opposed toll-TV because it affirmed that if present television broadcast bands were used for toll-TV, it would "neccessarily diminish and endanger unlimited free reception by the public"; that it would work a hardship on the owners of 34,000,000 television sets who do not now have to pay to see TV; and also because the Federal Communications Commission does not have the power to grant any portion of the television bands to the limited purpose sought by the proponents.

The resolution also goes on to state that subscription television could be provided by other means "without detriment to unlimited public reception of the present system of free television."

The only dissenting vote came from Paul Raibourn, KTLA, Los Angeles, owned by Paramount, which also owns International Telemeter Corporation, one of the groups sponsoring toll-TV.

All the leading networks, CBS, NBC, ABC, and Dumont, were represented.

Zenith Accuses Broadcasters Of Stifling New Development

CHICAGO—Commander E. F. McDonald, Jr., president, Zenith Radio Corporation, last week called the decision of the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters to join the opponents of toll-TV an attempt to "stifle a new development that can make possible hundreds of new television stations to compete with them and provide improved television service to the public.

Charging that the NARTB is dominated by NBC and CBS, McDonald stated that a staff study submitted to the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee concluded that NBC and CBS enjoy a monopolistic control of the nation's television broadcasting, and said that presuming to speak for the entire industry, a few New York network executives "have now decided that the American public is not to be permitted to use its 34 million television receivers to see first-run Hollywood movies, Broadway plays, etc., despite the public's demand to see them." He claimed that toll-TV would not "deter or interrupt" the present system of broadcasting, but would at most "replace three or four 20-year-old cowboy movies each week with high calibre motion pictures."

Meanwhile, Joseph S. Wright, general counsel, Zenith, accused CBS of aligning itself with the anti toll-TV forces in their action of refusing to permit a paid commercial in favor of toll-TV to be shown on the "Omnibus" program.

Loew's Names Winners

NEW YORK—Loew's International Corporation's third annual "Hall of Fame" awards went last week to Ava Gardner, star of the year; Edouard Sasson, manager, MGM of Lebanon, distributor of the year; and Manuel Angel Fernandez, operator, Roxy and Estrella, Mexico City, exhibitor of the year.

Johnston Forecasts Economic Gains; Stresses Foreign Market Importance

NEW YORK—Further economic gains for the American motion picture industry during the coming months were forecast by Eric Johnston, president, Motion Picture Association, in an annual report published last week.

While noting some "cause for caution," Johnston said "early signs point to economic gains in 1955 which should top the notable progress made" last year.

Factors contributing to this brighter outlook were significant gains in technological developments and their wider acceptance by the public; increased output of high quality pictures; and record earnings for American pictures in overseas markets last year.

Johnston also paid tribute to the motion picture Production Code, which celebrates its 25th anniversary this year.

Emphasizing that the Code "has been a bulwark against the encroachment of political censorship," Johnston stated, "There is no more justification for the governments of free men to bridle the screen than there is to curb the press. The excuse that motion pictures make a more dramatic impact on people and must therefore be policed by bureaucrats is only further tribute to the importance of films as a medium of communication, of information and of entertainment. There are adequate and democratic laws to protect the public from unwholesome films, just as there are to protect society from unwholesome books. Prior restraint on movies is neither needed nor welcome. It can only do a disservice to integrity and understanding."

Growing importance of the foreign market for motion pictures was stressed by Johnston, who is also president, Motion Picture Export Association.

"No nation's film industry," Johnston stated, "can continue to operate independently and on an adequate scale without foreign markets. Nobody's domestic patronage is big enough to permit the industry to flourish as it should."

Johnston noted that the "growing volume of paid admissions abroad to American motion pictures is eloquent evidence of the world-wide appeal of our films."

While emphasizing that the world box-office for American films continued on the upswing, Johnston said that "in its wake have come mounting problems of exchange, taxation, import restrictions, and other forms of discrimination against the American film industry.

"Countries which think they are protecting local film enterprises by erecting barriers against outside competition, are in fact damaging their own industries."

Noting that there are no restrictions on foreign film imports into the United States, Johnston said that "whenever barriers have been proposed, our industry has taken a firm stand against them. The free flow of films around the world must be a mutual concern to all responsible film producers."

Johnston Reelected; MPAA Directors Named

NEW YORK—Eric Johnston was reelected president, Motion Picture Association, last week at the first quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the association.

At the same time, Geoffrey Shurlock, director, Production Code Administration, was elected vice-president; Stanley R. Weber was elected treasurer; and Thomas McNamara was named assistant treasurer.

Incumbent officers reelected were Ralph Hetzel, Kenneth Clark, and G. Griffith Johnson, vice-presidents; Sidney Schreiber, secretary; William H. Roberts, assistant secretary; and James S. Howie, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Directors elected were Johnston; Barney Balaban, president, and Austin Keough, vice-president, Paramount; Steve Broidy, president, and Edward Morey, vice-president, Allied Artists; Jack Cohn, executive vice-president, and Abe Schneider, vice-president, Columbia; Cecil B. deMille, director-producer; James R. Grainger, president, and William H. Clark, treasurer, RKO; Earle W. Hammons, president, Educational Films; Milton R. Rackmil, president, and John J. O'Connor, vice-president, U-I; Hal E. Roach, president, Hal Roach Studios; Herman Robbins, board chairman, National Screen Service; Nicholas M. Schenck, president, and Charles C. Moskowitz, vice-president and treasurer, Loew's, Inc.; Spyros P. Skouras, president, and W. C. Michel, executive vice-president, 20th-Fox; C. B. Stratton, executive vice-president, Cosmopolitan Corporation; Paul Terry, president, Terrytoons; Albert Warner and Sam Schneider, vice-presidents, Warners; Herbert J. Yates, president, and Theodore R. Black, associate general counsel, Republic; and Arthur B. Krim, president, and Robert S. Benjamin, board chairman, United Artists.

Hammett Keeps "Spade"

WASHINGTON—The United States Supreme Court last week refused to consider litigation over who holds the title of "Sam Spade, Private Eye," thus upholding the decision of a lower federal court that Dashiel Hammett, creator of the character, could continue to use him in his stories. Warners had claimed that it had bought full rights to the character.

The Supreme Court also rejected an appeal filed on behalf of RCA by Adlai Stevenson seeking to block the trial of a Zenith-RCA patent suit in Chicago pending the outcome of similar litigation filed in Delaware.

Stock Notes

WASHINGTON—The Securities and Exchange Commission last fortnight reported the following purchases and disposals of film company stock by officials.

Sol A. Schwartz bought 1,000 shares of RKO theatre common stock, raising his holdings to 11,000 shares. William F. Whitman increased his holdings of the same stock to 2,400 shares by the purchase of 500 shares.

Elmer C. Rhoden acquired 1,000 shares of National Theatres common, which increases his personal holdings to 24,300 shares plus 10,255 shares controlled through a holding company.

FPCC Profits Down, But Position Strong

TORONTO—Profits in 1954 of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, the largest theatre chain in Canada, were down $226,180, but the company is considered to be in a strong financial position. The company operates and is interested in 419 theatres. It had operational earnings of $6,241,121.

According to its financial statement issued recently, the company's current assets were lowered by $1,039,000 because of loans and investments made to its TV and color tube companies. Depreciation, however, was up $1,235,545, compared with $1,156,648 because CinemaScope and VistaVision, which were favorably received by the public, required substantial investments in equipment.

The number of the company's shareholders rose to 8,700, of which 8,560 are Canadian residents, after Paramount International Films, Inc., reduced its holdings to 51 per cent by selling all its shares above that amount.

The report shows that of each boxoffice dollar received by Famous Players, 11 cents of it landed up in the coffers of the amusement tax departments.

The drive-in interests of the company continue to expand, with the company having an interest in four of five such spots in and around Toronto, while it has interests in three others. The report points out that with the decrease in the number of films produced, small neighborhood houses need more program changes. And while TV is hurting business at first, the medium is assisting theatres in the exploitation of new pictures and development of new stars.

Canadian Comment

The Manitoba Board of Censors for Motion Pictures picked up a total revenue of $57,918 in 1954, of which $5,000 was for payment for censorship facilities by the Province of Saskatchewan, which has none of its own, although it has its own censorship branch. The board rejected one picture completely, and ordered cuts in 20 others, out of the 4,644 35 and 16mm. films reviewed. The annual report issued by M. B. Newton, chairman, noted that Manitoba ranked fourth in Canada in per capita expenditures for movies with $7.74, as against a Canadian average of $8.30. The report added that "Ontario was the only province where spending on movies was lower due to increased development of TV."

Both the Manitoba Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association and the British Columbia Theatremen's Association have petitioned their respective provincial governments for reductions in the amusement tax. The Manitoba group pointed out that many theatres were losing money and would be forced to close, with competition from TV accelerating the declining attendance trend. The petition claimed that if the amusement tax were removed from all tickets of 50 cents and under, many theatres in a marginal position today would possibly be able to operate more successfully. The marginal operations were on the verge of closing. A number of members of the British Columbia group were sent to the provincial capital requesting a reduction from the present 17½ per cent amusement tax, declaring TV as a factor for failing returns. They, too, pointed out that smaller houses would close up unless relief was granted. In neither instance was there any reaction from the governments concerned.

Len Smith was appointed manager, Skyway Drive-In, Stoney Creek, outside of Hamilton. The ozoner is installing a new CinemaScope screen. . . . William Steel, operator of a drive-in outside Vancouver, and his mother were kidnapped, driven to their theatre and forced by a bandit to open a safe and hand over nearly $1,500. They were intercepted at their home after a midnight show.

Control of Canadian Automatic Confections, Ltd., Canada's largest independent concessionaires, has been taken over by Frank H. Strean and Lionel Folger. The two men acquired the stock in four companies held by Mrs. G. N. Heller of Toronto. Strean is president and will continue to direct operations. Folger, who has an equal interest in the companies, will not be active in any way. He is best known for his association with a stockbroker firm in Toronto. Herman H. Heller, who was closely connected with Canadian Automatic's operations, has resigned. Ben Smerling, Confection Cabinet Corporation, Chicago, opened the company before World War II, with Sydney Taube as manager. The late Harry Lahman of Toronto, head of Brownie Chocolates, Ltd., and Dairy Maid Chocolates, Ltd., acquired 50 per cent of the company and became sole owner when he purchased the remaining shares. Strean is 35, married, and has two children. A member of the Variety Club of Toronto, he has also served the Tri-Bell Club as its president for several terms. Strean is a leader in organizing the Tri-Bell's annual charity show, which now aids Muscular Dystrophy.

CINE CHATTER: Empire-Universal Films, Ltd., has filed an appeal against the banning in Saskatchewan of Disney's "The Vanishing Prairie." The picture was ko'd in that province by the censor, Rev. D. J. Vaughan. . . . Showings of films will be tied in with the Stratford Festival this coming summer. Such films as the Canadian-made "The Stratford Adventure" and "Tit-Coq" are expected to be screened. . . . A total of 5,000 shares of Famous Players Canadian Corporation was purchased by four U.S. investment funds operating in the Canadian market. The market value of these shares is $143,125. . . . Gerald Richardson was made a producer-director at Rapid Grip and Batten. Robert Maxwell, producer of TV series on Lassie, expressed hopes of a Canadian film studio when he was in Toronto recently.

Japan Allows Import Of 102 American Films

NEW YORK—Japan last week announced that it would allow the import of 102 pictures from the United States, reported Irving Maas, MPEA Far Eastern representative, now in Tokyo. This is the same number of films as last year.

Maas also reported that the provision on remittances was the same as last year, with a ceiling of $5,200,000 on the amount of money the American film industry can draw out of Japan in one year. It is also provided that American companies with a 70-30 franchise can take out 18.3 per cent of the gross receipts, and those with a 60-40 franchise can take 24 per cent, both being subject to the ceiling clause.

If the percentage of gross surpasses the budgetary ceiling, adjustments will be made, probably the percentage of grosses allowed will be lowered. All companies with the exception of Allied Artists, operate under the 70-30 franchise.

England

Variety Club of Great Britain honored Dr. Roger Bannister at the Savoy Hotel, London. The Helms Trophy for Europe's foremost amateur athlete of 1954, awarded by the Helms Athletic Foundation of America, will be presented to Dr. Bannister by Harold Abrahams, treasurer, British Amateur Athletic Board. Last September, Dr. Bannister performed the opening ceremony at the Hurlingham recreation center financed by the Variety Club.

Mexico

MEXICO CITY—Edward G. Muhl, vice-president, and Gilbert Kurland, studio manager, U-I, arrived here last week to discuss the possibilities of filming some of their productions in Mexican studios. It is understood that U-I has been corresponding with James Field, Churubusco Studios, asking for information about facilities, costs, etc. The executives will leave soon for a swing through Central and Latin America.

"This is the finest picture we have ever run in our theatre!"

LONG GRAY LINE, THE: Tyrone Power, Maureen O'Hara—This is the finest picture we have ever run in our theatre, and that covers a lot of time and a lot of pictures. They'll laugh, cry and be thrilled by this tremendous picture. When the Academy Awards go up for 1955, they cannot overlook the direction, acting, photography, etc., of "The Long Gray Line." You know what to expect from the master, John Ford—this is his greatest. Tyrone Power gives his finest performance, as do all the others in this picture. I sound like a press agent for Columbia pictures, but I assure you that I am not. This picture is great for all theatres, large or small. It will make you proud and happy to stand in your lobby when they come out after the show and say, "This is the best picture I have ever seen. Thanks for bringing it here." I have tried to give you the reaction of the people of this country who are the real movie-goers, not the few who attend the art houses, not the pseudo intellectual reviewers, of whom we have too many, not the people who think that the only good pictures come from Italy or France. This picture is for all the people. I know this because in this college town we have a good cross-section of all walks of life, even though represented by youth, and when they all liked it, then I know a picture is great. I can assure you that college students today are pretty critical—but they placed a tremendous stamp of approval on "The Long Gray Line."—Don Welsey, Lyric Theatre, Blacksburg, Va.

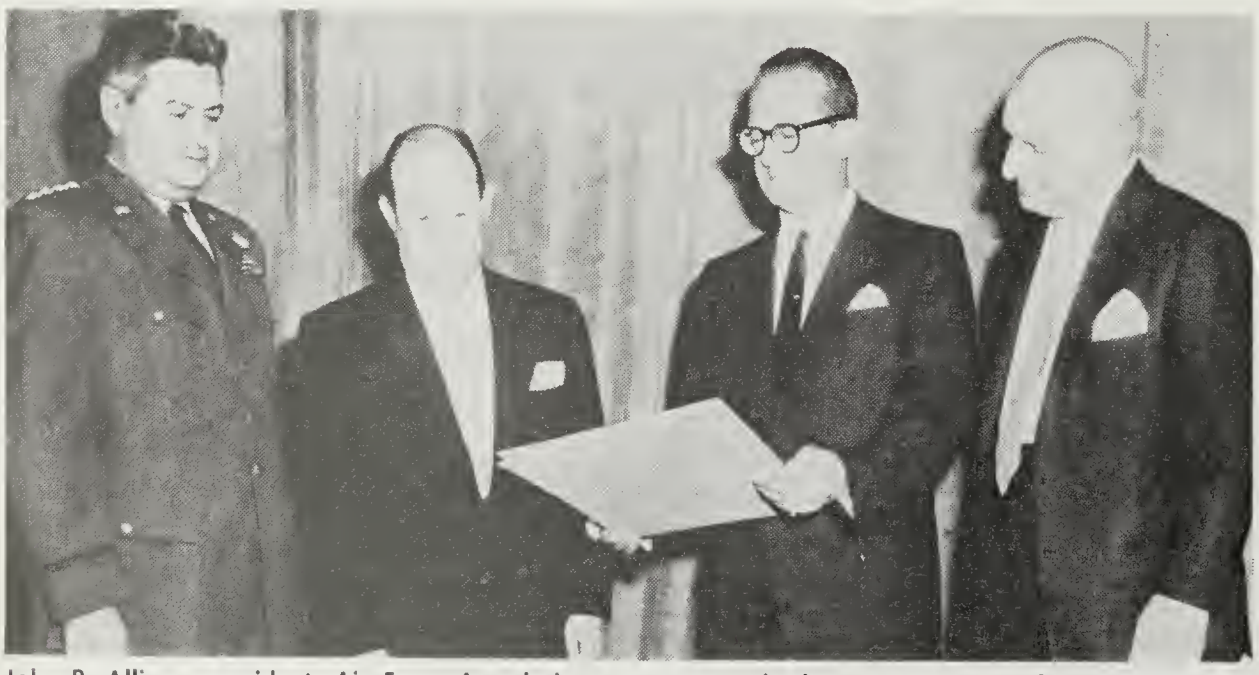
FROM Columbia!

At the Omaha press preview of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command," General Curtis E. LeMay, commander, SAC, helps June Allyson cut a cake for the ninth anniversary of SAC, while stars Frank Lovejoy and James Stewart watch.



The color guard of the Strategic Air Command appears at the Orpheum, Omaha, scene of the big Air Force show.

June Allyson whispers in the ear of Robert K. Shapiro, managing director, Paramount, New York, where the VistaVision film premiered.

David B. Wallerstein, vice-president, Balaban and Katz, talks to James Stewart, starring in the big VistaVision feature, at the preview.

John R. Allison, president, Air Force Association, presents a citation to Paramount for "distinguished public service" in making "Strategic Air Command." Seen are Gen. LeMay; Allison; Sam Briskin, producer; and Barney Balaban, president, Paramount.

SAC Flying High

PARAMOUNT's "Strategic Air Command," presently drawing top grosses in New York at the Paramount, recently equipped for VistaVision with the world's largest indoor screen, had a special preview recently in Omaha to celebrate the ninth anniversary of the Air Force's Strategic Air Command.

Nearly 100 newsmen, magazine writers, and radio and television commentators, flown from New York and Los Angeles on Air Force transports, took part in the two days of activities connected with the preview. James Stewart, June Allyson, and Frank Lovejoy, who star in the film, were on hand for the festivities, which saw Omaha Mayor John Rosenblatt proclaim a whole week as "Strategic Air Command Week," and Governor Victor E. Anderson congratulate General Curtis E. LeMay, commander, SAC, on the anniversary, and Paramount, represented by President Barney Balaban, on having produced the picture.

The celebrations started with a reception given the guests by the civic and business leaders of Omaha, which was followed by preview dinner at the Blackstone Hotel. This was followed by the screening of the VistaVision feature at the Orpheum for the newsmen, officials, and guests. At this time, the Air Force Association presented Paramount with its annual Citation of Honor for the company's "distinguished public service" in producing the film, which was praised for its "dramatic portrayal of the human element inherent in the combat readiness of SAC."

The next day, newsmen were briefed at Offutt Air Force Base, headquarters of SAC, by General LeMay on the operations of SAC. Other briefings were held later in the Omaha Civic Auditorum, followed by a reception given by the Air Force.

Shapiro discusses with Stewart the equipping of the Paramount, New York, with the largest indoor screen in the country for the premiere.

Press representatives get a special briefing on operations and plans given by officers of SAC headquarters at Offutt Air Force Base.

No Merger Planned For Decca And U-I

NEW YORK—No plan to merge Decca Records and its principle subsidiary, U-I, has yet been worked out, declared Milton R. Rackmil, president of both corporations, at the annual stockholders' meeting of Decca last week.

Answering a question by stockholder John J. Gilbert, Rackmil said that if a feasible plan is worked out it will be submitted to the stockholders, but declared that the situation was "very cold."

Rackmil reported that over-all Decca earnings for the first quarter of Decca's record division would increase some 13 to 14 per cent over last year, and that over-all earnings would be better than last year.

Queried about the possibility of increasing dividends, Rackmil said that "an increase in the rate of dividends at this time is not proper, but there is nothing on the horizon to indicate that Decca can not maintain its present dividend rate. When we can pay more dividends, we will."

Following the stockholders' meeting, the board of directors met and elected officers. Re-elected were Rackmil, president; Leonard W. Schneider, executive vice-president; Louis A. Buchner, vice-president and treasurer; Samuel Yamin, secretary; Isabelle Marks, assistant secretary; and Irving E. Weiner, assistant treasurer.

VC To Honor Walsh

NEW YORK—The Variety Club Foundation to Combat Epilepsy will publish a journal for distribution at the Second Annual Heart Award Dinner to be held in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel on May 2. Richard F. Walsh, president, International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, will be the guest of honor and will receive the annual Heart Award of the Variety Club of New York.

A journal committee is being organized under the joint chairmen, Edward L. Fabian, former chief barker, and present first assistant chief barker, Tent 35; Herman Gelber, president, Projectionists Local 306; and Tom Murtha, Business Agent, Stage Employes Local 4. The full committee will be announced shortly.

High Court Refuses Anti-Trust Appeal

WASHINGTON—The United States Supreme Court last week refused, without giving any reason, to hear the appeal of the G. and P. Amusement Company, Cleveland, against lower court rulings throwing out its anti-trust suit against several exhibitors and four distributors.

G. and P. was suing Regent Theatre Company, other companies owned by Regent, 20th-Fox, Loew's, Warners, U-I, and a central booking agent, Cooperative Theatres of Ohio, charging that the central booking agent, which included Regent, used its power to back closed situations to secure the best product for the Regent and other theatres, forcing the G. and P. operated Moreland to close. G. and P. had asked that a buying cooperative which combines open and closed theatres be ruled in violation of the anti-trust laws.

Warners Plans TV Series

BURBANK, CAL.—The launching of Sunset Productions as the television film subsidiary of Warners, with Jack Warner, Jr., as production head, was announced last week by Jack L. Warner, executive producer. Simultaneously, the closing of a deal with Vincent B. Evans for an aviation series titled "Men Of The Sky" as the first project of the Sunset Productions program was announced.

The series, bearing the official seals of the Department of Defense and the Air Force, will be 30-minute entertainment dramas woven about stories of air adventure. Covering the entire range of aviation in war and peace, they will be filmed in color and will be made available for the fall market, with bids now being accepted. Preparation of the series is already underway.

Samuels, sales manager, Buena Vista, announced 350 bookings for Walt Disney's "Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier," within two weeks after it was decided to release the picture.

RKO Bounces Back With 18 Top Films

HOLLYWOOD—RKO surged back into contention as a major motion picture company with the disclosure last week by President J. R. Grainger that RKO will have completed, and either in distribution or ready for distribution by Nov. 1, 1955, a total of 18 major film productions.

Each of the productions is in color and in Superscope, CinemaScope, or another wide-screen process. The 18 films, some RKO productions and some independently-produced for RKO distribution, represent a production investment of approximately $25,000,000.

In a message to the RKO sales force, President Grainger declared, "In my many years in the motion picture industry it has not been my pleasure or privilege to present a more attractive array of product to the exhibitors of the world."

The 18 pictures, all in color, set for release are "Underwater!," starring Jane Russell, Gilbert Roland, Richard Egan, Lori Nelson; "Quest For The Lost City," starring Dana and Ginger Lamb; "Escape To Burma," starring Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Ryan, David Farrar; "Rage At Dawn," starring Randolph Scott, Forrest Tucker, Mala Powers; "Son Of Sinbad," starring Dale Robertson, Sally Forrest, Lili St. Cyr, Vincent Price, Mari Blanchard; "Naked Sea," a documentary in color produced and directed by Allen Miner; "Pearl Of The South Pacific," starring Virginia Mayo, Dennis Morgan, Lance Fuller, David Farrar, and Murvyn Vye; "The Conqueror," starring John Wayne, Susan Hayward, and Pedro Armendariz; "The Boy And The Bull," starring Michel Ray, Joi Lansing, Rudolpho Hoyos, Fermin Rivera; "Flight From Bengazi," starring Richard Conte and Victor McLaglen; "The Treasure Of Pancho Villa," starring Rory Calhoun, Shelley Winters, Gilbert Roland; "Texas Lady," starring Claudette Colbert; "Glory," with an all-star cast to be produced and directed by David Butler; "Tennessee's Partner," a Benedict Bogeaus Production; "Love's Lovely Counterfeit," starring Barbara Stanwyck; "High Destiny," and all-star production to be produced by Sam Wiesenthal and Gene Tevlin; "Great Day In the Morning," an Edmund Grainger Production with an all-star cast; and Howard Hughes' "Jet Pilot," starring John Wayne and Janet Leigh.

No TV Coexistence—Starr

WASHINGTON—"Free television and coin-box television cannot co-exist. One must drive out the other in order to survive," said Alfred Starr, co-chairman Organizations for Free-TV, last week.

Speaking to the capital's newspapermen at a National Press Club luncheon, he claimed that purchasers of TV sets will "raise a howl clearly heard in Washington when they learn that they will have to buy a decoder and then pay for programs that they now see for nothing."

Blasting statements that toll-TV is a broadening of broadcasting, Starr claimed that "subscription television is absolutely pre-emptive," as no station can broadcast two programs at the same time and producers of entertainment will take their programs to the highest bidder.

Trans-Lux Income Up, Stockholders Are Told

NEW YORK—Trans-Lux Corporation last week reported net profit of $184,612 for 1954 as against $170,233 in 1953. Operating profit was reported at $217,166, while ether income amounted to $19,117 and federal and Canadian income taxes to $51,670. For 1953, operating profit was put at $197,771; other profit, $24,617; and taxes, $52,164.

Trans-Lux gave notice of its annual meeting of stockholders, to be held on April 28. Management will propose 12 directors for election, Chester Bland, Harry Brandt, Richard Brandt, Robert Daine, Jay Emanuel, Percival E. Furber, Percy N. Furber, Aquila Giles, Edison Rice, Jacob Starr, Ralph Weiner, and Milton C. Weissman, all presently members of the board.

Trans-Lux officers and directors received a total of $136,084 in remuneration last year, with Percival E. Furber, president and board chairman, receiving $30,920. The company reported that 11 of 14 Trans-Lux theatres have been or will be equipped with wide-screens and stereophonic sound.

In 1954, the company purchased 20,000 shares of stock on the open market at $3.50 a share. The end of the year saw 570,000 shares of common stock issued and outstanding.

UJA Drive Leaders Named

NEW YORK—Adolph Schimel, U-I vice-president and general counsel, last week named the members of the industry who will serve on the steering committee of the motion picture and amusement division, United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York. Barney Balaban, Paramount; Robert S. Benjamin, United Artists; Harry Brandt, Brandt Theatres; Simon H. Fabian and Samuel Rosen, Stanley Warner; Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox; and Jack Cohn, Columbia, are the men who will assume the executive roles in coordinating all phases of the industry for the 1955 UJA drive.

N.Y.U. Honors Kramer

NEW YORK—New York University honored producer Stanley Kramer last week at ceremonies attended by educational leaders, film executives, and NYU alumni.

Citing Kramer for his film achievements were Chancellor Henry T. Heald, Dean William B. Baer, College of Arts and Sciences, and Professor Robert Gessner, chairman, motion picture department.

United Artists executives attending the ceremony were headed by Robert S. Benjamin, board chairman. Kramer graduated from NYU in 1933.

UA Names Foreign Heads

NEW YORK—Arnold M. Picker, United Artists vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, last week announced three key appointments involving the company's operations in Latin America and Europe. Arthur Ehrlich, formerly the foreign department's traveling auditor, has been appointed manager in Panama. George Kallman, former manager in Panama, has been named to a similar post in Peru. Isidro Rosenfeld, formerly manager in Peru, has been transferred to the Continental division in Paris.

S. H. Fabian, Stanley Warner president, recently sailed for a survey of European exhibition and production opportunities for Cinerama. Mrs. Fabian accompanies him on the trip that will include England, France, Holland, and Israel.

New England Group To Fight Toll Television

BANGOR, MAINE—Leon P. Gorman, general manager, WABI and WABI-TV, Bangor, Maine, last week announced the founding of the New England Broadcasters for Free-TV, aimed at coordinating the efforts of radio and television stations personnel in New England to demonstrate to the FCC that pay-TV is not in the public interest.

Gorman predicted that "once the 'coin-box boys' get their feet in the door, TV as we know it today will disappear because pay-as-you-see TV must have public acceptance, even more so than programs received free of charge." Gorman stated that they would get that acceptance by raiding the networks for all the present top attractions.

Gorman said his organization would concentrate on consolidating opposition to toll-TV among elements directly connected with the broadcasting industry, and would cooperate with other Organizations for Free-TV.

FCC Shuns Involvement In Zenith, "Omnibus" Fight

WASHINGTON—The Federal Communications Commission last week declared that it had no jurisdiction in Zenith Radio Corporation's dispute with CBS over the network's refusal to allow Zenith to present advertising copy in favor of toll-TV.

The FCC claimed that it had no jurisdiction over programming, business arrangements between licensees and their customers, or over network methods, except in prohibiting a licensee to tie himself so exclusively to a network as to make it impossible to render a community service and operate in the public interest.

Zenith, owner of the Phonevision process, charged CBS with slanting programs on opposition to toll-TV and refusing to accept commercials stating the other side. CBS answered that the advertising copy offered for April 3 and April 10 programs, and refused, indulges in a controversial discussion which does not relate to the products or services of the sponsor or of "Omnibus."

Zenith will no longer share the sponsorship of the program.

Reade, English Exhibs To Discuss Problems

NEW YORK—Walter Reade, Jr., announced last week that he would meet theatremen from the United Kingdom following the completion of the French film exhibition at Cannes.

Reade, who will attend the Cannes meeting, will discuss "mutual industry problems" with officials of Cinematographic Exhibitors Association, and it is thought that the plan, advanced by Alfred Starr, chairman, TOA executive committee, for an international exhibitor union will be one of the subjects under consideration.

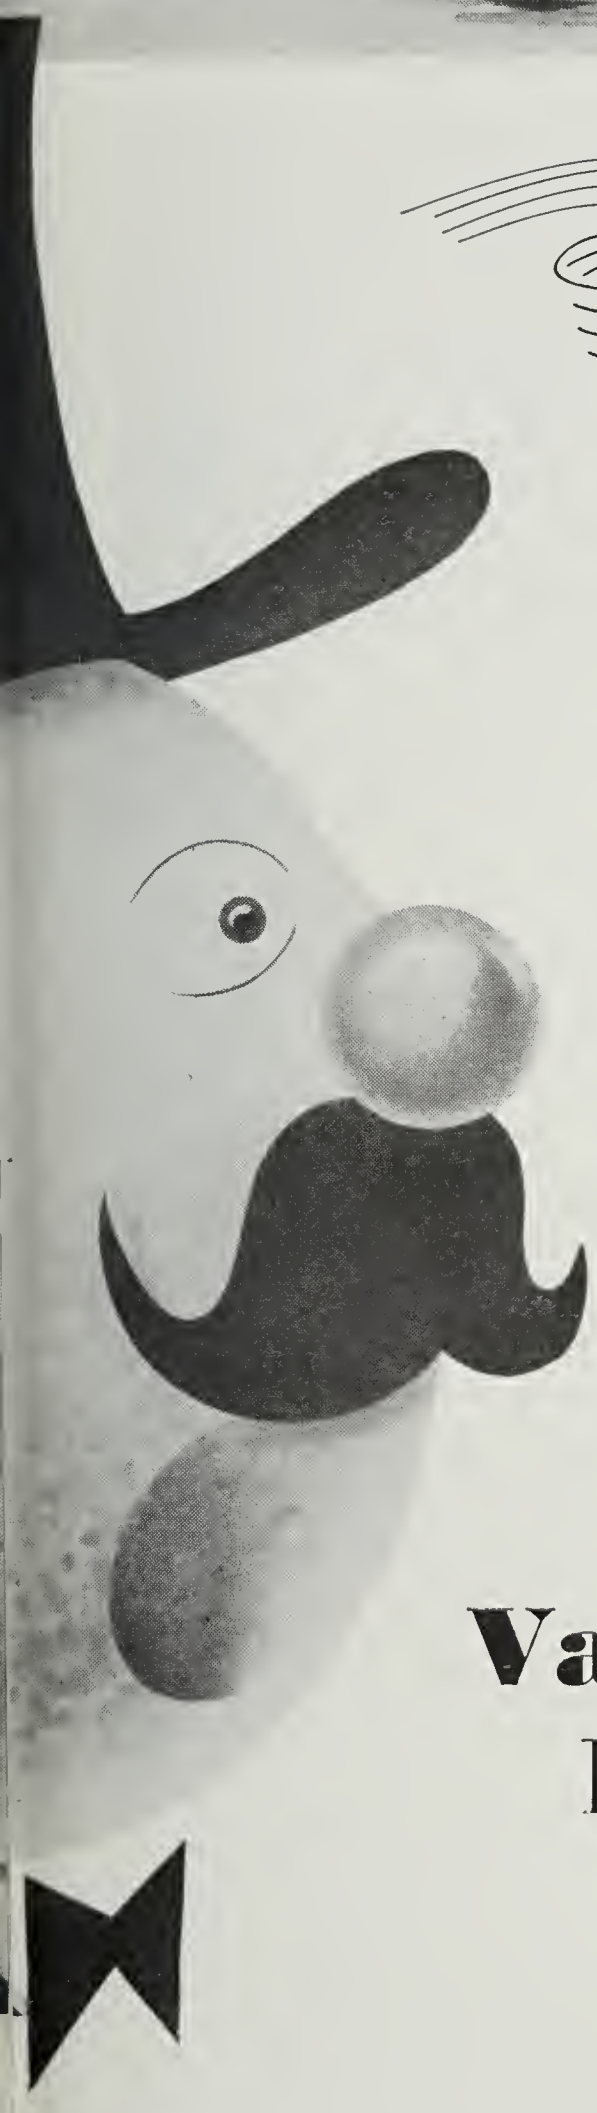
Starr reported in January that he had been corresponding with John Davis, managing director, J. Arthur Rank Organization, about the project, and it is believed that initial groundwork of an affiliation between United States and Canadian exhibitors was laid when Starr was invited to be the principle speaker at the convention of Theatre Owners of Quebec last month.

At present, CEA and TOA have been exchanging information sporadically, and following a two-month trip in Europe last summer, Starr recommended to the TOA convention that the formation of world-wide exhibition for discussion of mutual problems be considered.

TOA's general counsel, Herman Levy, expects to visit Europe in August, and it is understood that he plans to contact various exhibitor organizations as liaison for TOA on the proposal.

About People

NEW YORK—Harry Joe Brown and Sid Rogell have been elected vice-presidents of both the Motion Picture Pioneers and the Foundation of the Motion Picture Pioneers. The organizations announced jointly that Brown and Rogell will serve as the west coast representatives of both groups. Brown and Rogell were elected to their new posts at meetings of the boards of directors of the Pioneers and the Foundation attended by Jack Cohn, Harry J. Takiff, Marvin Kirsch, Sam Dembow, Gus Eyssell, William German, Abel Green, John O'Connor, Herman Robbins, and Sam Rinzler.



BURBANK, CAL.—Jack L. Warner, executive producer, Warners, last week announced the appointment of Gary Stevens as general manager, Warners' television division, which will produce the "Warner Brothers Present" series of full-hour feature pictures to be telecast weekly over the ABC-TV network. Warner also announced that Art Silver will be charge of the "Behind The Scenes" subjects which will be shown with each of the features. He further stated that Solly Baiano, formerly head, Warners' studio casting department, will be in charge of casting for all units of the company's television division.

CHICAGO—Marilyn L. Friedel has rejoined the staff of United Film and Recording Studios, Inc., Chicago, as national director of public relations after an affiliation with U-I in Hollywood. The announcement was made by William L. Klein, president and executive producer.

Grainger Goes Superscope

HOLLYWOOD—Arrangements were completed last week between Edmund Grainger Productions, Inc., and Superscope, Inc., for the shooting of all six of Grainger's forthcoming productions in Superscope.

Following his arrangement with Joseph and Irving Tushinski, heads of Superscope, Grainger announced that all six were to be in color also.

"The Prodigal"

Charles Schnee's first production in Eastman color and CinemaScope comes off a sumptuous hit. An adaptation from a Bible story, "The Prodigal," will please all audiences and is a film they will remember. Such scenic beauty, pomp, and pageantry have seldom been seen in motion pictures. The color is superb. Director Richard Thorpe has done an outstanding job. Star values are strong with Lana Turner, Edmund Purdom, and Louis Calhern to lead off, and there is plenty of action. This should be boxoffice all the way. A tip of the hat to MGM for this one.

PRODUCERS PARAGRAPH: Last week saw the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories unveil a TV-film system utilizing a blending of electronic television and motion picture cameras with a common optical system. This is known as "Electronicam." In other words, when this camera is used, everybody concerned can see the set-up on a nearby screen exactly as the camera sees it and as it will appear on the finished film. For you front office supervisors, it's possible to install a remote monitor in your office so that you can check up on set activities.

Doubtful "takes" and "re-takes" can be eliminated and continual focusing via an electronic viewfinder is possible during the enactment of a sequence requiring motion, with no stopping necessary.

Dave Miller Retires As U-I Branch Head

BUFFALO—A host of area industryites, U-I home office executives, and friends wished Dave Miller well early this week at a testimonial dinner in honor of the retiring branch manager given by the Buffalo Variety Tent.

Miller's career in distribution encompasses 35 years with U-I, primarily in the Buffalo and Cleveland territories, as salesman, district manager, and branch head. He also served as the first chief barker of the Buffalo Variety Club unit.

In a unique gesture of respect, U-I announced that Miller would receive a weekly pay check despite his retirement, plus the use of an office in either the Cleveland or Buffalo branch, whichever he chooses, in which which he can work as much or as little as he desires.

Myron Gross, Cooperative Theatres, and William Dipson, Dipson Theatres, served as co-chairmen of the testimonial affair at the Hotel Statler, Miller received several gifts.

LETTERS

Gentlemen:

I have been back in the theatre business for well over a year now and have enjoyed every minute of it. I won't bother you with a personal history or a long story, for my main reason for writing you is to tell you how much I enjoy MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR. I particularly enjoy the Physical Theatre section and the editorials. The EXHIBITOR has proved to be a valuable source of information for me as well as enlightening with regard to the new trends in theatre business. The Servisection is another item I find extremely useful and I am sure any other theatreman will say the same. All in all, I think the EXHIBITOR is a mighty fine publication and I am looking forward to many years of highly informative reading and enjoyment with my copy each week.

The cameras, which will be leased to filmmakers by DuMont, can be used with CinemaScope, VistaVision, Todd-AO, Cinerama, etc., it was claimed, and both color and black-and-white in both 16mm. and 35mm. can be utilized.

DuMont claimed that if TV techniques are utilized with this camera, huge savings in production can be effected. Multiple units and monitor screens can be used, and the scene can be taken from different angles by the different cameras simultaneously, and the director and editor can select the best version while editing and assembling. Scenes can be rehearsed and the final result seen on the TV monitor before the actual film is exposed.

Black-and-white filmed sequences as well as those in color were demonstrated. The former could have been a little sharper in definition between the black and the whiteness in the settings, while the color was fairly good, comparing with that in some of the lower budgeted films to emerge from Hollywood. The demonstration footage was not sufficient to pass final judgment and was reported to be 16mm. and not 35mm.

ALL-OUT FOR CINEMASCOPE: To those theatres who have yet to install CinemaScope, we offer the following idea as presneted to us by 20th-Fox trade press contact, who swears every word is true.

In the town of Zahle, Lebanon, population 25,000, the local exhibitor switched to four-track CinemaScope and booked "The Robe" as his initial feature. At opening time, a lamb was slaughtered at the entrance to the theatre and while prominent townspeople and local personalities entered, the owner of the theatre, his brother, and all the employes executed a fancy dance around the lamb.

Following this a symbolic amount of blood from the lamb was poured on the steps of the theatre for luck and for a bright future for CinemaScope. It must work, for the last report from Zahle had "The Robe" in six days tallying up a record 1,000 per cent business increase over any previous booking.

Just shows what a little blood and CinemaScope can accomplish. It looks like an unbeatable combination.

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

Win Min Than, seated, Burmese actress who makes her screen debut in UA's "The Purple Plain," is seen on the left, looking over campaign materials for the film's three-theatre Miami, Fla., bow with executives of Florida State Theatres, standing, left to right, Howard Pettegill, Matty Tyleck, Al Weiss, Harry Botwick and Al Glick; in the center, the Oriental beauty is seen entering the bannered convertible Packard placed at her disposal while she was in for the premiere at the Coral, Sheridan, and Paramount; and, right, Botwick and Win Min Than with a jumbo welcome.

Theatre-Store Link Stressed In Tieup

CHATHAM, ONTARIO—Harry Wilson and Frank Reid, managers, respectively, Capitol and Center, promoted four pages of co-op advertising in the Chatham Daily News to launch their "Spring Festival Of Hits," which is expected to give a general lift to Chatham business, for surveys conducted have proven that movie houses and business are closely linked. An outstanding picture, one report reveals, can be responsible for a general downtown business increase because of a concentration of movie-goers attracted. Before or after the show, movie-goers like to window-shop, and, no doubt, many decisions to purchase certain articles are made during such leisurely trips.

The survey quotes one businessman as saying that he sold more than $3,000 worth of electric refrigerators to women who made their decisions going to or leaving the movies. He mentioned a case in point where a couple decided on a certain refrigerator with a label which they had noticed in the store window going to the show. The following week the couple went to the store. The businessman tried to demonstrate the merits of another refrigerator. The woman's reply was, "No, I want the one with the label, the one I decided I wanted the night we went to the show."

The survey further points out that theatres create a traffic pattern that entices buyers to the center of a business community, whether it be a town or city. When a theatre has to close for different reasons, it further states, business people are among the first to make representations to have it reopened. Both Wilson and Reid pointed all this out to the merchants and urged them to keep their store windows well lighted during the "Spring Festival Of Hits" for the benefit of the window-shoppers and to create a more gala, well-illuminated setting for the business building endeavor.

Book Bally Boosts "Hunter"

NEW YORK—A national co-op promotion that will boom United Artists' "The Night Of The Hunter" in drug stores, book stores, and at newsstands throughout the country has been set with Dell Publications, it was announced last week by Francis M. Winikus, national director of advertising, publicity, and exploitation.

Pegged on Dell's new 35-cent edition of "The Night Of The Hunter," best-selling suspense novel on which the United Artists release is based, the campaign will employ a variety of special selling aids.

Among the accessories are two styles of window cards, luminous window tapes for stores and boxoffices, and a 41 by 28 truck banner that will be used by distributor fleets in every exchange area.

The promotional program features big-space window and counter displays that will spotlight "The Night Of The Hunter" with book builds, scene stills, and playdate announcements.

"Blackboard Jungle" Trailer Satisfies School Board

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—The RKO recently used an interesting device to maintain its cordial relations with the local school body. When MGM's "Blackboard Jungle" was booked into the theatre, the school authorities expressed some concern. A meeting was held with the educators and everybody was happy when it was agreed to run a special trailer at the conclusion of each showing of the film.

The trailer read, "To Our Patrons. The school and situations you have just seen are NOT to be found in this area! We should all be proud of the facilities provided for OUR youth by the Public Schools of New Brunswick and the Middlesex County Vocational and Technical High Schools. We suggest a visit to any of the fine schools in our city and county. Your interest will be cordially welcomed."

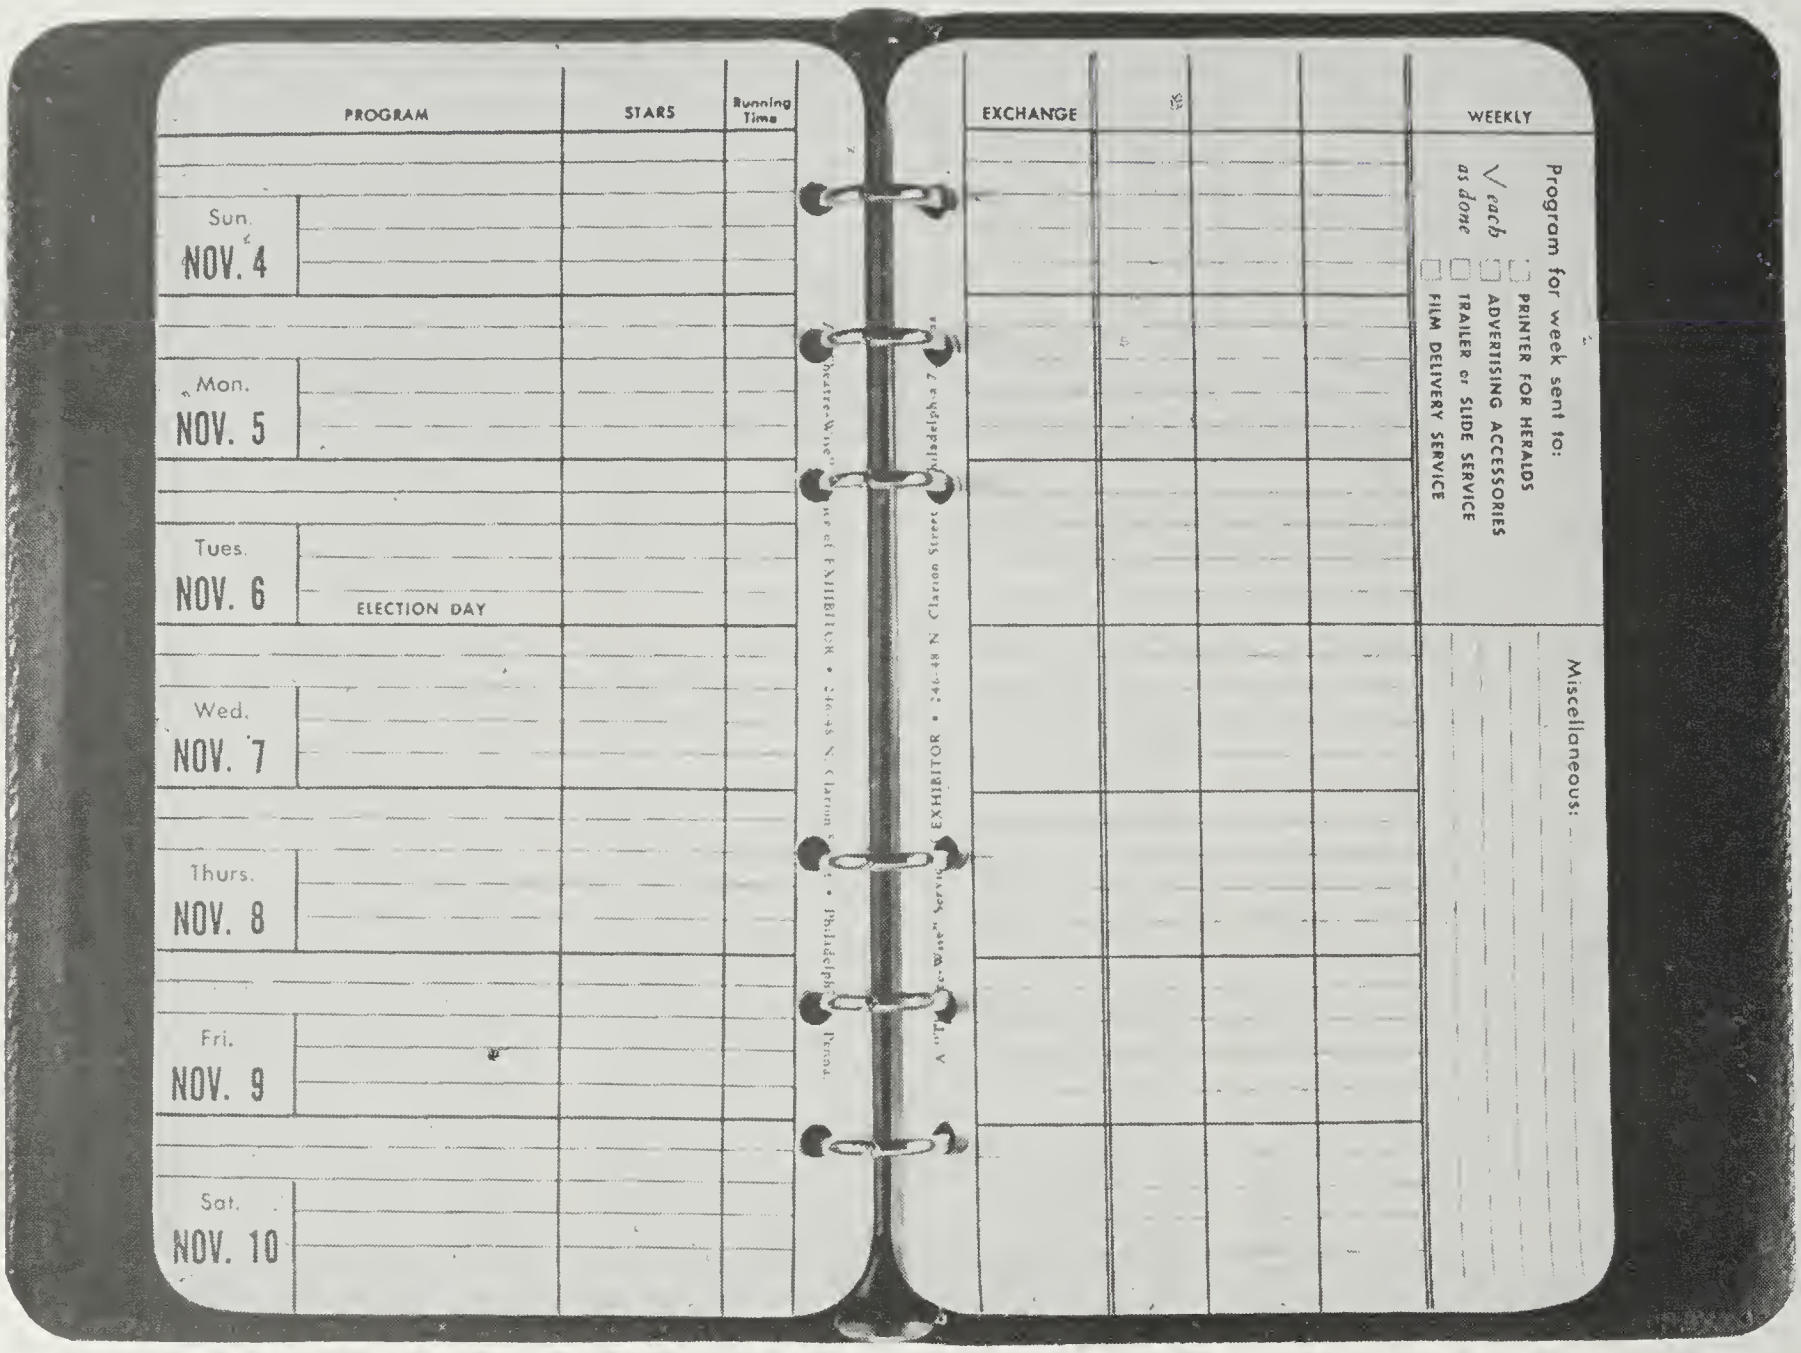
Full Page Ads Help "Command" Premiere

NEW YORK—The attention of the millions of newspaper readers throughout the metropolitan area and the various other areas reached by the city's seven dailies last week was being directed by full-page advertisements to the "spectacular new presentation" of VistaVision on the "world's largest theatre screen," starting with the world premiere here this week of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command."

First of the spectacular spreads about the "great new world of entertainment" which will be ushered in by the New York Paramount appeared on the back pages of the Herald Tribune and the World Telegram and Sun on April 11. Purchased by Paramount to focus public attention on "a history making event, an entertainment first," the ad included diagrammatical descriptions of two of the major factors which make possible this presentation: the huge, new curvilinear screen now being installed at the Paramount, and the new specially designed VistaVision horizontal projectors which allow projection over a far greater screen area than ever before possible.

The ad also appeared in the Daily Mirror and the Times, Journal-American, Daily News, and the Post. It tells readers: " . . . You will see and feel for yourself how VistaVision transcends all other large-screen processes by as wide a margin as the talking picture transcended the silent one. And you'll understand why the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences gave VistaVision its special award this year."

Also in line with long range promotion on the film, Air Force, the magazine of American airpower, has in its April issue a three-page illustrated story on the film by Jimmy Stewart.



The public debut on April 21 of the film at the Paramount will be preceded the evening before by a special invitational world premiere put on by Paramount and the Air Force Association.

Johnnie Sims was added to the sales force at Capital City Supply Company. . . . Oscar Howell, president, same company, checked in after a business trip from the city. . . . Racial segregation regulations is the main reason given for the dropping of Miami, Fla., from the Cinerama expansion plans of Stanley-Warner. For some time Miami and Miami Beach, Fla., have been under consideration for Cinerama in both the Sheridan and Olympia theatres. The two houses were studied for conversion. Now the possibility of making them over is gone. One of the reasons given for the withdrawal was that "segregation in the south works against permanent installations in these territories." It is feared that with at least half of the population barred from the theatres, the potential drawing power will not be as great for the long runs required. . . . Mrs. Faye Lenkeit, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges, has resigned from the company to live in Florida.

Southeastern Festival Planned In Three States

ATLANTA — Plans for a month-long "Southeastern Movie Festival" were launched at a meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners and Operators of Georgia at the Atlanta Variety Club. Houses in Georgia, Florida. and Alabama will cooperate May 16 to June 16 when top movies will be shown simultaneously.

Stars including Yvonne de Carlo, Zachary Scott, Sterling Hayden, and Chill Wills will make personal appearances in this area as a festival feature.

New pictures to be shown will include "Daddy-Long-Legs," "Strange Woman in Town," "Sea Chase," "Cell 2445 Death Row," "The Far Horizons," "The Eternal Sea," and "Shotgun," exhibitors and distributors were told here. J. H. Thompson, Hawkinsville, Ga., president, MPTOOG, outlined plans to the luncheon in Atlanta. The group plans a kick-off luncheon on May 17 with mayors from towns all over the three states.

The net proceeds from the affair will be used to help defray expenses to the national WOMPI convention in September at New Orleans.

A request for a permit for a new standard radio broadcasting for Marietta, Ga., has been sent to the Federal Communications Commission in Washington.

Charlotte

The news of interest among theatre people, exhibitors, etc., was the MGM Theatre Workshop at the Hotel Charlotte for theatre owners in North Carolina and South Carolina. Mike Simons, MGM public relations official, was in charge of the workshop. The two day exhibitors' meeting was concluded after a general session at which Alfred Starr, Nashville, Tenn., spoke. Starr is former president, Theatre Owners of America. 400 members from the Carolinas were in attendance. A bitter blast against proposed pay-as-you-see television was fired by Starr, who said the proposals were "a scheme to put a boxoffice in your parlors. If the Federal Communications Commission goes along with requests of patent holders, everything you want to see you will pay for; you will be in the slot machine business right in your homes." Starr said he "admitted he had a selfish interest" in that toll TV would mean that motion pictures now being shown in the theatres would be televised directly to homes. "But I'm happy to say that my interest coincides with the public interest." Starr was principal speaker at the morning's session. The afternoon session was devoted to discussions of various theatre issues and problems. C. A. Dandelake, Tarboro, president, Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, presided.

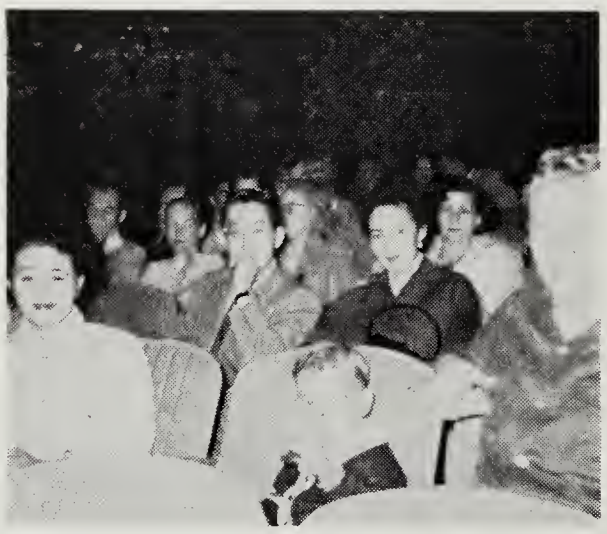
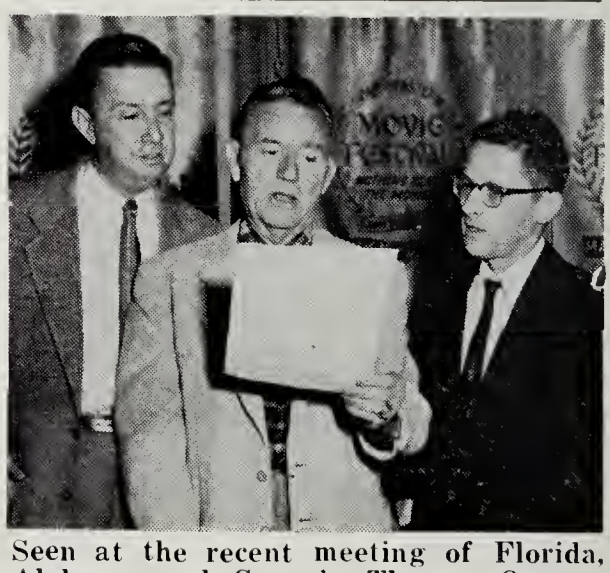
was reportedly filmed at a nudist park near Tampa, Fla., under the supervision of the American Sunbathing Association. Sheriff R. L. Kendrick called the movie "disgusting." It was advertised for adults only, he said, "but I saw a lot of kids there." Movies patrons, viewing the picture during a downpour, knew nothing of the raid. . . . Pauline "Bunny" Hecht, daughter of E. W. Hecht, Wometco district manager, was named a junior counselor for next year at Florida State University, Tallahassee, Fla. She will assist freshmen and transfers in learning their ways about the FSU campus. . . . Two recently-formed Florida motion picture studios are in the process of putting the Sunshine State on the map as a production center. In Orlando, Empire Studios, Inc., whose initial venture, "Yellowneck," was given its world premiere there, has signed a deal with Herbert J. Yates, president, Republic Pictures Corporation, for the release of three more feature-length films. Southeastern Film Studios, Inc., Jacksonville, recently announced plans to make a feature-length film based on Baynard Kendrick's "The Flames of Time," a novel published by Scribner's which became a Literary Guild selection. Southeastern's executives are Glen Lambert, president; Forrest G. Wood, executive vice-president; and Robert Yale, secretary. Lambert and Yale are veterans of the industry, with many years spent with major studios in Hollywood and New York. For the last few years, Lambert has been producer-director of the documentary short subjects for the U. S. Information Service in this country, Thailand, and Haiti, among other places. Wood, who has extensive financial interests, is a well-known Jacksonville businessman and sportsman.



David Payne, formerly assistant, Olympia, is now at the Dade. John Oliver is new Olympia assistant. . . . Major Harry Warner was a luncheon guest at the Balmoral Hotel on the opening of "East of Eden," when press and radio representatives attended. Copies of the Bantam Book edition were distributed to those present at the luncheon. Al Glick, Florida State Theatres publicist, reported a lot of exploitation activity on this film, including book marks; a double case library display in the Miami Public Library; table tents in restaurants, cocktail lounges; bus and taxi cards; signs on trucks and in newsstands that sold Bantam Books; three free screenings were held a week before the opening; 50 Bantam Book editions of the film story were given to the first 50 in line on opening day at each of the three theatres.

On "Glass Slipper," at the Embassy and Trail, Don Tilzer, Claughton Circuit publicist, had very impressive fronts made for both houses. In addition, book marks were placed well in advance in prominent local department stores and the Miami Public Library. The library had their artists make up a window card, placed prominently in the main entrance door. Tilzer purchased little plastic slippers in which were inserted a pack of Smiles mints, tied with a ribbon around both and sold on the theatre's candy counters for 15 cents.



North Carolina

Dunn

A memorial service was held for Worth Stewart, Dunn, N. C., and Charlotte, one of the south's best known theatre executives. Stewart, who had built up a circuit of about 100 motion picture theatres in the two Carolinas, has been missing since the private plane he was piloting disappeared in early February, 1952, on a trip from Florida to Charlotte. The memorial service, held in Dunn Masonic Hall, was featured by the presentation of a Hammond electric organ, two oak panels, and a table donated to the Dunn Masons in his memory and the unveiling of an oil painting of Stewart by T. C. Pridgen, Dunn native and artist. Prominent leaders of Dunn ad Charlotte, leading theatre executives, members of the family, and local friends attended the service.

The Japanese-American war brides in the Miami, Fla., area were recently invited to see Paramount's "The Bridges at Toko-Ri," Florida State's Gables. Harry Margolesky, manager, stated they enjoyed the on-location shots of Tokyo and Japan.

The Ladies Auxiliary of Tent Three, Variety Clubs, will stage a luncheon, style show, and entertainment program on May 13 in Hotel Netherland Plaza for benefit of the club's Foundation for Retarded Children. George Murphy, the industry's public relations rep, will headline the show. Mrs. Herman Hunt, auxiliary president, has appointed the following luncheon committee chairmen: co-chairmen, Mrs. Robert McNab and Mrs. Stuart Jacobson; reservations, Mrs. Saul Greenberg; invitations, Mrs. Abe Maius; state tax, Mrs. Manuel Weiss; publicity, Mrs. Sam Weiss; hotel arrangements, Mrs. Harry Pollins; patrons, Mrs. Arthur Van Gelder; prizes, Mrs. Jack Finberg; favors, Mrs. Jack Onie; decorations, Mrs. M. M. Dennis; program book, Mrs. Edward Salzberg; telephone, Mrs. Willis Vance; table advisor, Mrs. Vance Schwartz; and hostesses, Mrs. Milton Gurian.

I. W. McMahan, 79, who opened the first movie house in this area in suburban Covington, Ky., in 1905, died of a skull fracture suffered when struck by an auto. In 1906, he joined partnership with the late Jerome M. Jackson, and they opened the Ohio in a downtown storeroom, and later operated a large chain of houses in this area. They opened the first local film exchange in 1907. McMahon sold his theatre holdings 25 years ago, and had since operated a real estate office.

Her many friends here mourned the death of Theda Bara, who made film history as the vampire in more than 40 top silent films between 1915 and 1927. Born here 65 years ago as Theodosia Goodman, she graduated from a local high school, and went on the stage, where she was spotted for films by producer William Fox. . . . George A. Kirby, Republic branch manager, was in Columbus, O., on business. . . . TOC is booking and buying for the Liberty, Middleport, O., C. Hindy, owner. . . . Bennett Goldstein, 20th-Fox sales manager, was vacationing in New York City. . . . Shirley Taylor, Paramount receptionist, was happy over the return of her brother from Korea. . . . Many houses in this area remained closed on Good Friday until 3 p. m.

Cleveland

Richard Todd spent a busy 12 hours in Cleveland. As the guest of 20th-Fox at a luncheon in the Statler Hotel, he met representatives of the Cleveland Federation of Churches, press and radio. Several state exhibitors accompanied by their local movie editors were also present. These included Jack Hynes, Paramount, Youngstown, with Fred Childress, Youngstown Vindicator; Ralph Russell, Palace, Canton, with Wilkins Weber, Canton Repository; John Deyarmon, Madison, Mansfield, and Robert Besch, Mansfield Journal. Sol Podlibsky, Charlestown (W. Va.) Daily Mail, was also a luncheon guest. After lunch the star autographed the book, "A Man Called Peter," in the Higbee Company bookshop, then starred at a reception in Old Stone Church sponsored by the Cleveland Federation of Churches and ended his local visit with a TV interview on Dorothy Fuldheim's 6:30 p. m. news program. Next stop was Philadelphia.

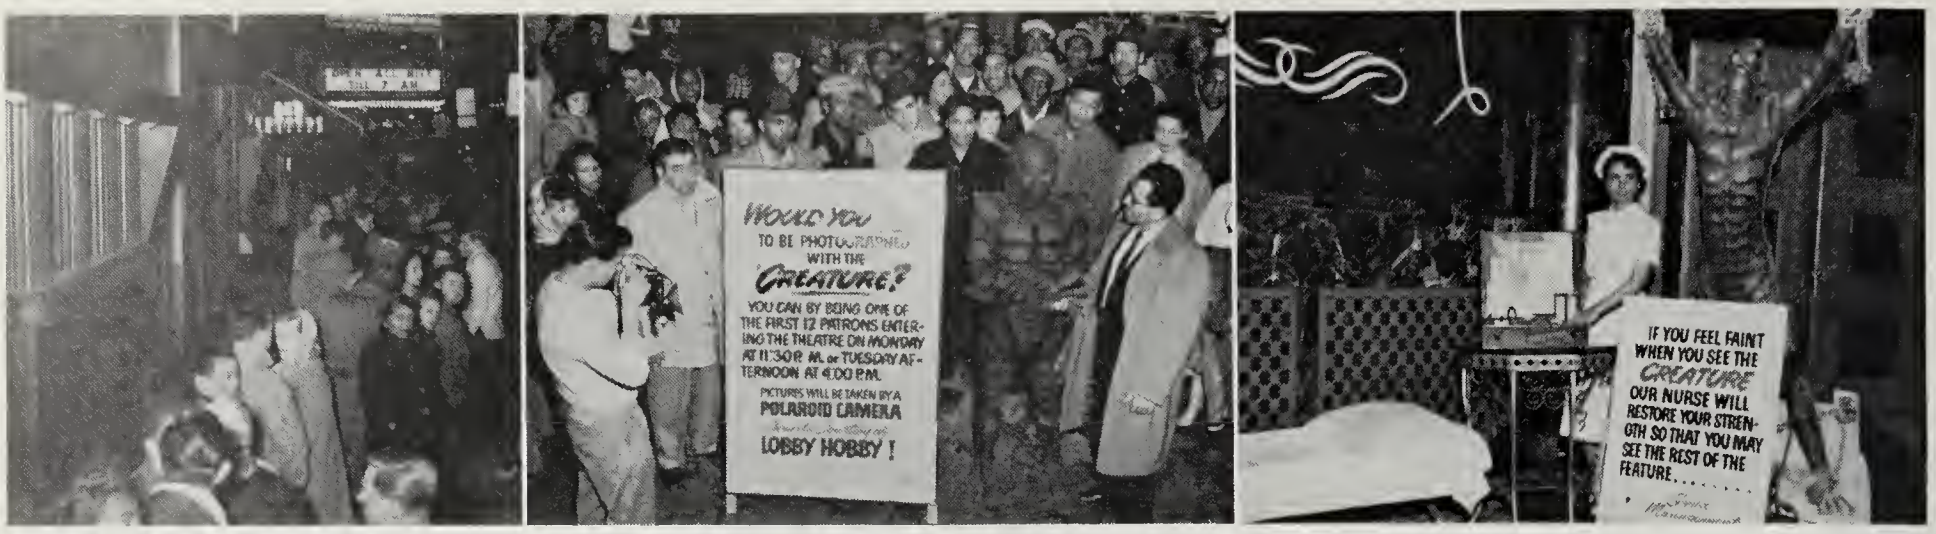
At the recent special advance preview of Warners' "East Of Eden," Michigan, Detroit, were, left to right, Mr. and Mrs. William Harris, Jr., parents of Julie Harris; Mrs. William Harris, III; and M. W. Rose, manager of the theatre. In attendance were members of Motion Picture Council of Greater Detroit, little theatre groups, disc jockeys, radio commentators, women's editors, columnists, feature writers, and film critics.

Death came to two well known industry veterans. Foster H. Hathaway, owner, Ritz, Struthers, O., and the Starlite Drive-In, died suddenly at his home following an automobile accident. His mother, who lived with him was his sole survivor. Hathaway was FBO branch manager in Cleveland at one time and also was a local Warners salesman before entering the exhibition field. Jack O'Connell, Toledo, O., long time theatre owner, died in a Toledo Hospital. He had been in poor health and had frequently been hospitalized. He owned and operated the Loop, Toledo, and the Paulding, Paulding, O., at the time of his death. At one time he also owned the Avalon, Toledo, and the Madrid, Port Clitnon, O. His wife, Virginia, survives.

Wearing the original costume of the creature in "Revenge of the Creature" and appearing daily during the noon hour in front of the Hippodrome during the run of the picture, a model boosted attendance to SRO business, and the opening of the seldom used third balcony. Through cooperation of a neighboring jeweler, snapshots were made of the people who lined up to be photographed with the Creature.

Two state theatres have notified exchanges of summer closings. They are the Strand, Payne, and the Strand, Defiance. . . . Joe Shagrin, Foster, Youngstown, O., has made an excellent recovery from surgery and hopes to resume his regular Film Row visits shortly. . . . Back from Florida are Abe Schwartz, Lexington, and Lou Geiger, who handles theatre bicycle promotion deals.

Skirball Brothers are adding a 13th link in their theatre chain with construction of a new drive-in on Route 93 between Akron and Barberton. Plans call for accommodation of 1400 cars and playgrounds. Project is to cost an estimated $250,000. . . . RKO district manager Morris Lefko and branch manager Frank Belles brought back a lot of enthusiasm from the company's meeting in New York. . . . It is reported that Meyer Fine, Abe Kramer, and Leroy Kendis, who recently sold their lease on the Hollenden Hotel to out-of-town interests, are negotiating for the purchase of a 97-suite apartment building.



Detroit

Midwest Theatres, Inc., who own and operate the Battle Creek Auto Theatre, have announced the construction of their second drive-in on the west side of Battle Creek. The theatre will be known as the West End Drive-In. The theatre is being designed and equipped to use all new techniques, including full stereophonic sound. Sections of the theatre will be equipped for heaters. The theatre is being built and designed for 1,000 car capacity, but will open with 800. The concession stand will be the latest cafeteria design, and will be operated by Berlo Vending Company. All projection and sound equipment will be supplied by Theatre Equipment Company, Toledo, O., using Century projectors, Strong lamps, and Eprad Stereo-2 speakers.

Livonia, newly formed Michigan city, is about to get three theatre projects. The sprawling suburb, an incorporated township stretching six miles each way, was incorporated three years ago, has grown in leaps and bounds ever since. Andrew and David Bzovi plan a drive-in with swimming pool and recreation area. Charles Schaefer, Wayne, Mich., expects to install a 1,000 seat indoor house with a 1,000 car drive-in adjacent. . . . Ben Lefkowitz, concessionaire, is back from Florida.

At the Music Hall, William Loll was surprised to get a ship to shore phone call reserving two seats for a passing lake sailor. . . . C. N. Melvin, Pewamo, Mich., died recently, as did Arthur Potter. Potter, an IATSE member for 38 years, is survived by his wife and son Albert, also a projectionist. . . . The Park has reopened with James McKay operating, Abe Schweig managing. . . . Kenneth Grenke, former projectionist, Crystal, has replaced Edward Wenclasky at the Rogers.

Patricia Jane Eagar, 20, was the winner of the "Caine Mutiny" acting award. Prize, a year at the American Academy of Dramatic Acting was presented by United Detroit president Harold Brown. . . . Mr. and Mrs. John Thiele, Huntington Woods, Mich., and Ernie Geyer feted an old friend, Geoffrey Lumb, playing here in "The Solid Gold Cadillac." Occasion was a reunion of the four who toured Korea and Japan with the USO in 1946 and '47. Geyer, a native Detroiter, is retired. Thiele is with Jan Handy.

Crowds were attracted recently to the Broadway Capitol, Detroit, when some top publicity stunts paid off for U-I's "Revenge Of The Creature" coupled with U-I's "Cult Of The Cobra." A section of the crowd waiting to get in the theatre is shown on the left; in the center is a lobby stunt developed involving Polaroid cameras; and on the right is another lobby setup featuring a nurse and equipment said to be for restoring fainting victims.

A $353,956.75 damage suit filed in Sixtieth District Court last February by Julius M. Gordon, Beaumont, Tex., and two companies which he heads as president, against W. C. Gilbert and W. C. Gilbert, Jr., owners, Gilbert Building, has been dismissed on motion by the plaintiff. Gordon's original petition alleged he and the two firms, East Texas Theatres and the Jefferson Amusement Company, had been damaged by refusal of W. C. Gilbert, Jr., named as manager of the building, to approve East Texas Theatres as a tenant in the building. The petition alleged a former tenant of the Gilbert Building had moved into a new building erected by the Jefferson Amusement Company, with the Gordon enterprises agreeing to assume the tenant's unexpired lease in the Gilbert Building. This was claimed as permissible under terms of the lease. An attorney, acting under instructions of W. C. Gilbert, Jr., later notified the former tenant that East Texas Theatres was unacceptable as a tenant, the petition stated. Specifying no terms of settlement, the plaintiff's motion for dismissal of the suit stated that ". . . all matters in controversy between the parties have been amicably settled."

Hartford

Prizes were offered to patrons participating in a newspaper movie star scrambled names contest, promoted by George E. Landers, Hartford division manager, E. M. Loew's Theatres, in conjunction with the regional premiere of Columbia's "Three for the Show." For "New Orleans Uncensored," Landers went to town on street campaigning. Five thousand tabloid heralds were distributed on downtown streets by two models before and after opening. Tabloids were also inserted in newspapers, left in parked cars, and distributed in several residential sections. Several eye-catching five-foot cut-outs of Helene Stanton, featured player, were tied to downtown street corner posts.

Harry F. Shaw, division manager, and Lou Brown, advertising and publicity manager, Loew's Poli-New England Theatres, and Charlie Fellerman, MGM home office exploitation department, were in town in conjunction with "The Prodigal." The circuit hosted area press and other opinion-makers at a Bond Hotel luncheon.

Perakos Circuit plans to build a 900-car capacity drive-in at nearby Wethersfield were defeated with the town Zoning Board of Appeals denying application filed by John Parakos, assistant general manager, Parakos Theatre Associates, and Orin P. Kilbourn, West Simsbury, Conn., for permission to build the outdoor venture. At the same time, the board turned down the request of Attorney William E. Ewing, Jr., representing Parakos and Kilbourn, for a continuance of the hearing to a later date.

James Cagney, star, Paramount's "Run for Cover," had a fine time recently talking with exhibitors while in Boston. Mrs. Cagney accompanied him on the trip and they are seen here with Morris Simms, manager, Olympia, New Bedford, Mass., whose theatre is not far from Cagney's summer home.

Protestant clergymen, 800 strong, representing virtually every village, town, and city in the state, were recently guests of Willard Mathews, Majestic manager, at a special private screening of "A Man Called Peter." . . . Elaborate preparations for one of the most outstanding events ever to take place in Rhode Island motion picture history annals are fast taking shape. The forthcoming world premiere of "The Eternal Sea" scheduled at the RKO Albee on April 20, is the first such occasion ever to be witnessed in this State. A cocktail party, dinner, and reception held in the Officers' Club at the Quonset air and naval base, sparked the "kick-off" of the extensive celebration. The RKO Albee, itself, is being given a most thorough "face-lifting" in preparation for the event. The outer and inner lobbies are being completely refurbished and redecorated, and intense cleaning activities are undarway throughout the entire house. Initial plans call for several units of sailors, marines, seabees, and coast guardsmen to head a monster street parade, which will include gaily decorated floats, girls, military and school bands, and scores of other marching units. Searchlights, bunting, streamers, balloons, and colored garlands will frame the Albee itself. Naval planes, jets, and helicopters will circle the theatre during the height of the festivities. All of the the stars appearing in "The Eternal Sea" will visit the Albee, as well as studio executives, state and city dignitaries, the clergy, newspapermen, and radio and TV personalities. All in all, Dave Levin, Albee manager, has lined up a most pretentious program.

Leonard Romm has been appointed managing director and booker for the operation of Convention Hall, for which Walter Reade Theatres, Inc., has been awarded a three-year lease for summer operation.

Newark

Bernard Silverman, manager, Branford, and a veteran of 25 years in show business, was appointed district manager for the Essex County Theatres by Charles A. Smakwitz, zone manager for Stanley Warner Theatres in New Jersey. John Stanek, Fabian, Hoboken, took over the managerial reins of the Branford, and another aggressive showman, Frederick DeAngelis, will move up from the Sanford, Irvington, to manage the 3200-seat Fabian. In order to facilitate operation of the Zone, Smakwitz also announced a new realignment of districts. Silverman will have charge of the Capitol, Central, Regent, Ritz, Roosevelt, Stanley, and Tivoli, Newark, and the Embassy, Orange; Hollywood, East Orange; Millburn, Millburn; and Sanford, Irvington. Harold Widenhorn, who had supervised the Essex County theatres, now has charge of the Cranford, Cranford; Central, Jersey City; Capitol, Belleville; DeWitt, Bayonne; Fabian, Hoboken; Lincoln, Union City; Ritz; Jersey City; Regent and Ritz, Elizabeth; the Roosevelt, Union City; the Union, Union; and the Warner, Harrison. Anthony Williams has charge of the district formerly supervised by Joseph Lefkowitz, who resigned to operate his own theatres. Williams retains supervision of the Stanley, Jersey City. The other theatres now in his group consist of the Branford, Newark; Fabian and Regent, Paterson; Baker, Dover; Montauk and Capitol, Passaic; Oritani, Hackensack; Oxford, Little Falls; Royal, Bloomfield; Wellmont, Montclair; and Warner, Ridgewood. Smakwitz made known the winners of the first weekly Newark Zone prizes in the Movie Spring Festival. First honors, a $25 bond, was awarded to Adolph Finkelstein, manager, Embassy, Orange, for his "no cost" campaign in arranging the world premiere of "Murder at the Villa Capri," a film with many exterior scenes taken in Orange and Newark. Runner-up honors went to George Kemp, manager, Montauk, for his "He-Man Contest" on stage. The $25 bond for the best children activity was won by John Stanek. Bill Kirby, manager, Tivoli, received honorable mention for his PAL "fleaweight" boxing bouts on stage.

Industry employment sometimes seems uncertain, but there are many contrary indications in Albany and other exchange centers. Six U-I workers, reading in "Progress," company house organ, that a Washington group had served a total of 110 years, notified manager Norman Weitman they had been with U-I a total of 170 years. Weitman thereupon sent the editor the facts and kiddingly called the Washingtonians "the baby carriage brigade." The local sextet and their service segments, Mabel Miles, inspectress, and Jim Tunney, head shipper, 31 years each; Ethel Anameier, manager's secretary, and Jane Flynn, inspectress, 30 years each; Al Marchetti, head booker, and Catherine Burke, cashier, 24 years each.

Nat C. Rosen, moved by 20th-Fox from Albany to Pittsburgh as manager, was given a testimonial dinner in Canary Room of De Witt Clinton Hotel. Norman Weitman, U-I manager, and Norman Jackter, Columbia manager, arranged the farewell and purchased a gift for Rosen. He successfully managed the local branch for three and a half years, coming here from Philadelphia. The promotion to the driver's seat in the bigger Pittsburgh district was followed by the advancement of salesman Clayton G. Eastman to the top spot here to replace the departing Rosen.

Two exhibitors returned to their posts after Florida vacations, Clarence Dopp, operating in Frankfort, Northville, and Poland, and Lou Goldstein, owner, Schuyler Drive-In, near Utica, N. Y., and West Rome Drive-In, outside Rome, N. Y. Former assistant chief buyer-booker for Schine Circuit, Goldstein not only operates Schuyler and West Rome, but buys and books Harry Lamont's Riverview Drive-In, Rotterdam, and Vail Mills, Vail Mills.

The Fabian Spring Jubilee of Hits is being celebrated in theatres in Albany, Cohoes, Schenectady, and Troy, N. Y. Promotion, running, from April through June, is aimed at stimulating attendance via a variety of special events, contests, and campaigns. Richard Murphy, manager, Proctor's Troy, employed attention-getting copy to herald a two-for-one reduced matince scale. Schenectady houses have been spreading a "Fabian Theatres 1955 Spring Jubilee of Hits" slug through insertions for individual situations. Division manager Saul J. Ullman heads the drive.

Strand, managed by A. O. La Flamme, in conjunction with Albany Artists Group and The Knickerbocker News, scheduled a model contest for the former's Beaux Arts ball at De Witt Clinton Hotel, tied in with "East of Eden."

A sheaf of publicity for MGM's "The Prodigal" was garnered in Albany through the visit of starlet-dancers Darleen Engle, Jolene Brand, and Joan Pattie with the "Wheel of Fortune" float. The brunettes broadcast over WPTR, 50,000-watt station operated by the Schine interests, made appearances in the Teens' Department of Whitney's Store, downtown, and in Albany Public Market, uptown, and gave press interviews. Thousands of area residents viewed the spectacular float. The Hollywood contingent distributed autographs and discussed teen age problems during their 2:30 p. m. date in the department store, which Bill With, Palace manager, arranged with president Thomas B. Wheeler, Jr. The Misses were interviewed via WPTR by Elaine Drooz on "Luncheon at the Sheraton-Ten Eyck," where Jack Goldberg, MGM resident manager, joined them. Bob Stone, Des Moines-Omaha field representative for MGM, is accompanying the girls on an eight-week tour heralding key engagements.

Buffalo

The old Academy has been purchased by the Marine Trust Company of Western New York. The theatre was purchased from Michael Perna, who will continue the operation of the motion picture house until the bank has need for the property, which eventually it plans to improve "for banking purposes." The Academy goes back to Oct. 15, 1852. That's the date it opened as the Metropolitan. Motion pictures have been shown in the Academy for the past decade. It was a popular Bingo spot for several years, with the late Harry Dixon as manager.

Representatives from both distribution and exhibition from the east and the midwest attended the big testimonial dinner given by the Variety Club of Buffalo in honor of Dave Miller, recently retired as Buffalo branch manager, U-I. Miller was the first chief barker, Buffalo Variety Club. William D. Dipson, vice-president and general manager, Dipson Theatres, himself a past chief barker, was general chairman. Co-chairman was Myron Gross, Buffalo Co-operative Theatres, another past head barker. Others on the committee were Edmund DeBerry, Buffalo branch manager, Paramount; Arthur Krolick, district manager, UPT; Murray Whiteman, past chief barker; George H. Mackenna, managing director, Basil's Lafayette; and Albert F. Ryde, business agent, Motion Picture Operators' Union. Miller has been associated with distribution for 30 years, chiefly in the Buffalo and Cleveland territory.

The Eastman, Rochester, N. Y., will be "better than new" and ready for business in mid-May, the University of Rochester has announced. The final safety tests successfully completed, the ceiling, a section of which collapsed last Dec. 9, is undergoing the final touch of a $100,000 repair job. In addition to replacing the four ceiling panels that fell, the workers are installing 3,000 steel wire hangers designed to carry four times the ceiling's weight, and now are cleaning and repainting the walls and ceiling. Cost of the big repair job is being borne by the Eastman School of Music of which the theatre is an integral part. The theatre was not insured against damage of this kind.

Arthur Krolick, district manager, Paramount theatres in Buffalo and Rochester, journeyed to New York to attend the premiere of Paramount's "Strategic Air Command." . . . Many Rochesterians got about as close as they ever will to an Oscar when they visited Loew's. Lester Pollock arranged to display the Academy Award statuette brought back from Hollywood by Carl S. Hallauer, which was awarded Bausch and Lomb for that company's development of CinemaScope lenses.

State Senator Stanley J. Bauer has run into some outspoken opposition on his bill to permit certain theatres to sell alcoholic beverages at certain performances, and in a letter to The Cheektowaga Times, the senator complains that "misunderstanding" had arisen and offered the following explanations: "I wish to apologize for my so-called Theatre Liquor Bill which has created so much misunderstanding, agitation, and discussion. Last year I introduced this same bill without comment from anyone, and please be advised that the bill was primarily introduced for New York City. The only local theatre that could possibly be covered under this bill would be the Erlanger. Considering the fact that musicales, ballets, operas, and concerts are held in Kleinhans Music Hall where a bar is maintained on the premises, and the fact that a bar is located in the Memorial Auditorium where the Shrine Circus is held and where thousands of our children attend as well as the Ice Follies and the college basketball games, without either location contributing to juvenile delinquency or outraging public decency, I considered my bill quite harmless. More so after you really realize that my bill does not apply to the motion picture or outdoor theatres. Regarding the unfavorable, distorted publicity I have received in relation to this bill, I should at least have been afforded the opportunity of explaining it to responsible people or at least of advising them of the text and contests. This bill does not mean a thing to me, and to lay at rest your deep concern, I am willing to drop the entire matter and permit the bill to die in committee and never introduce it again."

Jeff Chandler, U-I star, enroute from Hollywood to the Virgin Islands for the location shooting of "Away All Boats," in which he is starred, recently arrived in New York for a second honeymoon with his wife Marjorie.

When Margaret Hayes was in to do some tub-thumping for MGM's "Blackboard Jungle," she went into raptures over the Hotel Statler's hot fudge sundaes and praised them to the skies in the course of an interview with Ardis Smith, drama editor, Evening News. The manufacturer saw the laudatory remarks and forwarded a gallon of the fudge to her. . . . Mrs. Lee Gross Adams, booker, UPT executive offices, postcards from Los Angeles where she is vacationing with hubby Dick, that she is "having the time of her life." The Adams planed to the West Coast and both expect to visit several of the motion picture studios. . . . Among those who have signed up early for the annual cruise of the Greater Buffalo Advertising Club, June 22-26, are Bob Boasberg, brother of Charles Boasberg, industry sales executive, and Elmer F. Lux, head, Elmart Theatres, and president, Buffalo Common Council. The outing of the club this year will be to Gratiot Inn on Lake Huron.

John Springer, former Rochesterian, now associated with RKO in New York, was in Rochester to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wildred A. Springer, and other relatives. Springer plans, in partnership with James Terry, to produce two feature-length films in Portugal. The first will be based on a noted novel, "Strange Houses."

Two well-known Buffalo projectionists have retired. They are Cecil Franklin, who had been stationed at Shea's Buffalo since 1928 and who before that had been at the old Loew's, now the Century, and Dave Hunter, a 22-year veteran of the Shea's Buffalo projectionists staff. Jack Sawyer, formerly in charge of projection for the entire Shea Circuit, is now at Shea's Teck as a control man for the Cinerama operation there.

Lester Pollock, manager, Loew's, Rochester, rounded up the talent for the annual Police Ball in Rochester, and he and Carl Hallauer, president, Bausch and Lomb, chairman, citizens' committee aiding the affair, were able to arrange for the appearance of the MGM star, George Murphy, now a studio executive. . . . The big MGM "Wheel of Fortune" float touring the nation to do some tub-thumping for "The Prodigal," hit here, and Shea's Buffalo ad-pub chief, Eddie Meade, lined up some good publicity for the visit. Three starlets accompanied the float and all were interviewed by various local radio and TV personalities. WGR-TV showed the float to its audience when it was run right into its mammoth studio for a telecast.

Lou Levitch, manager, Granada, Schine community house, put on a highly successful "Mammoth Showing on Modern Electric Living." The show was widely publicized and the theatre was packed. It was a special matinee affair, starting at 1:30 p. m. . . . Some 30 students from Ohio University visited the George Eastman House in Rochester and the other day as part of a holiday tour of Kodak Town photographic centers. The group was greeted by Oscar N. Solbert, museum director, and a film was shown on the history of motion pictures.

Glens Falls

Manager George Pugh is holding Saturday afternoon meetings of the Children's Safety Club in Schine's Rialto, where screen programs are presented under the sponsorship of local establishment.

Gloversville

Persistent probing by the police and close cooperation by the management solved the vandalism which did an estimated $2,000 damage to Schine's Glove Dec. 4. Three 17-year-old boys, one a discharged usher alleged to have borne a "grudge" against the theatre, were involved. An agreement was reached with parents to repay the theatre for damage done. Schine Enterprises, Inc., owner, Glove, declined to press a charge.

Hudson Falls

Schine's Strand was open the entire Easter week for afternoon and evening performances. A Monday afternoon Disneyrama was one of the special features.

Ogdensburg

John Free, who operates the Pontiac, reopened his nearby drive-in with a pledge to present Hollywood's finest pictures in CinemaScope, SuperScope and wide screen presentation.

The sports car race which Ralph Stitt and Ralph Rubin engineered recently with the engagement of 20th-Fox's "The Racers," Schine's Paramount, was nothing short of sensational. They got grand cooperation from the Central New York Sports Car Club, from one of the local newspapers and from WSYR-TV. John Duvall, official starter, Watkins Glen Speed Races officiated. There was a public address hook-up at the starting table and he talked for nearly three hours and kept the public interested all about why they should see the film. WSYR-TV sent a photographer to cover the event and he took around 200 feet of film at the start, out on the course, and at the final awarding of trophies. There were 52 cars competing and "the racers" were serious about the whole thing, as well they might have been, with such handsome trophies for prizes, inscribed by Kirk Douglas. The start and finish of the race was in front of the theatre. Approximately 75 drivers of Jaguars, MGs, Thunderbirds, Corvettes and other sports cars participated. The promotion brought crowds to the theatre and stimulated a considerable amount of interest in the film's engagement.

SAVEABLE REVIEW SERVICES were an innovation by MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR in 1936. Prior to that year many Trade Papers reviewed features and shorts, or at least listed them for reference purposes;—but none followed any uniform style or method that permitted saving in other than a heterogeneous glob in a scissors and paste pot scrapbook.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR changed all this! In 1936 it introduced a separate, saveable section, in which all reviews and indexes relating to any particular year were carefully brought to the executive theatreman for his current and future knowledge. Now imitated or adapted by most other Trade Papers, the basic method has never been improved.

But MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR went further than this! ONLY MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, down through the years, has maintained a 100% Review Coverage of ALL features and of ALL shorts, whether foreign or domestic, that were available to Executive Theatreman consideration. ONLY in MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR has continued to appear the MOST COMPLETE of all Reviewing Services. The record speaks for itself!

Income from the amusements tax in March, according to City Treasurer John L. Hoch, showed a decline to $11,092, March of 1955, from $12,033 in March, 1954. This was a decline of nearly nine per cent for the month. In January, 1955, it was even less, $10,683, but it rose in February, a 28-day month, to $12,136. Most of the decline in March, 1955, was due to a drop in attendance at paid sports events in that period.

The End Of The Affair (724)

DRAMA
106M.

(Made in England)

ESTIMATE: Fair romantic drama.

CAST: Deborah Kerr, Van Johnson, John Mills, Peter Cushing, Michael Goodliffe, Stephen Murray, Charles Goldner, Nora Swinburne, Frederick Leister, Mary Williams, O'Donovan Shiell, Elsie Wagstaff. Produced by David Lewis; directed by Edward Dmytryk.

STORY: In wartime London, writer Van Johnson visits with Henry Cushing, government employe, to get some background on a book and meets his wife, Deborah Kerr. They fall in love. During an air raid, he is injured and taken for dead by the visiting Kerr. Emotionally upset, she prays and later finds him walking into the room, wounded but alive. She refuses to see him again. He meets Cushing who expresses worry at Kerr's strange actions, which include going off alone at all hours of the night and day. He thinks about hiring a private detective but doesn't. Johnson, in a fit of jealous rage, does hire John Mills to report on her activities which include mysterious visits to a flat occupied by Michael Goodliffe, who preaches against belief in God or religion. Mills manages to steal her diary during a party and Johnson discovers the reason for her leaving him. It seems that when she thought he was dead, she prayed to God that if he were to live, she wouldn't see him any more, and she was living up to her promise while trying to discredit the existence of God with the aid of Goodliffe. She dies when she catches a heavy cold.

X-RAY: There are the names of Kerr, Johnson, and Mills which can be of some assistance and they do well by the characterizations called for. The plot is an involved one and is not assisted by an excess of conversation and debate on the existence of God and the part that He plays in furthering an illicit romance. The direction and production are adequate. This entry may receive its best reaction in the art and specialty spots, although playoff need not necessarily be limited to them as the film offers much in the way of romance and emotional experiences to femme watchers in any audience. The screen play is by Lenore Coffee based on the novel by Graham Greene.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program price.

AD LINES: "A Tale Of Illicit Love And Its Consequences"; "She Had To Decide Whether To Stay With Her Husband Or Flee With Her Lover"; "She Wanted Happiness . . . He Wanted Her At Any Cost . . . Her Husband Begged Her To Stay With Him And Return His Love."

IFE

Love In The City

COMPILATION
90M.

(IFE)
(Italian-made)
(English titles and narration)

ESTIMATE: Highly exploitable and novel entry for art spots.

CREDITS: Produced by Cesare Zavattini, Ricardo Ghione, and Marco Ferreri. "Invitation To Love," directed by Dino Risi; "When Love Fails," directed by Michelangelo Antonioni; "Love Cheerfully Arranged," directed by Federico Fellini; "The Love Of A Mother," directed by Maselli-Zavattini; "Love Comes To The City," directed by Alberto Lattuada; editor for American release, Harry Henderson.

STORY: "Invitation To Love" is set in a popular dance hall in Rome where boys meet girls, and oldsters and youngsters pair off in various dances. There are pick-ups and other romantic entanglements to the tune of different musical numbers. "When Love Fails" concerns itself with women who try to take their lives for a variety of reasons, and they tell their stories with appropriate flashbacks. "Love Cheerfully Arranged" deals with the topic of matrimonial agencies. A reporter goes out to investigate one, telling the proprietress that he is seeking a girl for a friend who has mental delusions. She arranges for him to meet a poor girl seeking any kind of alliance that would insure financial assistance for her family. "The Love Of A Mother," concerns a penniless mother without husband, position, or home who is forced to take her child from a wet-nurse when she can no longer keep the boy without payment. Since she has no papers, she can't get welfare assistance. She finally abandons the child. It is found and cared for, after which she puts in an appearance at the orphanage and the publicity from the case results in her rehabilitation. She decides to remain with the orphanage so that she can care for the children of others as well as her own. "Love Comes To The City" has pretty girls in all types of costume walking through the streets to appropriate music as hidden cameras catch the reaction of males they pass. Some follow, and the cameras follow them.

X-RAY: These shorts have been combined so that the end result is entertaining and pretty interesting. The feature can be exploited in regulation houses and in the exploitation spots, and it can also play in the art houses. For the most part, the casts consist of either minor actors or non-professionals drawn from on-the-spot sources, and a more realistic note is added as a result. In-the-street filming assists in getting the film across. Direction and production values are good. Drama, emotion, sexy girls in abundance, etc., are to be found here. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

AD LINES: "In The Spring A Young Man's Fancy Turns To 'Love In The City' "; "Men Wanted Only One Thing . . . 'Love In The City' "; "All Kinds Of Romance Are To Be Found In The City's Streets And The Result Is Unusual Entertainment."

The Wayward Wife

DRAMA
91M.

(Italian-made)
(Dubbed in English)

ESTIMATE: Interesting drama with Gina Lollobrigida to help.

CAST: Gina Lollobrigida, Gabriele Ferzetti, Franco Interlenghi, Marilyn Buferd, Renato Baldini, Alda Mangini, Nanda Primavera, Alfredo Carpegna. Directed by Mario Soldati; produced by Attilio Riccio.

STORY: Gina Lollobrigida lives with her professor husband, Gabriele Ferzetti, in a small town, and in the same house lives Alda Mangini, who is supposed to be her dearest friend until Lollobrigida attempts to kill her after learning that Ferzetti is to be transferred to Rome and that she intends to tag along. A series of flashbacks show that during her childhood, Lollobrigida used to spend summers on the luxurious estate of friends Franco Interlenghi and his sister, Marilyn Buferd. She finds herself in love with Interlenghi but is told that the affair canot go any further because she is his illegitimate half-sister. On the rebound, she accepts the marriage offer of Ferzetti, who boards at her home. Bored, she meets Mangini, who claims to be a countess. She introduces her to Renato Baldini and aids in her seduction, lending her apartment. They eventually break off and Mangini blackmails her into letting her come home with her to live. The climax comes in the stabbing which only slightly wounds Mangini. Lollobrigida tells Ferzetti the whole story and he realizes she was not entirely to blame. He throws out Mangini.

and they start life anew really in love with each other.

X-RAY: Femmes might find this entry particularly attractive what with deep emotion, illicit romance, and other angles that are found in yarns that appeal to women. Interest is held on high pretty much throughout, and the continental flavor adds to the attractiveness for art, specialty, and exploitation spots. Regulation houscs, too, can find the proper spot for the film. The cast is efficient and the direction and production good, while the dubbing is such that audiences can accept the end result with ease. A factor might very well be the tremendous amount of space garnered by Lollobrigida in a recent trip here and her wide popularity. The screen play is by Giorgio Bassani, Sandro De Feo, Jean Ferry and Mario Soldati, based on a novel by Alberto Moravia. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

AD LINES: "When Her True Love Could Not Be Had . . . She Was Ready For Anything With Anyone"; "She Had A Way With Men That Made Things Interesting"; "She Had A Husband But Lacked A Conscience."

MGM

Bedevilled (523)

DRAMA
85M.

(Eastman Color) (CinemaScope)
(Made in France)

ESTIMATE: Slow moving drama will need plenty of help.

CAST: Anne Baxter, Steve Forrest, Simone Renant, Maurice Teynac, Robert Christopher, Ina de la Haye, Joseph Tomelty, Olivier Hussenot, Jean Ozenne, Jacques Hilling, Raymond Bussieres, Victor Francen. Produced by Henry Berman; directed by Mitchell Leisen.

STORY: Steve Forrest and Robert Christopher, preparing to enter a European seminary to study for priesthood, take a holiday in Paris. Forrest meets an obviously frightened night club singer, Anne Baxter. Acting as her protector, Forrest is knocked out by men of underworld character Maurice Teynac, who seeks Baxter. Forrest finds her near Napoleon's tomb, and she says Treynac wants to kill her because she witnessed a murder. They hide out but are found by Christopher and priest Victor Francen. Baxter, in love with Forrest, is shocked to learn he is studying for the priesthood. Forrest tells the whole story to acquaintance Simone Renant, a fashion designer, who leads him to Teynac. Teynac explains that Baxter refuses to give him information concerning the death of his brother and orders Forrest followed. Forrest and Baxter hide in Francen's church, but Baxter, knowing she could endanger Forrest's way of life, slips out. She is gunned down by Teynac's men and Forrest arrives to lead her in a prayer.

X-RAY: The premise here is an interesting one, a future priest's last days of decision before turning his back on worldly pleasures. The background, Paris, is interesting and mood-inspiring. Nevertheless, the whole effort promises more than it delivers. The net result is a not too different chase film rather long on conversation. Performances are good, and Forrest shows considerable promise for the future. CinemaScope photography captures Paris' back streets faithfully. The fault is in the writing. Story and screen play is by Jo Eisinger.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program price.

AD LINES: "Three Days Of Decision Were Fraught With Danger"; "A Hunted Man, A Hunted Girl, Their Love Was Impossible"; "The World Of Flesh And The World Of Spirit Are Closer Than You Think."

ESTIMATE: Good programmer.

CAST: Dan Duryea, Jeff Richards, Keenan Wynn, Jarma Lewis, John Hudson , Harry Shannon, David Kasday, James Anderson, Richard Lupino, Peter Mamakos, Mort Mills, John Damler, Michael Dugan, Jen Carleton. Directed by Gerald Mayer; produced by Arthur M. Loew, Jr.

STORY: Rancher Harry Shannon is determined that no homesteaders try to settle on his property which he hopes to turn over to his son, John Hudson, and he even hires killers to drive them off. The last, Jeff Richards, refuses to leave and holes himself up in his canyon home which stands alongside a precious water well, As the attack starts, a wagon bearing James Anderson, his wife, Jarma Lewis, and their son, David Kasday, is forced to take refuge with him. Shannon and Hudson are both mortally wounded and want to call off the fighting but Duryea, their quiet unassuming bookkeeper who has tuberculosis as well as delusions of being a great soldier, takes over and forces Keenan Wynn and the other hired gunmen to carry on. He also destroys their water supply so that they are forced to either attack or die of thirst. Lewis is upset at having to remain and fight, preferring to run while Anderson does sneak away in the night. He is captured by Duryea's men and beaten to death. Lewis grabs a rifle and wounds Richards when he tries to stop her. She, too, is taken before Duryea and realizes he is mentally sick. She agrees to return and offer surrender terms to Richards. She realizes that Richards is right and helps in every way possible, as does the youngster. Duryea forces his men to dismantle a wagon and carry it to the top of an over looking hill and then roll it down afire aimed at the cabin. Richards, with homemade bombs, kills most of the men and blows up the wagon. Wynn and one other grab horses and Duryea's gold and depart without water. Duryea tries to attack the cabin singlehanded but runs out of ammo and bleeds internally. He dies after surrendering. Richards, Lewis, and the boy head back to the cabin.

X-RAY: Well-done and containing much in the way of action and suspense as well as colorful settings, unusual situations, good performances and better direction and production, this shapes up as a good supporting entry on the program. The simple story comes off well and interest is kept on high throughout. The screen play is by Jack Leonard and Earl Felton, from the novel by Alan Marcus.

TIPS ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

PARAMOUNT

Conquest Of Space (5407)

SCIENCE FICTION DRAMA
80M.

(Technicolor)

ESTIMATE: Space thriller will please science fiction fans and the younger set.

CAST: Walter Brooke, Eric Fleming, Mickey Shaughnessy, Phil Foster, William Redfield, William Hopper, Benson Fong, Ross Martin, Vito Scotti, John Dennis, Michael Fox, Joan Shawlee, Iphigenie Castiglioni. Produced by George Pal; directed by Byron Haskin.

STORY: Army volunteers man a space wheel circling 500 miles above Earth, which is to serve as a jumping off spot for the first rocket jaunt into outer space. Colonel Walter Brooke is in command. At the last moment, the destination of the rocket trip is changed from the Moon to Mars, and a picked crew, including Brooke's son, Eric Fleming, Mickey Shaughnessy, Phil Foster, Benson Fong, and others take off. Space veteran Brooke is physically and mentally unable to cope with the trip and his mind snaps after the Mars landing. He is accidentally killed in a tussle with Fleming. While waiting for the proper time to return to Earth, the expedition discovers that Mars is fit to support life and replenish the materials which are becoming scarce on Earth. A quake almost wrecks the rocket, but Fleming gets it off the planet in time for the return.

X-RAY: Science fiction fans and the host of kids currently interested in space stories form an excellent pre-sold audience for this entry. Producer Pal, noted for the excellent special effects in his productions, has done a careful job, resulting in some really interesting scenes, and the feeling is present that if space is to be conquered, this is the way it may happen. The cast is composed entirely of Hollywood unknowns, recruited from the stage, for the most part. Foster provides comic relief, and action sequences are well integrated. The Technicolor lensing aids the over-all effect. Screen play is by James O'Hanlon. This bears a Legion of Decency "B" rating.

TIP ON BIDDING: Fair program rates.

Berlin Express (574)

MELODRAMA
86M.

(Reissue)

ESTIMATE: Names should help reissue.

CAST: Merle Oberon, Robert Ryan, Charles Korvin, Paul Lukas, Robert Coote, Rheinhold Schunzel, Roman Toporow, Peter Von Zerneck, Otto Waldis, Fritz Kortner, Michael Harvey, Richard Powers. Produced by Bert Granet; directed by Jacques Tourneur.

STORY: A code message falls into the hands of the French police which alerts all Allied authorities that something is to happen at Salzbach, Germany. Among the passengers on the Berlin express which is to pass through the town is Frenchwoman Merle Oberon; her boss, Paul Lukas, a supposed German business man, in reality a German statesman working with the Allies on a plan to unify Germany; Robert Ryan, an American agricultural expert; Charles Korvin, French businesman; Robert Coote, a British educator; and Roman Toporow, a Russian lieutenant. They are suspicious of one another, and this is intensified when the train is forced to halt where a hand grenade planted by the Nazi underground kills an agent who posed as Lukas. At military headquarters, Lukas' identity is learned, but authorities determine to let him continue under his disguise. Lukas is kidnapped and Oberon asks fellow passengers to help find him. Ryan and Oberon are lured to a bombed and abandoned brewery where Lukas is being held. Ryan takes refuge in a huge beer vat and although wounded, he summons help in time to rescue Lukas and Oberon. Korvin kills the Nazi leader to throw Ryan, Lukas, and Oberon off the track, but in reality he was responsible for the bomb on the train himself. Korvin tries to strangle Lukas, but Ryan saves him. Korvin is shot trying to escape. When all concerned reach Berlin, they part a great deal more friendly than at the start.

X-RAY: When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of April 1, 1948, it was said: "Here is a suspenseful, exciting entry given almost documentary production. It is well-made and maintains interest on high from start to finish. All cast members are very good in their roles, and the story stands up. The on-the-spot filming also adds to the effectiveness. Based on a story by Curt Siodmak, it should please all meller and adventure fans. Director Tourneaur deserves praise for his work and technique."

ESTIMATE: Average programmer has names to help.

CAST: Barbara Stanwyck, Robert Ryan, David Farrar, Murvyn Vye, Liza Montell, Robert Warwick, Reginald Denny, Peter Coe, Alex Montoya, Robert Cabal, Anthony Numkema, Lala Chand Mehra. Produced by Benedict E. Bogeaus; directed by Allan Dwan.

STORY: Robert Ryan, wanted for the shooting of Sawbwa of Sakar Robert Warwick's son, makes his way to the isolated jungle home of Barbara Stanwyck, owner of a teak forest. The couple fall in love. Security officer David Farrar arrives as an elephant buyer. He admits his mission is to arrest Ryan for the murder of the Prince. Ryan flees into the jungle but Stanwyck follows and thus leads Farrar to his hiding place. Ryan is captured by Farrar. Taking shelter for the night in an abandoned hut, they are attacked by bandits, who, seeing Ryan bound, believe him to be a fellow thief and release him. Ryan escapes after driving away the bandits. The Sawbwa learns of Ryan's whereabouts and sends his own troops out. Ryan arrives at Stanwyck's house with the troops in hot pursuit. Next to arrive are Stanwyck and Farrar. They come to the aid of Ryan, who is shooting it out with the troops from inside the house. Farrar realizes that if the Sawbwa captures Ryan there will be no fair trial. Ryan finally surrenders when Sanwyck is wounded. Ryan is brought to the Sawbwa who orders his death. Before the sentence can be carried out, Stanwyck and Farrar arrive with an old letter from the dead prince that praises Ryan as a true friend. Thus Ryan is finally given time to explain that the Prince was dying of the plague, and when in a delirious state he headed for the village, he had to be shot to keep the disease from spreading. With Ryan now exonerated of a crime, he is free to join Stanwyck.

X-RAY: This action meller will appeal to undiscriminate jungle-film devotees. It contains abundant quantities of fisticuffs, gunplay, wild animals, and elephants, as well as the romantic touch. Names and other angles can help in the selling. Performances, production, and direction are fair. Screen play is by Talbot Jennings and Hobart Donavan from a story by Kenneth Perkins.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "Hunted By The Law And A Revenge-Crazed Ruler . . . The Jungle Was His Only Escape"; "In The Heart Of A Wild Jungle He Found Love And A Sanctuary From Death"; "Hunted Like A Wild Beast, The Jungle Was His Only Refuge."

ESTIMATE: Reissue of film classic should do okeh.

CAST: Victor McLaglen, Heather Angel, Preston Foster, Margot Grahame, Wallace Ford, Una O'Connor, J. M. Kerrigan, Joseph Sauerss, Neil Fitzgerald, Donald Meek, D'Arcy Corrigan, Leo McCade, Gaylord Pendleton, Frances Ford, May oley, Grizelda Harvey. Produced by Cliff Reid; directed by John Ford.

SORY: Victor McLaglen is the informer, who turns his pal over to the Black and Tans during the Irish rebellion, to his eventual death.

X-RAY: When first reviewed in EXHIBITOR in May, 1935, it was said: "Ably directed, this is highly dramatic and should have universal appeal." This was authored by Lam O'Flaherty. EDITOR'S NOTE: This film, with its background undated due to the locale, has proven one of the screen's all-time greats, especially for the better class and art house audiences. It should find a ready welcome upon its re-release.

TIP ON BIDDING: Reissue price.

AD LINES: "One Of The Great Films Of All Time"; "A Film Masterpiece Brought Back By Popular Demand"; "John Ford's Finest Flm; Victor McLaglen's Finest Performance."

African Manhunt (5430)

65M.

ESTIMATE: For the lower half.

CAST: Myron Healey, Karen Booth, John Kellogg, Ross Elliott, Ray Bennett, James Edwards. A Jack Rieger picture; produced by Jerry Thomas; directed by Seymour Friedman.

STORY: John Kellogg murders his commanding officer at a military post in coastal Africa and escapes into the interior. Reports arrive that he is hiding out at a native village in the Congo and Myron Healey is assigned to bring him back, with Ross Elliott, French African Corps, to act as guide. Kellogg has taken up quarters with doctor Ray Bennett and his assistant, Karen Booth. Suspicious that Bennett had smuggled out word of his whereabouts, Kellogg kills him and uses Booth as bait to lure Healey and Elliott into the doctor's house. Kellogg is overpowered, handcuffed, and with Booth accompanying them, the long journey back begins. Near a native village, camp is made and Kellogg overpowers Elliott, kills him, and makes off. He is brought back, but not before a herd of elephants has been aroused, with Booth saved from a charge in the nick of time. Threatened on all sides by animals and afraid of Kellogg, the native guides are reluctant to continue. They reach the Okandi tribe and find the natives preparing for a gorilla hunt. While Healy is huddling with the native chief, Kellogg forces Booth to unlock the handcuffs he wears and heads into the jungle, taking her as hostage. He is unaware he is heading straight into gorilla country. Healey rushes to Booth's aid. Kellogg meets a horrible death when attacked by the gorilla, which the natives kill. On the way back to the coast, Healey and Booth, now safe from their harrowing experiences, look toward a happy future together.

X-RAY: Photographed partially in French Equatorial Africa, this jungle thriller has its quota of action and wild animal shots familiar to similar type films. The animal stuff and scenes of natives have been well edited and pieced into the other footage. There are no names of any consequences. Original story and screen play are by Arthur Hoerl. It will do as lower half fare.

AD LINES: "Man Hunt In Gorilla Land"; "Desperate Men In A Bitter Struggle To Track Down A Killer In The Heart Of Forbidden Jungle"; "Mysteries Of The Dark Continent."

The Eternal Sea

BIOGRAPHICAL DRAMA
103M.

ESTIMATE: Good service film.

CAST: Sterling Hayden, Alexis Smith, Dean Jagger, Ben Cooper, Virginia Grey, Hayden Rorke, Douglas Kennedy, Louis Jean Heydt, Richard Crane, Morris Ankrum, Frank Ferguson, John Maxwell. Associate producer-director, John H. Auer.

STORY: Navy Captain Sterling Hayden in the early years of the war confides to wife Alexis Smith that he is to be given command of the aircraft carrier Hornet, and she hides her disappointment at not having him on shore. He learns that the Hornet has been sunk and Admiral Dean Jagger assigns him to train pilots at Quonset, R. I. Next he is assigned to take over the carrier Princeton from friend Captain Hayden Rorke, whose wife, Virginia Grey, is staying with Smith. As they are in the midst of an invasion of the Philippines, he cannot take over but can remain on board as co-captain. During the action, the carrier is sunk and Hayden sustains an injury which causes his leg to be amputated below the knee. At the Philadelphia Naval Hospital he masters the use of an artificial limb while watching the new Princeton being constructed at the shipyard. Determined to be in command when she is launched, he refuses to consent to being retired and is finally made skipper of the vessel when she hits the water. His career continues to zoom when he pioneers in jets operating on carriers and does well in the Korean action. As a reward, he is offered bigger positions but refuses saying he would prefer to work with disabled vets to show them that there is still a future despite their hurts and injuries.

X-RAY: A well-done yarn about an officer in the navy who fought his way to the top despite handicaps, this entry should hold interest pretty much throughout its running time, which incidentally could have been shortened a bit. The story is well-developed and played in fine fashion by the cast as a whole and particularly by Sterling Hayden, who handles the lead very well, and Alexis Smith, who backs him up at home. The direction and production are in the better class and the whole is aided by the use of official film clips in the action sequences. The screen play is by Allen Rivkin, based on a story by William Wistor Haines. With a little selling, this could do better than average. This was made in Hawaii.

AD LINES: "He Was A Hero By Any Standards . . . And The Navy Tried To Retire Him"; "A Two-Fisted Navy Officer Swings Into Action And Reaches The Top Despite Handicaps That Would Have Floored Any One Else"; "A Thrilling Yarn About The Navy And Its Men And Officers In Action."

Violent Saturday (510)

90M.

(CinemaScope) (De Luxe Color)

ESTIMATE: Gangster entry has names and punch.

CAST: Victor Mature, Richard Egan, Stephen McNally, Virginia Leith, Lee Marvin, Margaret Hayes, J. Carroll Naish, Sylvia Sidney, Ernest Borgnine, Dorothy Patrick, Tommy Noonan, Brad Dexter, Raymond Greenleaf, Donald Gamble, Rickey Murray, Robert Adler, Harry Carter, Ann Morrison, Kevin Corcoran, Donna Corcoran, Noreen Corcoran, Boyd Morgan, Richard Garrick, Florence Ravenel, Ellene Bowers, Bill Chapin. Produced by Buddy Adler; directed by Richard Fleischer.

STORY: Three gangsters, Stephen McNally, J. Carrol Naish, and Lee Marvin, arrive in Bradenville with plans to rob the local bank. Victor Mature, foreman of the local copper mine, discovers that his son has lost faith in him because he stayed at his job during the war and was not a soldier-hero. Richard Egan, mining company official, is plagued with a wife who is unfaithful. Egan is befriended by Virginia Leith, the mine nurse. Bank manager Tom Noonan derives unnatural pleasure out of watching the lovely figure of Leith. Noonan even secretly peeks at Leith as she disrobes in her hotel room. Egan and wife Margaret Hayes discuss their situation and decide to start life anew in another town. McNally and crew decide upon an Amish farm owned by Ernest Borgnine for a rendezvous after the robbery. The criminals kidnap Mature in order to use his car, and imprison him and Borgnine and his family in the barn. They then rob the bank, killing Hayes and wounding Noonan. Fleeing to the farm, the crooks discover Mature loose. He gives battle to the criminals, and manages to kill them with an assist from Borgnine. Thus Mature winds up a hero, while Noonan is restored to his senses, and Egan, jolted by Hayes' death, gets comfort from Leith.

X-RAY: This film contains a variety of ingredients which make for interesting all around viewing. Intermingled with the entry's major robbery plot are scenes of individuals battling personal troubles. These intimate portrayals, result in a film with a difference, and there is added interest in the overall entry. The story has an air of reality as well as good concluding action sequences. Screen play is by Sydney Bohem, based on the novel by William L. Heath.

TIP ON BIDDING: Better program rates.

AD LINES: "The Story Of A Town And Its People . . . And The 24 Hours That Changed Their Lives"; "An Intimate Study Of Real People Thrown Into The Path Of Crime And Violence"; "When Life Or Death Is In The Balance . . . The Real Heroes Show Themselves."

The Looters (524)

MELODRAMA 87M.

ESTIMATE: Good programmer.

CAST: Rory Calhoun, Julie Adams, Ray Danton, Thomas Gomez, Frank Faylen, Rod Williams, Russ Conway, John Stephenson, Emory Parnel, James Parnel. Produced by Howard Christie; directed by Abner Biberman.

STORY: Rory Calhoun, expert hunting guide in the Manitou Mountains, meets a mountain artillery unit headed for practice firing, headed by Major Russ Conway, and he is informed of their firing dates and times. Returning, he finds ex-Army companion Ray Danton waiting for him. In view of having saved his life during the war, Danton now feels free to request permission to stay on for a few days until he decides what the future holds now that he is broke. They hear a plane in trouble overhead and learn by radio that there was a crash. The next morning, they set out to locate it. Surviving are Frank Faylen, middle-aged retired Navy petty officer; Thomas Gomez, who claims to be financier; model Julie Adams in a mink coat; and wounded co-pilot Rod Williams. There are no other survivors. Gomez finds a box with much cash and it comes out he is really a clerk in a stock office who takes the opportunity to try and become wealthy by keeping the money. Danton declares himself in and since they both have rifles, they hold the others at bay, forcing Calhoun to lead them towards safety. Williams is killed by Danton for slowing progress, as is Gomez during a showdown between the pair. On the edge of the army's target sight, Danton decides to kill the others and go on alone with the strongbox, only to find that Gomez had substituted paper for the money which he hid. As the firing commences, Calhoun and Danton battle it out with Danton getting hit by a shell. Calhoun and Adams are in love and she decides to stay on with him, while Faylen heads for home and peaceful retirement.

X-RAY: There's lots of interest to be found in this entry of greed and adventure high in the mountains and it should make up well as part of the program. Suspense and a different background assist in putting the film across. The screen play is by Richard Alan Simmons, based on a story by Paul Schneider.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "Five Men And A Girl Marooned Atop A Mountain With Their Lives And A Fortune At Stake"; "When A Plane Crashes In The Mountains Carrying A Fortune . . . There's Bound To Be Trouble As 'The Looters' Go Into Action"; "A Suspense-Filled Adventure Yarn."

The Man From Bitter Ridge (525)

WESTERN 80M.

(Eastman Color)

ESTIMATE: Okeh western.

CAST: Lex Barker, Mara Corday, Stephen McNally, Trevor Bardette, John Dehner, Myron Healey, Warren Stevens, Richard Garland, Jennings Miles, John Cliff, Ray Teal, John Harmon. Produced by Howard Pine; directed by Jack Arnold.

STORY: Lex Barker is held up by Ray Teal, member of a bandit gang that held up a stagecoach, and made to surrender his horse and gun. He is next arrested by three members of a posse seeking the bandits, and they try to hang him as a gang member but are interrupted in time by the arrival of sheriff Trevor Bardette, who jails him. This has been observed by Stephen McNally, head of the sheepmen in the vicinity, and girl friend Mara Corday. The latter suggests straightening things out with Bardette, but McNally forbids her going into town to stir up more trouble with the cattlemen of the area. She does go and arrives in time to save Barker, who has been freed upon proving he is innocent, from being killed by Myron Healey, whose brother John Dehner is behind the recent wave of robberies and who is running for sheriff with the aim of eventually becoming governor. Barker, a special investigator for the stage line, asks McNally to help him by capturing Teal so he can talk in time to save Bardette's job. They find him and an attempt on his life convinces him he should talk. Dehner's men attack McNally's settlement but are driven off. A showdown ensues in town with Dehner trying to escape, but he is killed as are the others. Bardette is reelected and peace reigns while Barker and Codray decide to get married and to settle down in the area.

X-RAY: There's lots of action, gunplay, fighting, riding, and western fans should be pleased by the result which should round out the program neatly. The cast is okeh and the direction and production are good. The screenplay is by Lawrence Roman, adaptation by Teddi Sherman, based on the novel by William MacLord Raine.

TIP ON BIDDING: Program rates.

AD LINES: "He Had To Come Up With Some Answers Or Die"; "Fast-Moving Action Heading Your Way"; "He Had A Way With Guns And Women."

Strange Lady In Town (415)

MELODRAMA 112M.

(CinemaScope) (WarnerColor)

ESTIMATE: Entertaining entry needs sales push.

CAST: Greer Garson, Dana Andrews, Cameron Mitchell, Lois Smith, Walter Hampden, Gonzalez Gonzalez, Joan Camden, Anthony Numkena, Jose Torvay, Adele Jergens, Bob Wilke, Frank de Kova, Russell Johnson. Directed by Mervyn LeRoy; a Mervyn LeRoy production.

STORY: Greer Garson, red-haired and a doctor, arrives in Sante Fe to set up practice and to be near her brother, Army lieutenant Cameron Mitchell, having left Boston because a woman doctor was not tolerated there in 1880. She is a curiosity and her first patient, a man with a toothache, is brought by Lois Smith, 16-year-old daughter of Dana Andrews, widower and leading physician in the area, who also has a prejudice against women doctors. Smith is in love with Mitchell, who thinks of her as a nice youngster. Near her home is the church and mission hospital run by Father Walter Hampden and she helps out and restores the sight of a blind Mexican youngster via a simple operation. Her theories conflict with those of Andrews who had been giving his medical services free and he lets her take over completely. He's in love with her and later asks her to marry him, but she turns him down stating there would be a conflict between their beliefs. Her brother is accused of selling stolen cattle to the army. He escapes and openly allies himself with outlaws, and they try to rob the bank during a fiesta. Hampden is killed. The outlaws are cornered and killed. Some of the inhabitants pressure Garson into leaving, but Andrews announces that she is to be his wife as well as a practicing physician. He convinces both the crowd and her and they ride off together with Smith overjoyed at the outcome.

X-RAY: There are a number of things in this entry that should prove interesting to general audiences, an interesting yarn as well as a slightly different one, good performances, heart-touching moments, efficient direction and production, colorful settings and situations, and some action. With a little selling, this could wind up better than average and the names of Garson and Andrews may provide added stature. The story and screen play are by Frank Butler. Frankie Laine sings "Strange Lady In Town."

TIP ON BIDDING: Higher program rates.

AD LINES: "She Was The One Woman He Didn't Want In Town; But He'd Kill Anyone Who'd Try To Make Her Leave!"; "When Santa Fe Was One Big Gun—The Trigger Was A Boston Lady!"; "She Was A New Kind of Woman For Old Santa Fe—The Day She Arrived She Started Whispers—Whispers That Grew Into The Roar Of Guns."

Gate Of Hell

DRAMA 89M.

(Harrison)

(Japanese-made) (English titles)

(Eastman Color)

ESTIMATE: Outstanding entry for the art spots.

CAST: Machiko Kyo, Kazuo Hasegawa, Isao Yamagata. Produced by Masaichi Nagata; direction and screen play by Teinosuke Kinugasa.

STORY: Rival clans fight for power in 12th century Japan. Machiko Kyo impersonates the empress to decoy rebel troops and is protected by Kazuo Hasegawa, who falls in love with her, not knowing she is married to Isao Yamagata. When the Lord of the area rewards faithful troops, Hasegawa asks for Kyo in marriage and is spurned. Blinded by passion, he threatens to kill Kyo, her aunt, and her husband unless she submits to him. She ostensibly agrees, but convinces her husband to change sleeping places with her. Hasegawa, thinking to kill Yamagata, murders Kyo. Crazed with grief, Hasegawa pleads with Yamagata to kill him, but the bereaved husband spurns revenge, heartbroken that she did not trust him enough to tell him of her problem. Hasegawa becomes a monk to do penance the rest of his life.

X-RAY: The story, while a bit slow for western tastes, is not the main attraction in this Japanese prize-winner. The use of color in the film is breathtaking, with the tragic story unfolding against an Oriental background of unsurpassed beauty. The lush period costuming does much to enhance the overall impression, and occidental moviemakers could learn much from studying photographic techniques involved. Performances by the three leading players are, in turn, formal, befitting Japanese social structure of the time and powerful as the passions involved. Following the impressions created by "Rashomon" and "Ugetsu," this appears to be another art house winner, and it received an Academy Award for the best foreign film of 1954.

AD LINES: "Color Photography Hits A New Screen High In Another Japanese Masterpiece"; "The Pageantry Of Yesterday's Orient Clashes With Passions As New As Tomorrow"; "A Film Of Unsurpassed Beauty."

(German-made) (English titles)

ESTIMATE: Fair import for art spots and German language houses.

CAST: Christl Mardayn, Curd Juergens, Gardy Granass, Hans Putz, Richard Romanowsky, Leopold Rudolf, Ernst Waldbrunn, Elisabeth Stemberger, Paul Verhowven, Lotte Lang, Martin Berliner, Melanie Horeschovsky. Produced by Ernest Mueller; directed by Paul Verhoeven

STORY: Curd Juergens, barker for a carnival variety show, is considering accepting the matrimonial suggestions of his lady-boss, Cristl Mardayn. He also is aware that fun-house owner Richard Romanowsky is also interested in Mardayn. Juergens comes upon Gardy Granass, cashier, while she is in the act of committing suicide. He prevents it, and she discloses that she was made pregnant by cafe waiter Hans Putz and then was informed by him that he is to marry the cafe owner's daughter. Juergens goes to the cafe and manages to get Putz fired, but Putz ignores Granass and takes up with a rich woman. After various complications in which Juergens is led to believe that Granass is to marry Putz, the truth comes out and Juergens discovers that he is the one loved by Granass. Mardayn becomes engaged to Romanowsky and Putz, after having robbed his rich girlfriend, is carted off by the police.

X-RAY: The film is mildly interesting and it contains some element of humor. Its appeal, however, would be limited to German speaking audiences, with the possibility of art house exploitation. Screen play is by Hans Schubert and August Rieger from the play "Tingel-Tangel" by Hans Schubert.

AD LINES: "A Hilarious Mixup That Makes For A Million Laughs"; "A Carnival Story With A Twist"; "A Tender And Moving Tale Filled With Happiness And Disaster."

TWO REEL

Color Cartoon

THE MOVING SPIRIT. Kingsley International. 17m. This Technicolor cartoon portrays the history and development of the automobile, from its early battle for supremacy over the stagecoach to its present dominance over modern transportation. The evolution of the steam engine is traced to the point where it gives way to the gas engine. The development of the gas engine is then taken up in relation to its effect on the perfection of a practical automobile. Cars are traced through the early period of mass production and their use in wartime. It was the recipient of 1953 Venice Film Festival award and an honor scroll at the Edinburgh Film Festival. EXCELLENT.

Documentary

CHURCHILL, MAN OF THE CENTURY. British Information Service. 20m. As timely as today's headlines, and yet with a more lasting quality, this shows in a compilation of newsreel clips, the highlights of Sir Winston Churchill's career up to his 80th birthday. It is a stirring documentary and a complete recording of historical fact. GOOD.

FORMOSA: THE GUARDED ISLAND. 18m. Film Renters, Inc. This documentary can be sold as a timely subject if billed as "hotbed of the Far East." Mostly it is travelogue, with good native footage, with navy films added to point up the island's importance as an outpost. The subject is a Larry C. Moore production with narration by James Wallington. It has been cleared for security by the Department of Defense, Public Information Service. GOOD.

THURSDAY'S CHILDREN. British Information Service. 20m. This was voted the best documentary short of 1954 in the Academy Awards ceremonies. Produced by World Wide Pictures-Morse Films, narrated by Richard Burton, and written and directed by Guy Brenton and Lindsay Anderson, it deals with life of children at The Royal School for the Deaf, Margate, Kent. The handicapped youngsters are seen painstakingly learning what words are through exercises and games, practicing lip reading, and finally attempting speech. Burton's narration is calm, always interesting, and at times poetic, and the children, though handicapped, show heartwarming cheerfulness and courage. This look into a silent world deserves an extensive playoff. EXCELLENT.

Comedy

YOU'RE NEXT. Columbia—Comedy Favorite Re-releases. 18m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of June, 1940, it was said: "Using the old gags, the ape, secret panels, underground tunnels, etc., this still results in being pretty funny and might even be called inspired in spots. Walter Catlett is a not--too-bright detective tracking a mad scientist, who might have stepped right out of a horror feature. GOOD." (7434).

GYPPED IN THE PENTHOUSE. Columbia—Three Stooges Comedies. 16m. Shemp and Larry meet over a few drinks and begin to tell each other how they came to join the Women Haters Club. In comparing notes they discover they had similar sad experiences with the same girl and with her boyfriend. The boyfriend, Moe enters and he is assaulted by the disillusioned lovers. The girl in question then arrives and is speedily dealt with. FAIR. (7406).

Associate producer, Mike Frankovich; directed by Fred C. Bannon and Thomas Carr. EPISODE ONE. "Black Raiders." 20m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of April, 1947, it was said of this reissue: "A western in serial form, this opens in a blaze of shooting and action with Clayton 'Jesse James' Moore fleeing Missouri with his friend, John Compton, wrongfully accused of many crimes. In Tennessee, they meet Linda Stirling and her father, and help them fight off a raid on their ranch by masked raiders. This hooded band is led by Tristram Coffin, who has learned there is oil on the land, and is trying to drive off the settlers. Coffin plans to load one steamboat with dynamite, crash it at a dam and flood the entire valley. Stirling learns of the plot, but is captured and tied up on the dynamite loaded boat. Moore goes to the rescue, and boards the boat just as it blows up. This is okeh for all serial, western, action fans, even though it looks as if it is making a hero-idol out of a bandit. GOOD." The Shorts Parade the lively Brazilian tune is sung by the Dinning Sisters and played on the organ by Ethel Smith. Miss Smith also mingles in the antics of the three cartoon characters in a clever combination of live action and cartoon animation. GOOD." (54107).

FOUR WHEELS, NO BRAKES. Columbia—UPA Assorted Cartoons. 6½m. Pete Hothead, owner of an old beat-up car, is determined to get a new one. His wife wins a new car on a TV show at the same time that Pete is purchasing the same make and model at a new showroom. Peter arrives home and sees the car his wife won and mistakes it for the one he ordered. It is not the right color so he drives it back to the showroom and drives away in another, this one with no brakes. When Pete again arrives home he has half a car under him. EXCELLENT. (7503).

KEEP YOUR GRIN UP. Paramount—Casper Cartoons. 6m. Casper, the ghost, goes to the circus and frightens the performers. He then comes upon a hyena that is unable to laugh. Casper, determined to make the animal laugh, goes through a series of tricks. This fails to humor the hyena, but when Casper frightens the ringmaster the animal begins to chuckle. GOOD. (B14-4).

THE MAD HATTER. Universal-International—Walter Lantz Cartune Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of February, 1948, it was said: "Woody Woodpecker receives a call from the studio telling him to report for work with a top hat. This offers a problem for him, as he sets out to buy the hat. After a little trouble with the salesman, he finally gets the hat, and is all set to report for work. A gust of wind captures the headpiece, and proceeds to blow it in every direction. After a tough fight, Woody regains the hat, only to find that he has been fired. GOOD." (1352).

NURSE TO MEET YA. Paramount—Popeye Cartoons. 6m. Olive Oyl is a nursemaid. Popeye and Bluto try to amuse the baby she's minding. They do this by performing various tricks. Bluto attempts to eliminate Popeye from he scene. He almost succeeds by using Popeye's head as a golfball, but Popeye is able to get hold of his vitamin packed spinach. GOOD. (E14-4).

SWOONING THE SWOONERS. 20th Century-Fox—Terrytoon Topper Reissues. 7m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of October, 1945, it was said: "A cat named Frankie performs for an assortment of female animals. Although they enjoy his singing, it bothers a man trying to get some sleep. He throws a tomato at the crooner, which stops him, but he gets a pack of his public on his tail. As proper retribution for his act, the cats serenade him till the morning with Frankie's song. GOOD." (5504).

TREASURE JEST. Columbia—Color Favorites Reissues. 6½m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of August, 1945, it was said: "The Crow has a franchise on a treasure island, and when the Fox comes to dig for the buried wealth the Crow informs him that there is a slight digging charge. The Fox refuses to pay and tries to get around the Crow with little success until he finally pays the two dollars. He winds up with a lot of gold-painted bricks, which sink his slight vessel, and then he really rips the island apart trying to get at the Crow. GOOD." (7610).

Color Travel

MIGHTY NIAGARA. MGM—Fitzpatrick Traveltalks Reissues. 10m. When first reviewed in THE SERVISECTION of March, 1943, it was said: "Here is a tour in color to Niagara Falls, with some very beautiful scenic effects and a sensible commentary. It is good travel fare. GOOD."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir:

Thanks very much for your letter enclosing the back issues of the MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR SERVISECTION which we requested.

In answer to your question about The Missourian, we are a daily newspaper of general circulation, serving the city of Columbia and the surrounding trade area. Our interest in your publication lies in our regular weekly feature page of the entertainment world.

Each week we run a page, in cooperation with the local theatres, television station, radio station, concert series, etc., listing the coming events for the next week. We also run feature stories about the stars in each medium, short reviews of the coming movies, and background information about special attractions of the movies.

We use your publication, through the movie operators, for much information about the films. The files I requested were for one of the drive-in operators, Herbert Jeans, Parkade Drive-In. He had supplied us with his copies for use on the page and we inadvertently lost them. These will enable us to complete his files again.

Thanks very much for your prompt cooperation.

Yours very truly,
ROBERT O. BUZBEE,
Advertising Manager.

Columbia, Mo.

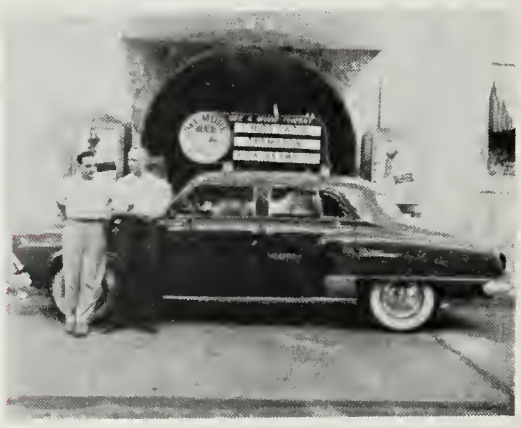
Dear Sir:

We small exhibitors have a problem in trying to do business with the offices in Philadelphia from up here. The print situation is something else again; we are asked to pay top price for features, then try and get the print. This is unfair, too, in that if it gets too late there is nothing left in it for us as the people are only going to see new shows, as they call them. While we are also playing new product, though late, they say why see that old one. Let's go see the so and so at Sunbury, which creates the problem for us all. The producer could correct this and should, since I see that they are making more money than ever. I wonder if you know just why it is that the rest of the exhibitors will not stick together. Should we be able to do this, perhaps some of our headaches would be solved. Those I have talked to say okeh, but when the time comes they won't do it.

C. D. WEISER

Middleburg, Pa.

Dear Sirs:



I work, sleep, and eat by your Pink SERVISECTION and use one in the theatre and the other in the business office. I misplaced my two copies of December 15 beginning with page 3885. Please send me two duplicates.

WINSTON R. TANNER
Box 355

Kenbridge, Va.

Dear Editor:

It was with interest that I observed the National Screen Service travel-ad item in the Better Management section of the April 6 edition of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR. Would be very interested in the response that it receives around the country. My interest was sparked somewhat by the fact that I have been using a similar style frame for away from the theatre advertising with considerable success. The Auto-Marquee has been in use at the See-More, Seymour, Wis., for a full year now. The Auto-Marquee is built by a Mr. Wagner, Black Creek, Wis., and he has employed one at his Pix for several years with reasonable success, also. There are 10 or more in use in this section of Wisconsin at this time in both conventional and drive-in theatres. The photograph illustrates the sign in place atop an automobile. The Auto-Marquee is attractive and inexpensive and with it you take your attraction to your patron.

St. Louis Claims Right Of Nickelodian Seniority

ST. LOUIS—With the nationwide Golden Jubilee Celebration of the Nickelodeon beginning on June 5, St. Louis and Pittsburgh are battling it out for the honor of having had the first Nickelodeon.

Johnny Harris, whose name has meant "show business" in Pittsburgh since his father's time before the turn of the century, claimed that his father opened the first Nickelodeon showing motion pictures exclusively on June 5, 1905. St. Louis, however, claims that two small Nickelodeon-type theatres were opened in 1903 or early in 1904, to cater to persons at work on the construction of the St. Louis Exposition.

One, the Globe, was operated by a Mr. Gold, and a second theatre was located on the north side of Franklin Avenue between Sixth and Seventh Streets. Mound City pioneers add that a third was opened by a Mr. Meyers on South Broadway. St. Louis also lays claim to the word "Nickelodeon," tracing its derivation from the Odeon Theatre, deluxe amusement spot in St. Louis in the late 1890s and well into the 1900s.

Dear Sir:

I cannot let this occasion pass without expressing to you my sincerest appreciation for the cooperation we received from MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR which helped immeasurably in raising $430,435.49 for the 1954 Jimmy Fund Drive. Without you, it would have been most difficult to call to the attention of the exhibitors and the people in our industry the importance of furthering research to help children afflicted with cancer. Bill Koster joins with me in thanking you and the members of your staff for your invaluable help. With kindest regards, I am,

Sincerely,
THEODORE FLEISHER, Co-chairman

Gentlemen:

In a recent issue of the MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, an article stated that back copies of the Pink Review Sections were still available from the 1948-49 seasons to date. As my present collection is pretty well dog-eared by now and many sections are missing I would appreciate having a complete collection again. I am enclosing a check for $2.64 to cover seven seasons to bring me up to date. Your magazine takes the number one place in my office and without it I would indeed be lost. Please don't change a thing.

Dear Sir:

In renewing our subscription to MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR I am writing to you because it gives me an opportunity to greet you personally, and to tell you how much I enjoy thumbing through MPE each week. I have found many of your editorials most provocative and enjoy the vigor and spirit with which you write them. I wish you many, many years of continuing success with your splendid publication.

Dear Sir:

The Governor (George Leader—Penna.) has received your letter of Feb. 21 with the interesting editorial from the current issue of the MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR concerning Bingo. He is glad to have your views in the matter and wishes me to assure you that if any legislation is passed by the General Assembly regarding legalized gambling, including Bingo, it will receive his careful consideration.

Sincerely yours,
DAVID V. RANDALL

THE NOOSE HANGS HIGH

NEXT TIME YOU SIT and worry about the future of your job, or of your one-purpose theatre real estate, it might be interesting to project your thoughts beyond the current confines of product shortages, high percentage demands, and the expense of the new technical changes, and attempt to scan the larger canvas that should eventuate if toll TV becomes a reality.

Now, if the FCC is consistent with its past rulings; if all past legislation by the Congress both expressed and implied remains in effect; and if there is nothing phoney lurking behind some political or financial bush, toll-TV should not become a reality. All previous requests for the toll, or paid, use of the airwaves for controlled communication purposes, for theatre network TV, or for any other private and non-public use, have always been refused. Traditionally, the airwaves in their limited use span belong to all of the public. Radio and TV stations are permitted to use them with advertiser sponsored programs only if such programs are preponderantly of a public service or entertainment nature, and if the advertising is kept to a percentage minimum. So, unless the rules are changed, or the existing rules are offset by loaded dice, those airwaves won't be handed over to private interests for private exploitation and private profit.

But let's suppose that the spurious claims of "public demand for toll-TV," and of the "better quality entertainment" that toll-TV should make possible, results in some new and far reaching legislation. We will assume that toll-TV has now became a reality.

Everyone who owns a TV set has purchased a toll gadget, and the two or three companies that own the gadget patents have declared fat dividends.

Each of the 18,000 roofed and drive-in theatres of the U. S. A. has folded, because the 8000 or 10,000 individual owners couldn't bid in concert and match the $1-per-set or $30,000,000 per picture bid of the four national networks. Without any consideration of the loss of local jobs and local taxes, the federal goverment has lost a flock of income tax, plus about $250,000,000 a year in admissions taxes alone.

But the public is happy because it now has toll-TV, and the quality of TV entertainment is now as good as the old movie house used to produce. Zenith and the other gadget salesmen are happy because they sold a flock of gadgets. And producers are happy because now they are endowed by the TV networks and don't need to fight "those lousy exhibitors" in order to build a $12,000,000 gross on a $1,000,000 picture.

But, forgetting ourselves and all of the others who won or lost, something pretty bad will have happened to the U. S. A.

Phrased better than we could and adding much basic evidence to this thinking is the following quote from a speech by Senator J. William Fulbright as reported recently in The Saturday Review:

"There is . . . the narrowing effect inherent in the concentration of managerial control of the press, the radio, the movies—and, in the foreseeable future, television.

"Within the last 40 years, according to Morris Ernst, one-third of our daily newspapers have disappeared, and more than 3,000 weeklies have ceased publication. As of a recent date, 10 of our states did not have a single city with competing papers, and in the whole of America there are only a few more than 100 cities where one can find daily papers in competition. The pattern of concentration extends elsewhere. In radio, one-fifth of the stations are interlocked with newspapers. Four networks dominate national radio, while less than two dozen advertizers account for 50 per cent of network income. And in the film industry, five big companies exercise a dominant influence upon the industry."

Had Senator Fulbright been developing our hypothetical nightmare he could have pin-pointed still further that toll TV could reduce 8,000 to 10,000 individual theatre businessmen to four national networks. And, in order to dictate just what the public across the nation must pay for a particular feature attraction, it would only be necessary for the producer to sit down with a representative of some one network. Only two men would need to go into an office to make a deal. Let the trust busters try to prove price fixing, or collusion, ar restraint of trade under a setup like that.

So while there is some slight possibility that toll-TV could be the noose that could tighten on the throat of theatre business, this consideration may be only one small facet of a much larger interlocking of all news and amusement sources. Such an interlocking could put the noose on something much more important. In that noose could eventually be the very freedoms on which this nation was founded.

The trade press, including Mel "The Pipe" Konecoff, associate editor, MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, recently interviewed Eric Fleming, star, Paramount's "Conquest Of Space," on what it felt like to wear "apparel of the future."

NEW YORK
By Mel Konecoff

THERE WAS quite a lot of excitement last week in the heart of Times Square as the Paramount ushered in "Strategic Air Command" with proper ceremonies, newspaper, radio, TV, and photographic coverage of the event attended by stars, civic dignitaries, Air Force officials, industryites, and others.

KONECOFF

More significant than just an ordinary opening, the event marked the unveiling of the world's largest indoor screen, the Trans-Lux Luxuria Seamless Screen, which was used with new Paramount horizontal feed projectors to show off the latest advances in VistaVision permitting a huge screen image measuring 65 feet wide by 34 feet high.

Lighting and quality were good over the entire surface and the size of the picture was awesome, while the effect varied from scene to scene with aerial photography coming off particularly well on the vast area. It was clear and impressive and provided good sweep area to show off the color properly. Whether or not there was an illusion of depth due to the curved screen and aperture plate which gave the screen a bent appearance is a matter of individual opinion. This viewer found no illusion of depth although the photography was clear both in the foreground and background.

It was reported that close to 600 seats were rendered valueless because of the height of the screen.

Drive-ins would do well to investigate this type of projection since the larger ones could use it to spread a picture over their huge areas without loss of light or image quality at the sides.

The reaction to the latest VistaVision and "Strategic Air Command" was impressive.

MONEY NOTES: United Artists will spend a minimum of six million dollars this year to advertise their 48 pictures, as compared to $4,800,000 spent last year to sell 50 pictures to the American public. Thus spake Francis Winikus, director of advertising and publicity for the company, prior to taking off for a two-week vacation in Paris.

Concentrating on "Not As A Stranger," Winikus noted that a budget of one million dollars for advertising alone has been set for the film, of which about $550,000 has already been spent or allocated. This figure includes the $100,000 that was spent by the company some 18 months ago to exploit and help the book become a best seller, which it has been for the last 65 weeks with over 6,800,000 copies sold. About 33 million people have been exposed to it. The end is not yet in sight as a cheaper edition is to come off the presses shortly.

The campaign calls for luminescent 24-sheets to hit across the country in May which will sell day and night and will cost $45,000. Advance full page ads in a few select papers, plus a series of six ads in all exchange city papers prior to the July 1 launching, with a minimum of 300 lines will come to nearly $130,000. Advertisements in most of the national magazines close to release time has been set at $267,000. Supplemental ads in some smaller magazines adds another $5,000, plus trade ads, etc.

BROADWAY GROSSES

(As of this Monday)

VistaVision Big On Broadway

NEW YORK—Aided by a tremendous ad campaign, the Paramount's opening with "Strategic Air Command" in VistaVision rang up a healthy gross for the house to lead all Broadway business with the exception of the larger Radio City Music Hall, where "The Glass Slipper" continued to ring up great grosses.

According to usually reliable sources reaching MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR, the breakdown was as follows:

"Strategic Air Command" (Paramount). Paramount claimed this VistaVision attraction would hit $115,000 on the opening week.

"A Man Called Peter" (20th-Fox). Roxy did $15,443 on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, with the fourth week down to $29,000.

"The Glass Slipper" (MGM). Radio City Music Hall, with stage show, hit $90,000 for Thursday through Sunday, with the fifth week sure of $132,000.

"Mambo" (Paramount). Criterion dropped to $9,250 on the fourth and last week.

"The Wayward Wife" (IFE). Globe claimed $11,000 on the third week.

"Long John Silver" (DCA). Mayfair dropped to $9,000 on the third week.

"East Of Eden" (Warners). Astor reported $30,000 for the seventh week.

"Man Without A Star" (U-I). Victoria was down to $11,000 for the fifth week.

"The Purple Plain" (UA). Capitol expected the third week to tally $31,000.

"Blackboard Jungle" (MGM). Loew's State reported $33,000 for the sixth week.

Allied And TOA Take First Joint Action

FCC Extension Asked; Zenith Okehs Toll Limit

WASHINGTON — International Telemeter Corporation, controlled by Paramount, last week filed a petition with the FCC asking for an extension of the May 9 deadline for filing of comments on toll-TV until June 9. It was granted.

The Telemeter petition also asked that the rebuttal date be set back from June 9 to July 11. It was expected that a flood of petitions for extension would be received by the FCC, now that Paramount had broken the ice.

International Telemeter, 80 per cent owned by Paramount, has no petition pending before the FCC at this time.

Meanwhile, Zenith announced that it would be willing to accept a weekly limitation on the number of hours of toll-TV programming. Zenith general counsel Joseph S. Wright said that "we are so sure that toll-TV would not affect sponsored television that we are perfectly willing to suggest to the FCC, so there will be no possible doubt about it, that a limit which ought to be between 10 and 15 hours a week maximum, should be placed on toll-TV broadcasting by any one station."

This is the first suggestion that has been made about a time limit being placed on toll-TV broadcasting. Skiatron TV Corporation earlier proposed on behalf of its Subscriber-Vision that toll-TV broadcasts be limited to UHF stations.

Sam Israel Dies

HOLLYWOOD—Sam Israel, 55, Universal-International studio publicity director, died of a heart attack last week at his home. He had suffered a previous seizure over a year ago but had recovered and returned to his studio post and was at his desk the day before the fatal attack.

Israel, a newspaper reporter and editor in Los Angeles, New York, Omaha, and Des Moines before entering the motion picture field, was named publicity director at U-I in February, 1953. He previously had served nearly two years as assistant publicity director and prior to that had been publicity director, Eagle-Lion Studios, and special publicity consultant for Darryl F. Zanuck at 20th-Fox.

At the time of his death, he was serving as chairman, Studio Publicity Directors' Committee, and was a member of the board of governors, Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Israel is survived by his widow, a daughter, a step-daughter, and four sisters.

Pickford Awarded $15,000

HOLLYWOOD—Superior Court Judge Paul Nourse ruled last week that Samuel Goldwyn could not recover against Mary Pickford money that he spent to maintain their jointly owned studio property, except for $819 spent for utilities.

Pickford sued for $115,000 for not maintaining studio property, and the court awarded her $15,000 for repairs Goldwyn had neglected to make.

O'Shea, Owen Will Head Paramount Domestic Sales

NEW YORK—Paramount's domestic sales organization top echelon realignment was announced last week by George Weltner, in charge of the company's world-wide sales operations, in order to provide the greatest possible service to theatres exhibiting Paramount pictures.

Under the new sales structure, E. K. (Ted) O'Shea will be in charge of the eastern United States, with Hugh Owen in charge of the western United States. Weltner stated that Owen had been elected a vice-president of the Paramount Film Distributing Corporation. O'Shea has been a vice-president since Jan. 1, 1950. Sidney G. Deneau becomes assistant to O'Shea, and E. A. Fitter, Jr., has been named to assist Owen.

Robert J. Rubin has been assigned a top administrative post in the domestic distribution organization, and was elected a vice-president of Paramount Film Distributing Corporation.

Daff Sees 3-D Market

NEW YORK—The success being enjoyed in its early engagements by Universal-International's 3-D production, "Revenge Of The Creature," has convinced the company that 3-D still has considerable public interest if subject matter is properly considered and a limited diet of 3-D fare provided, it was stated last week by Alfred E. Daff, executive vice-president. U-I is presently considering several properties for production in 3-D, it was disclosed.

"As long as showmanship values are incorporated into our pictures and in the selling of them, there will continue to be a market for every type of film," Daff declared. From the start exhibitors were given their choice as to whether they wanted to play the 3-D or standard version of "Revenge Of The Creature." The fact that the majority of playdates so far have been in 3-D again proves there is a market for all types of presentation, Daff pointed out.

Republic Dissidents To Act

NEW YORK—The Republic Pictures Stockholders Protective Committee last week informed the Securities and Exchange Commission of its intention to investigate the stewardship of Republic President Herbert J. Yates.

Leaders Of Both Groups Invite Company Presidents To Top Level Meeting In New York On May 24

CHICAGO—A committee from the Theatre Owners of America composed of E. D. Martin, Walter Reade, Jr., Alfred Starr, and Myron Blank met last week in Chicago with a committee from National Allied composed of Rube Shor, Ben Marcus, Ben Berger, and Jack Kirsch to discuss the state of exhibition and the industry conference. This was the first meeting that has ever been held between Allied and TOA leaders on exhibition problems.

This joint Allied-TOA committee has wired invitations to the presidents of all film companies to a top level industry conference May 24 in New York to discuss and act upon the pressing and acute problems of exhibition.

The joint committee issued a statement that it felt strongly the "immediate need of this conference among these men of good faith in an effort to improve the relationship between the film companies and their customers to the mutual benefit of both." It also expressed its "firm belief that the industry conference as called is of the greatest importance to the industry and should be given top priority," and concluded that they expected that the film company presidents would "recognize the seriousness of the conference and would attend and cooperate."

A bulletin issued by TOA on the joint Allied-TOA meeting said that there was "complete agreement and unanimity of thinking that film and sales policies were exhibitor's number one problem" and that every effort must be made to obtain relief from their present suppressed position.

This bulletin expressed great faith in the industry conference and pledged that TOA would make "every sincere and honest effort to work for industry harmony and successful solutions to exhibition's problems. Short of this, the officers and directors of TOA will seek relief through any other means necessary."

Wage Extension Favored

WASHINGTON—Senate Labor Subcommittee hearings last week heard Secretary of Labor Mitchell urge the extension of the federal minimum wage law to theatres that are part of interstate chains.

Mitchell, first witness called on the administration's plan to raise the minimum wage to 90 cents an hour, said that only theatres that are parts of interstate chains would be affected. At present, no theatres are covered by the law.

Mitchell indicated that the administration is more interested in having the minimum raised, than in expanding the coverage of the law, although he did state that the committee might wish to extend coverage to all firms engaged in interstate commerce and who have employes not now covered by the act. This might affect certain distribution employes, although most are already covered.

Lichtman Insists On Arbitration Agreement Before Any Conference

HOLLYWOOD—Al Lichtman, director of distribution, 20th-Fox, last week stated that "it would serve no purpose" to call a round table discussion before the arbitration question is settled, and that "film rentals of the various distributors is not a subject for discussion at such a public meeting."

Lichtman's statement followed the recent action of TOA in joining Allied in its call for a round table discussion now in which film rentals should definitely be on the top of the agenda, and was worded as an answer to TOA president E. D. Martin's statement reversing the exhibitor organization's stand on the matter.

Lichtman stated that Martin's remarks, "caused me great personal distress. Vicious attacks on producers and distributors and dire threats of one kind of action or another cannot create the kind of atmosphere in which an intelligent, fair minded, open discussion of matters of industry concern can take place." Lichtman also stated that "no company can participate in a discussion of its film rentals and its sales policies in the presence of other distributors." The responsibility for production, sales and film rental policies must remain the responsibility of each particular company, he said.

Lichtman concluded that until "complete understanding" is reached on what matters can be discussed at a round table industry conference, and the atmosphere is cleared of "name-calling, vituperation, and threat, I must sadly conclude that it would serve no purpose to call such a conference." He then urged further efforts to complete the arbitration plan.

The reaction of exhibitors to the statement was immediate. Walter Reade, Jr., TOA board chairman, charged Lichtman with seeking to make the conference conditional on obtaining an arbitration system "satisfactory to distribution," while other TOA officials felt that Lichtman's statement "practically forces" exhibition to break off negotiations on arbitration.

An official of National Allied commented, "Don't be surprised if TOA now joins us in the proposed move to seek government redress." One official of TOA, who declined the use of his name, asked if TOA would join Allied in seeking government redress, referred to the phrase in Martin's statement saying that unless conditions in the industry are corrected, exhibitors will be forced into "desperate acts." The same TOA official answered Lichtman's statement that "no company can participate in the discussion of its film rentals in the presence of other distributors" by asking why distributors have not suggested "individual meetings with exhibitor organizations?"

Leonard H. Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, expressed his opinion as being strongly opposed to "any move seeking redress of exhibitor grievances by going to the government." Goldenson, who is also a leader of TOA, was asked what TOA's next move would be, but he refused to comment, explaining that such a question is an organizational one.

Arbitration Stalemate Laid To Three Disputed Issues

NEW YORK—With no date set for a new meeting, it was learned last week that three points of the proposed arbitration plan are still under dispute, and the feeling is in exhibitor circles that unless distribution gives in, the present stalemate will remain unbroken.

The three points in dispute are said to concern financing, pre-releases, and damages. Indications are that the committee of sales managers that would take up the remaining issues will not meet until the return of Al Lichtman, 20th-Fox distribution director, and perhaps A. Montague, Columbia vice-president of sales. Lichtman has been in Palm Springs recovering from an illness and is not expected back for two or three weeks.

AB-PT Earnings Doubled

NEW YORK — Leonard H. Goldenson, president, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, Inc., reported last week that estimated net operating profit for the 1955 first quarter was almost double the earnings for the same quarter last year, $1,917,000 or 45 cents per share as compared with $1,039,000 or 23 cents per share in 1954. Goldenson said the increase in earnings reflected substantial improvement for both theatre operations and the American Broadcasting Company Division.

With capital gains of $33,000 as against $77,000 last year, consolidated earnings were $1,950,000 or 46 cents per share as compared with $1,110,000 or 25 cents per share common.

Goldenson said that the favorable trend in theatre business since mid-1954 has continued through the first quarter. While the number of good pictures for the second quarter appears limited, a more favorable level of business is anticipated than in the same period last year when pictures were in extremely short supply.

ABC earnings are running well ahead of last year showing the benefits of improved programming, Goldenson reported. The board has nominated Sidney M. Markley as a director to fill the vacancy created by the death of Herbert J. Schwartz.

Blum Heads MPEA Group

NEW YORK—David Blum, director of publicity, Loew's International, last week was elected chairman, International Film Relations Committee, Motion Picture Export Association. He succeeds Leslie F. Whelan, 20th-Fox.

E. D. Martin, whose "call to action" statement was the occasion of Lichtman's release, said that "nothing in Lichtman's reply call for any revision in the TOA statement or position. Meanwhile Herman M. Levy, general counsel, TOA, gave assurance that TOA was prepared to "go forward" with arbitration negotiations, which "are definitely not dead."

Austin C. Keough Dies; Was Paramount Exec.

NEW YORK—Austin C. Keough, 67, a vice-president, secretary, and a member of the board, Paramount, died last week at New York Hospital. Keough, who had been with Paramount since 1919, was educated at Brooklyn public schools, Dartmouth College and Columbia University, which awarded him his Bachelor of Laws degree in 1914. A World War I veteran, Keough resided all his life in Brooklyn until very recently when he moved with Mrs. Keough to the Garden City Hotel, Garden City, L. I.

Barney Balaban, president, Paramount, issued the following statement:

"Austin Keough, through almost 40 years, had been as much a part of Paramount as the company's trade mark. Side by side with pioneer Adolph Zukor he had given the company spirit, integrity, strength. Those who worked with him—and over the decades their numbers had been legion—found him a tower of strength, a pillar of wisdom, a man of great faith, and deep religious convictions. In the field of motion picture law he had no peer. His legal work on behalf of the film industry's advancement was prodigious. His friends, as well as those who opposed him, had a profound and undeviating admiration for his ideals, his conviction and above all for his selflessness. Year in and year out he sacrificed his time, his health, his efforts for objectives he believed in full conscience could make this a better industry and a greater contribution to the American nation. The ideals of Austin Keough, great as they were for the motion picture industry, have left a glowing permanent imprint on the Paramount organization he loved and completely devoted himself to. Whilever Paramount endures, the name of Austin C. Keough—friend, adviser and beloved co-worker—will endure with it."

He joined the legal department of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation from which Paramount evolved, in 1919. In 1925 he was named general counsel, Publix Theatres Corporation, and in 1932 became secretary and general counsel and director, Paramount Publix Corporation.

With the reorganization of Paramount in January, 1950, Keough was named vice-president, secretary, and general counsel.

Immediate cause of death was heart failure. Keough is survived by his widow.

Conciliation Idea Spreads

NEW YORK—George Gaughan, TOA field representative, just returned from an 11-state trip for TOA, reported that other exhibitor organizations are considering following the lead of United Theatre Owners of Illinois in attempting to set up a local conciliation organization.

UTOI's plan is designed along the lines of an "interim relief" plan adopted by the Allied States Association board last February. If the exhibitor believes he has a grievance, he will submit the problem to the president in writing, and the president will appoint a committee of exhibitors, who will see if the complaint is warranted and then attempt to resolve the problem.

No Projection Standard Seen Near By Frayne

CHICAGO—Dr. John Frayne, president, Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers, told the society's convention last week that no single standard could be set up for all the new types of projection.

Frayne claimed that it was too early to determine how many of the non-interchangeable systems would reach commercial success, but claimed that it was not the duty of the society to determine which would survive.

Dr. Frayne declared that the introduction of new techniques, such as VistaVision and the Todd-AO process, has been made possible largely by the adoption of additional and parallel standards, rather than by junking old and tried ones. He stated that as the technical ferment continues, and possibly accelerates, there will undoubtedly be a continuation for some time of multiple methods of presentation in the theatre, with different standards applying to the 400-seat neighborhood theatre, and the large drive-ins.

Charles H. Percy, president, Bell and Howell, who also spoke at the meeting, declared that the motion picture industry has a direct stake in the passage of President Eisenhower's liberal trade bill, which is now before Congress.

He claimed that passage of the bill will increase importing and exporting, which will permit freer convertibility of currency and benefit film companies with blocked funds in foreign countries.

A method of testing audience reaction while the audience is watching a picture and unaware of the test was revealed to the convention at the second session. The plan consists of taking infra-red motion pictures of the audience and screen at the same time.

Color television has not yet approached the leadership of motion pictures, Donald C. Fink, director of research, Philco, told the society. He stated that the advantage held by motion pictures is due to the fact that the manufacture of film and its processing are much more standardized than the corresponding process of signal generation and transmission in color television.

Nathan L. Halpern, president, Theatre Network Television, told the convention that the establishment of quality standards are necessary for the further growth of closed circuit TV.

Criticizing "recent arrivals in the field, who are leasing and operating inferior equipment," Halpern said that novelty and experimentation are no longer enough. "More and more, closed circuit TV is being judged by its performance on a practical and regular basis."

Recent developments in VistaVision and CinemaScope were also discussed.

Arbitration 'Buried Alive'—Arthur

NEW YORK—Harry C. Arthur, Jr., president, Southern California Theatre Owners Association, last week withdrew SCTOA's representation at the arbitration negotiations.

"If arbitration isn't dead, they buried it alive," he said. "They're churning up air like a windmill and nothing will come of it."

B and K Earnings Rise

CHICAGO—David Wallerstein, president, Balaban and Katz, told the annual stockholders' meeting last week that earnings of the company had risen to $1,204,065 in 1954.

Wallerstein attributed the increase of $371,173 over 1953's figure of $832,892 to wide-screen and other technical improvements made during the past two years

Balaban and Katz sold the Colfax, South Bend, Ind., and the West, Galesburg, Ill., last year, and still has five houses to be disposed of to complete its divestiture program, it was revealed. The circuit has plans to expand when it is legally able to do so. All directors and officers of the company were re-elected.

Fulton Suit Filed

NEW YORK—Fulton Amusement Corporation filed suit for treble anti-trust damages of $300,000 against eight major distributors last week. It is charged that the defendants imposed unreasonable clearance in favor of the Fabian, Hoboken, and the DeWitt, Bayonne.

Cinerama To Enter Non-Theatrical Field

NEW YORK—The annual report to stockholders of Cinerama, Inc., revealed last week that the company has established a department to "produce or arrange for the production of industrial and government motion pictures in the Cinerama process."

Hazard E. Reeves, president, pointed out that the non-theatrical activities are outside the scope of the exclusive license to Stanley Warner covering theatrical films in Cinerama.

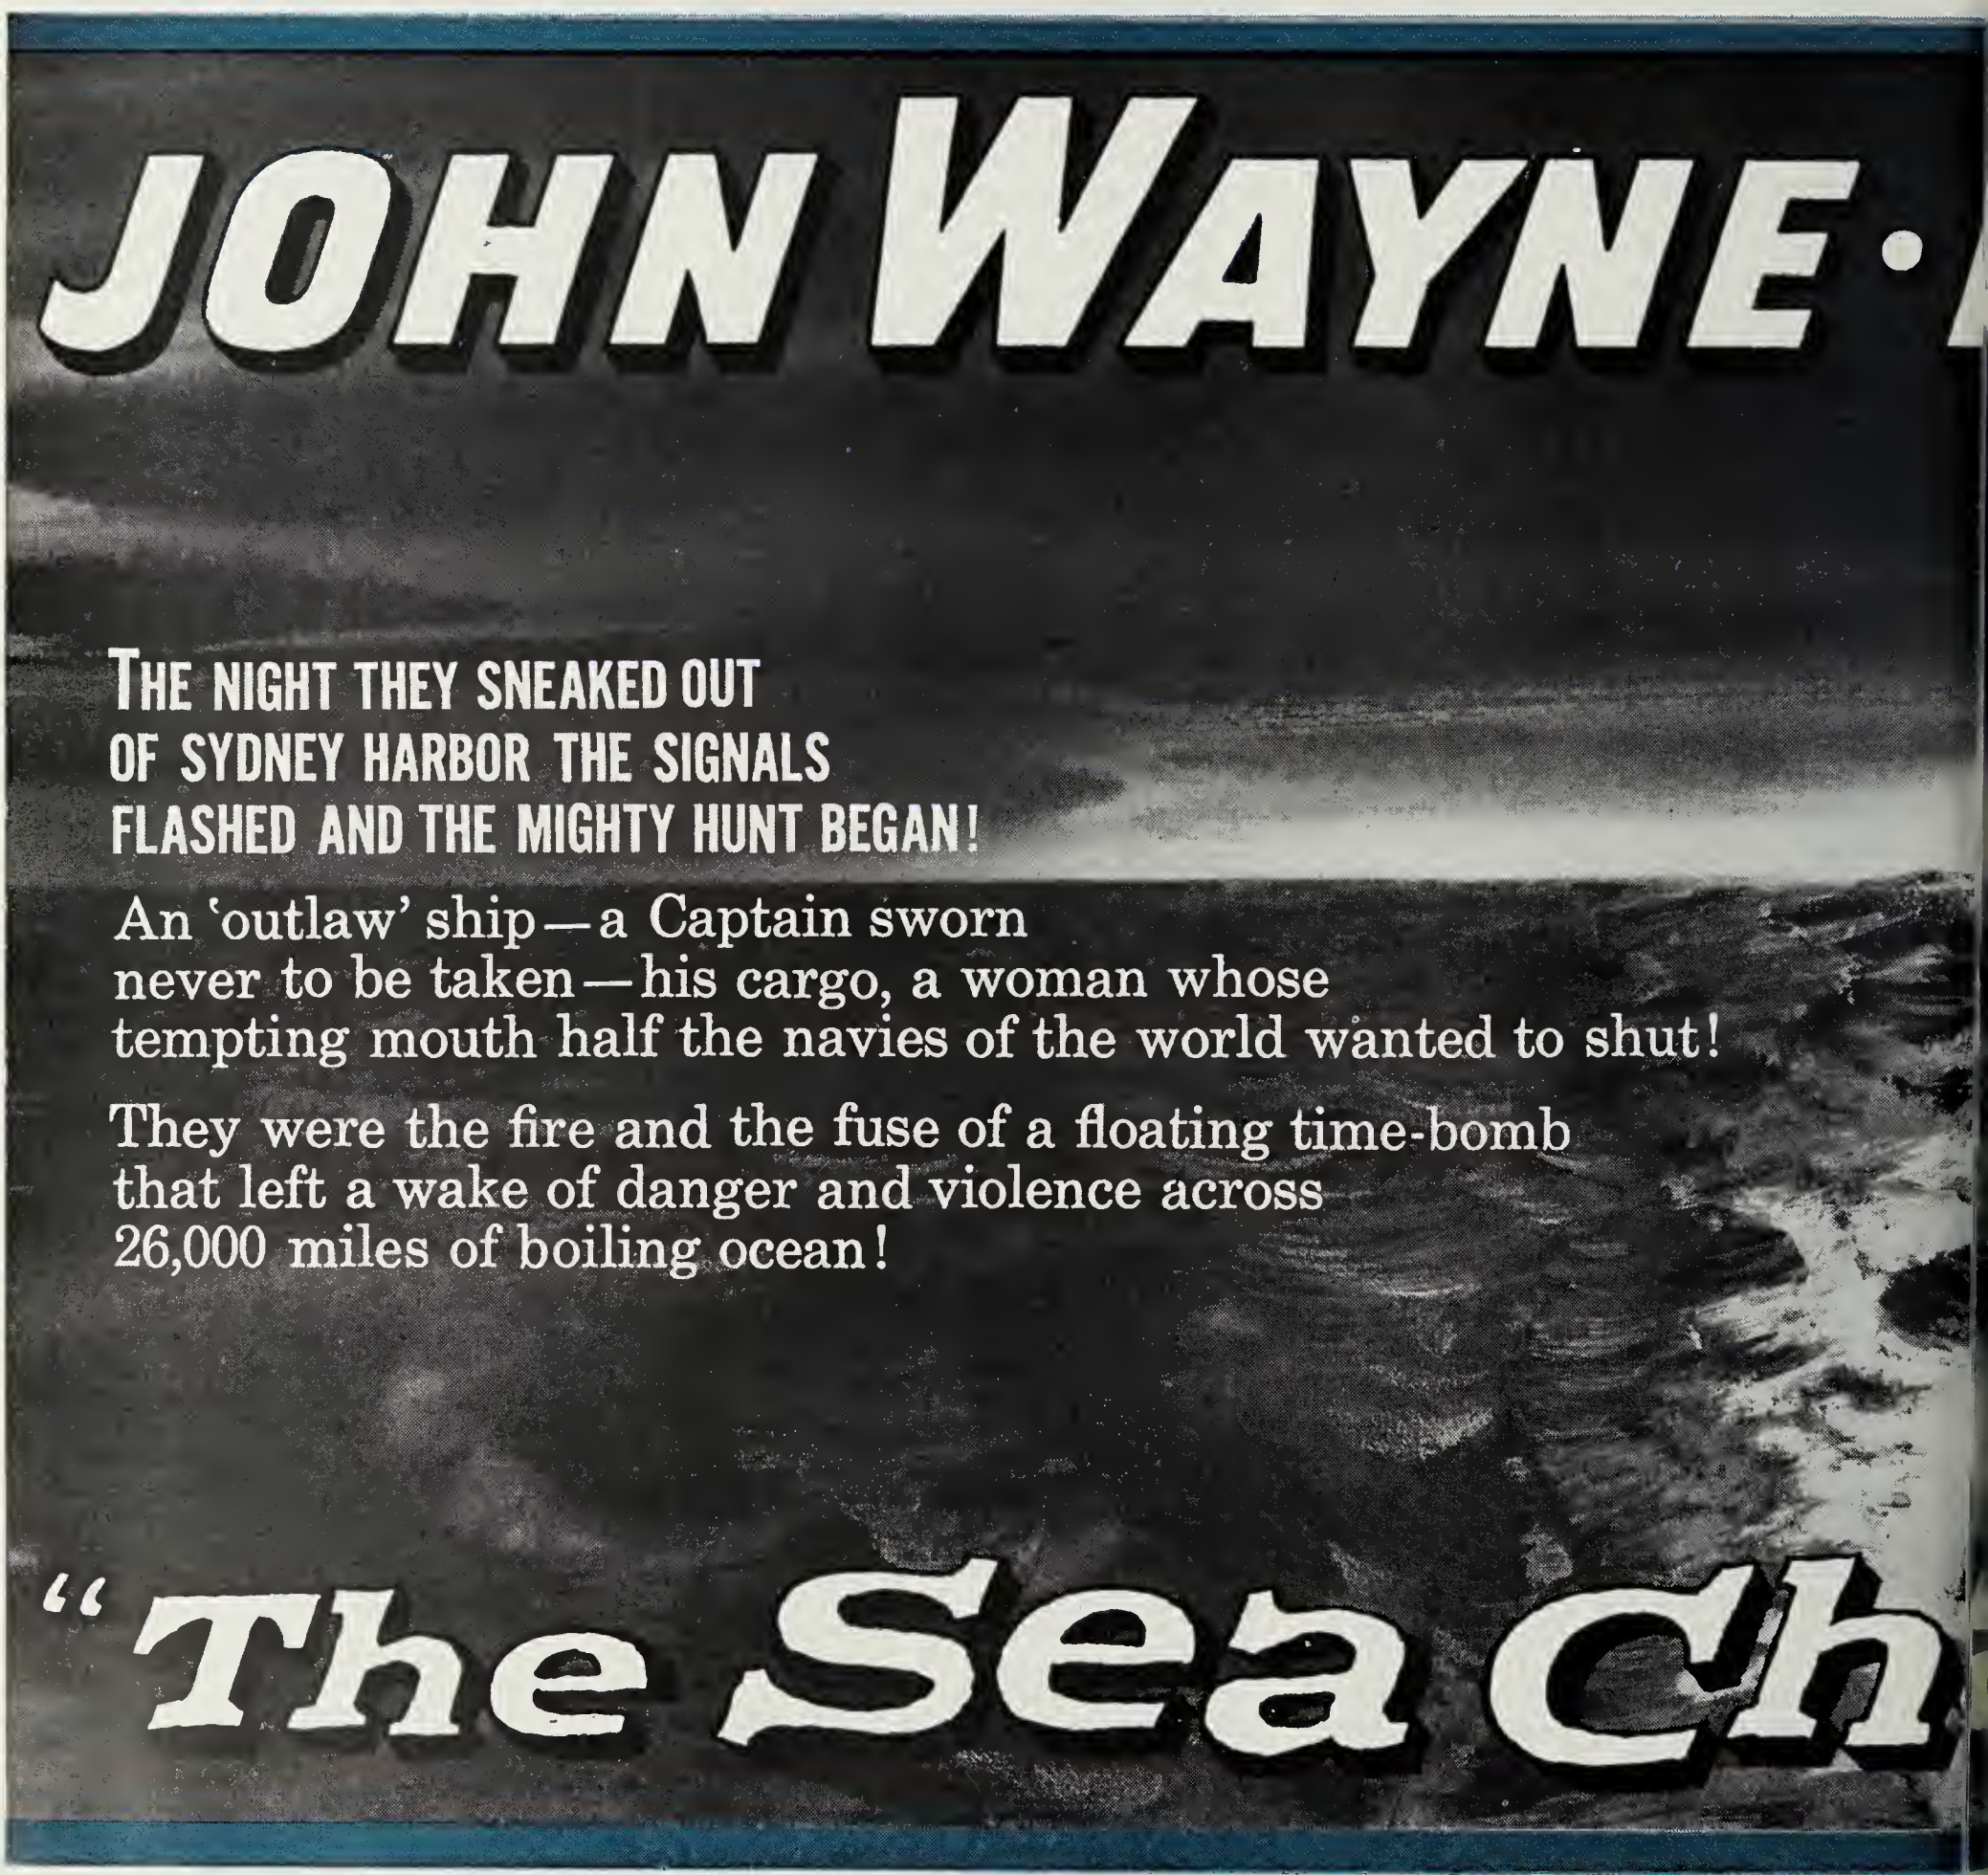
Net income of the company was rising in 1954, while in the last six months, ended Dec. 31, it was put at $115,551. Working capital improved by $396,591, due principally to non cash charges to income for amortization of development costs, and depreciation and obsolescence of fixed assets, and the extension of $150,000 due to Stanley Warner to July 3, 1965.

The annual meeting of stockholders will be held April 27 at the office of Reeves Sound Studies, Inc. Holders will vote on five directors and other issues.

NEW YORK—Murray Silverstone, president, 20th-Fox International Film Corporation, who recently returned from a two-months' trip through South and Central America, announced last week that he was pleased with the findings of his tour. Silverstone stated that he holds high hopes for Latin American industry expansion. He cited booking figures that show a 46 per cent increase on 20th-Fox pictures released in that part of the world during the first 15 weeks of the year. Broken down, the figures give South America a 59 per cent increase and Central America 33 per cent. In the first three weeks of the second quarter, 20th-Fox is running $1,000,000 ahead of corresponding weeks of last year. Silverstone attributes this rise mainly to the acceptance of CinemaScope.

Silverstone pointed out that Mexican industry representatives have invited President Spyros Skouras to come to their country so that he may assist them in their production of CinemaScope pictures. Skouras will probably accept the invitation. In reference to Mexico, Silverstone stated that he considered that country far ahead of any other, with the exception of Italy, in the construction of new theatres. The Sonore, Mexico City, owned by General Alberto Rodriguez, former president of his country, has an 82-foot screen.

The Argentina scene also reveals a growing acceptance of CinemaScope. Major Argentine producer Cesar Amadori is attempting to negotiate a deal with 20th-Fox which will enable him to obtain lenses and technical equipment for the production of two CinemaScope films. The exhibition end of the Argentine industry also seems vigorous, an example given being "The Robe," which has played a 54-week run at the Broadway, Buenos Aires.



In Brazil, the swing towards stereophonic sound has taken hold, the Brazilian government helping it along by allowing theatres with stereophonic sound to raise their admission prices as much as 80 per cent. 20th-Fox has a long term distribution deal with Brazil's Riberio Circuit, which includes 110 theatres.

Silverstone emphasized the importance of Latin America to the industry by pointing out that most companies cannot exist without the revenue from film exports and Latin America contributes 22 per cent of the foreign gross. Silverstone also stated that Latin American film production would help to open up more theatres and boost attendance in that part of the world. He pointed out that American films could not possibly be shown in certain Central and South American theatres because of the language barriers, in musicals, especially.

N. Y. Tax Collection

NEW YORK—New York City collected $2,041,152 in amusement tax revenue for the third quarter, $1,066,857 of which came from film theatres, it was announced last week. The total does not include the "breakage" being withheld by theatre plaintiffs.

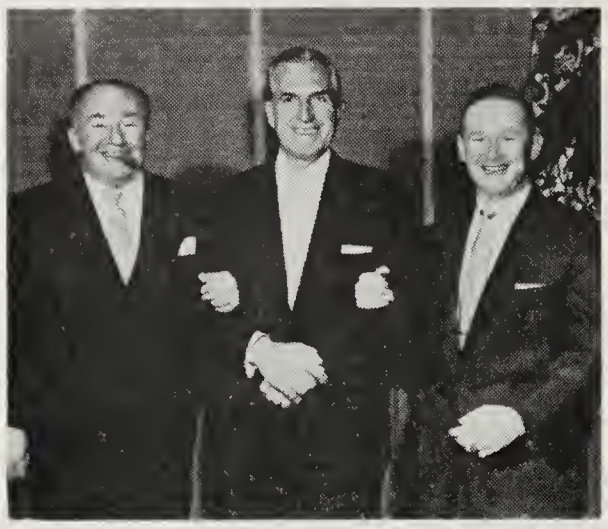
Sharp Decline Noted In Theatre Quantity

TORONTO—Latest indication of the declining motion picture business in this country is the revelation that there are 112 darkened theatres in the country, with 67 having closed in the past 12 months.

Clarke J. Appel, executive director, Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association, in revealing the figures, points out that the figure doesn't include those theatres which have disappeared from the industry through conversion to other businesses. Rather, these are the houses which are available for reopening should the business warrant it.

The Montreal area, often considered the most underseated area of the country, was the hardest hit with 40 shuttered houses. Toronto, always known to have more theatres than logically could be absorbed, was next with 32 houses with the padlock.



Winnipeg has 18 closed houses, while Calgary has 10, Vancouver six, and Maritimes six. From Appel's summary it can be gathered that there has been a drop of 24,240 chairs and 54 theatres across the country. This is found by a comparison of the number of four-wall theatres listed in the CMPDA directory. The theatre figures include 30 new situations, yet there are 976,080 chairs compared with 1,000,329 in the previous 12 months.

Theatres playing English-language pictures exclusively showed a marked decline in number. This fell to 88 in the current report from 194 in the previous one. The all-French houses showed a gain of 38 to reach 160, and those playing both English- and French-language films increased by 47 to 170. There is also one theatre devoted exclusively to legitimate drama and one altered to show Cinerama.

The drive-in summary shows 228 as of April 1, including those under construction, with a total car capacity of 92,770 Also listed were six drive-ins permanently closed and two that had been dismantled.

Reports indicate a great amount of interest in the Communion Breakfasts held in Saint John and in Hamilton. Despite inclement weather, some 75 members of the entertainment industry turned out for Mass and breakfast in Saint John. Those in Saint John attended a special mass in St. Peter's Church celebrated at the Shrine of Our Mother of Perpetual Help by Reverend Clair F. Johnson, C.S.S.R., and received Holy Communion in a body. Later, the group gathered at the Admiral Beatty Hotel where Father Johnson addressed them. He stressed the importance of the entertainment industry and the good they could accomplish by working together. In Hamilton, 60 members of showbusiness attended the second annual Communion Breakfast following

A spring blizzard in eastern Canada delayed the opening of a number of the drive-ins, although some managed to keep operating despite old man weather. The day after the Twilite, a Joe Dydzak unit, opened at London, the snow drifts closed the ozoner in, with the result it was able to announce it would open "as soon as weather permits." However, a week later, the "Now Open" sign was placed up. The opening of the St. Thomas operation was also delayed by the weather because a large portion of the screen was blown down along with other storm damage.

PRESIDENTS COME AND GO: A record turnout of 375 industryites was on hand last week at the Hotel Astor to attend the installation of new officers of Cinema Lodge as well as to honor retiring president Burton E. Robbins. The large attendance was termed a tribute to both the incoming and outgoing slates of officers.

Chairman Robert Benjamin, United Artists board chairman, introduced Al Schwalberg, past president, who paid tribute to the fine job done by Robbins in his two terms of office and presented him with a suitcase as a memento from the Lodge and his fellow officers.

Robbins labeled his experience in the position as wonderful and enrichening and thanked all for the wonderful cooperation during his term of office. He felt sure that new president, Max E. Youngstein, would guide the organization to new heights.

William I. Siegel, assistant district attorney for Kings County and past president of the Metropolitan Council, was principal speaker and installing officer.

After Youngstein took his oath of office, he remarked that the last time he took an oath, it cost his company $500,000 in anti-trust suits. A few other Youngstein remarks as he took his coat off, a custom when addressing any audience of any size, are: He would like his present in advance; he berated Benjamin for telling jokes bewailing that at this rate there would be no straight men left in the industry at all; he applauded Robbins for a job well done, which influenced his acceptance of the office; he will be no letter-head president but will take an active part in making this year the best in the Lodge's history with the cooperation of all; he believed the Lodge and its aims can do a great job for the industry as a whole.

Cohen Gets New Pact

NEW YORK—Warners announced last week the signing of Wolfe Cohen, president, Warners International Corporation, to a new five-year contract. Cohen joined Warners 30 years ago in Canada as branch manager in St. John, became Canadian district manager in 1936, and in 1944 came to the home office to take charge of the company's offices in Latin America and the Far East. In 1948, Cohen was elevated to president, Warner International, with supervision over the company's foreign activities.

"Great Debate" On Toll-TV Carries Across Nation As FCC Considers

WASHINGTON—Alfred Starr, co-chairman, Committee Against Pay-As-You-See TV, and Millard Faught, economic consultant to the Zenith Radio Corporation, last week debated the future effect of toll-TV if it is approved by the FCC, before an audience of 250 Washington correspondents at the National Press Club dinner.

Starr claimed that it would cost $1,000,000,000 dollars at $30 a set to install coin boxes or other devices on the sets now in use, and also claimed that toll-TV would ultimately drive free TV off the air.

Faught argued that toll-TV would bring to the public top-notch entertainment that is not now available, and also claimed that toll-TV would also help theatre owners by making it necessary to make many more feature films, which would then be released to theatres as well as to the TV audience.

Starr stated that the owners of toll-TV would be able to outbid all the other broadcasters for top shows and talent, which would naturally be sold to the highest bidder, and that therefore toll-TV would soon obtain a monopoly of the best shows that are now being seen free. He pointed out that when a channel is being used to show toll-TV, it cannot be used for another program, and in one channel situations, this means pay or no TV.

Faught denied that people would stay at home, glued to their television sets, and claimed that theatremen could exploit their wide-screens, crowd showmanship, outdoor drive-ins, and other non-home pleasures to make the threat of toll-TV a transitory hazard.

Rembusch Attacks In Windy City

CHICAGO—Trueman T. Rembusch, co-chairman, Organizations for Free Television, and Joseph S. Wright, general counsel, Zenith Radio Corporation, last week continued the great debate on toll-TV over Station WGN and the Don Lee Mutual Networks.

Clashing on Northwestern University's Reviewing Stand forum, with James H. McBurney, dean of Northwestern's School of Speech as moderator, the pro and con sides get thorough airing before the public.

Rembusch charged Zenith with "asking the FCC to throw the whole philosophy of broadcasting out the window, and when complete chaos results, you will say to the FCC, put things back together again." He answered arguments that first nights of Broadway plays could be put on toll-TV by saying that "most such plays are unsuitable for home consumption and would run afoul of FCC regulations regarding profanity." He said that what "sophisticated New York audiences find entertaining and amusing would have an entirely different impact in my home state of Indiana, for instance."

Wright linked pay-as-you-see TV with theatre television, but Rembusch pointed out that theatre TV uses coaxial cables and cannot black out any programs on the home TV dial, and charged that Zenith wished to have the public finance its decoder manufacturing business.

Rembusch said that he welcomed the support of the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters, and Wright charged that the recent resolution of the board of directors of NARTB was a "rigged proposition engineered by network representation on the board."

Levy Raps Broadcasters For Opposing Toll-TV

NEW YORK—Arthur Levy, president, Skiatron Electronics and Television Company, last week said that the recent resolution of the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters which hit at toll-TV was "the voice of the entrenched interests crying out for the status quo while refusing to consider the public interest."

Accusing the NARTB of "shirking one of its primary responsibilities, that of serving the public by bringing it the best entertainment to be had," Levy stated that "subscription television will come whether the NARTB likes it or not."

Levy claimed that toll-TV, when it comes, would be "a supplementary service," designed solely to bring the viewer the type and quality of TV program that he cannot get, and never will get, under present circumstances."

Levy claimed that the public overwhelmingly favors toll-TV, and that NARTB cannot afford to ignore this.

UA World-Wide Sales Meetings Launched

NEW YORK—United Artists' first world-wide series of foreign sales meetings will be launched in London on May 3 in a seven-day session bringing together more than 150 UA executives and representatives from 20 countries in Europe, the Near East and South Africa, it was announced last week by Arnold M. Picker, United Artists vice-president in charge of foreign distribution.

The London meetings, which will be presided over by Picker, will be followed by international conclaves in Tokyo in July and Rio De Janeiro in September.

UA distribution chiefs from the Far East, India, and Australia are slated to meet in Japan. The Rio convention will assemble key sales personnel from Latin America.

Max E. Youngstein, vice-president, will join Picker in the British capital.

Charles Smadja, vice-president in charge of European production, and Louis Lober, general manager, foreign department, will also participate.

Overseas regional heads attending include Mo Rothman and Walter Gray, Continental division; Montague C. Morton, managing director, Great Britain; Georges Rouvier, managing director, France; and various branch and regional heads.

Film Councils Urged To Support Exhibitors

CHICAGO—Arthur H. De Bra, MPAA community relations director, last week urged the delegates to the first annual conference of the Federation of Motion Picture Councils to work out plans for specific picture support at local levels with local exhibitors.

He said that Council support will be effective because their membership is part of the group that the industry must bring back, and that they can set the fashion of moviegoing which crowds will follow.

De Bra went on to say that the end of censorship gives the councils more opportunity as well as responsibility, and said that "you will find exhibitors more willing to cooperate with you."

Sid Blumenstock, advertising manager, Paramount, said that advertising is often on a lower moral level than the picture it represents. He noted that advertising men are extremely sensitive to what will bring people into a theatre, and suggested that the councils determine the responsibility of the local exhibitor for objectionable advertising before attacking the studio that made the picture.

England

Recent decisions of the British Board of Film Censors led to the formation of a committee by the British Film Producers Association to consider complaints by its members. British producers ordinarily submit scripts to the censor board before production, but a feeling exists that censors are more likely to withhold their approval of a script in advance of production or to put it into an "X" category than to throw out an already completed Hollywood picture. Robert Clark, BFPA president, and Sir Henry French, censor board president, held discussions recently which have encouraged producers to insist on some method of appeal from board decisions. The newly formed board is to consider any grievance that a member has against a decision of the board and to decide whether or not to press for an adjustment of the censor's decision.

BETTER MANAGEMENT

Valuable Exploitation Keys To Profitable Merchandising

"Tight Spot" Ballyhoo Aids Boston Playdate

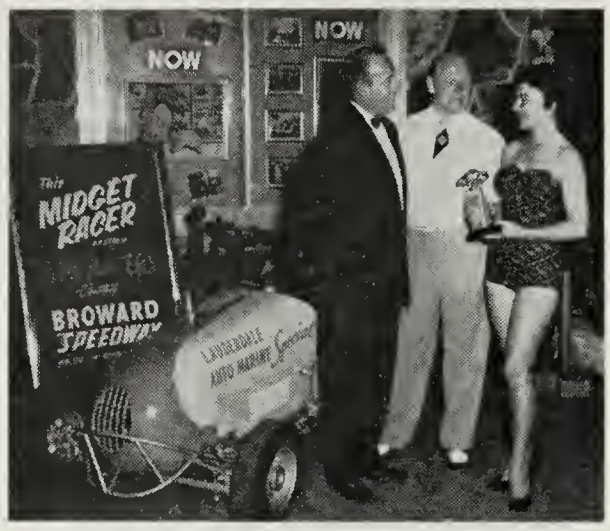
BOSTON—Radio contests and eye-catching street ballyhoos were Paul Levi's most effective salvos inaugurating his exploitation campaign for Columbia's "Tight Spot" when it opened at the Pilgrim.

Local radio station WCOP chipped in with a "Tight Spot" essay contest in which contestants submitted letters telling about the tightest spot they had ever found themselves in and how they got out of it. The contest ran for a full week and the 20 best letters received guest tickets to see the picture.

Station WHDH came through with a limerick contest on the popular Bob Clayton program. Contestants were asked to submit last lines to a limerick read on the air by Clayton. The contest ran for three days and the 10 best last lines received guest tickets for the theatre.

The Beech-Nut Gum Company joined in the overall campaign by donating 6,000 sample Beechies for street distribution. The Beechies were put into small envelopes marked, "When you're in a 'Tight Spot,' Relax. Chew Beechies." Two models dressed in polka dot dresses, as is Ginger Rogers in the film, carried trays with tie-in signs and distributed the gum on the main avenue two days before the opening.

Another unique street stunt with great publicity value utilized Boston's traffic meters. A number of small tags were printed with the following message: "In order to get you out of a 'Tight Spot,' the management of the Pilgrim is inserting a coin in the parking meter to save you from a possible overtime parking violation." A pretty model went around the busy parking areas with a quantity of these cards and placed a card in the windshield wiper of each car whose parking time was about to expire. A coin was also inserted in the meter to extend the time.



Newspaper advertising, window displays, street stencils and special theatre trailers capped Levi's campaign.

TV Boosts "Saturday"

NEW YORK—Forming a pattern for the national promotion of "Violent Saturday" keyed to the point-of-playdate, expanded newspaper, television, and radio advertising campaigns have been set by 20th-Fox.

The large-scale program, launched last week supporting openings at the California, San Diego, Cal., and the Palace, Rochester, N. Y., was being highlighted by the utilization of double the normal newspaper ad lineage and increased programming of TV and radio spots. In several situations, TV and radio spots are being purchased where they are usually not employed.

Campaigns in each situation are set a week ahead of openings.

Keith Hendee, left, manager, Gateway, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Bob Orberg and Vivian Whaley are seen recently in the lobby of the theatre with trophy awarded the winner of a Gateway Sweepstakes 25-lap midget auto race promoted as exploitation for 20th-Fox's "The Racers."

Columbia Names Robbins

NEW YORK—Columbia Pictures Music Corporation announced last week the appointment of Howard J. "Buddy" Robbins to the post of general professional manager. In his new position Robbins will act as liaison man with Columbia Pictures and the various record companies as well as play an active role in the promotion of the songs from Columbia films effecting tieups with music stores, TV, radio and other outlets on the local level for exhibitors.

That Something Extra Makes A Real Manager

PHILADELPHIA—The popularity of a theatre manager with his patrons has long been known as one of the secrets of a successful theatre, although frequently this factor is relegated to the taken-for-granted or intangible assets. It must be tremendously gratifying, then, to have a "thank you" note arrive in which a manager is warmly praised for doing that something extra in the line of duty.

Just such an instance was brought to the attention of MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR by Al Davis, City Line Center. Entirely unsolicited, the note read: "I don't know whether you heard about the excitement that happened at your theatre last Saturday evening. Only with God's help and the quick thinking of your wonderful manager, Mr. Helmke, my father, who had a severe heart attack, is still with us. I feel, as do the rest of my family, that we'll say a prayer for him every day for his alertness in treating my father as he did; and we hope to repay him in some small way to show him how grateful we are. With a man like Mr. Helmke managing your theatre you'll always have peace, good luck, and success. May God bless him and keep him well always. Gratefully . . ."

"Glass Slipper" Sets Huge Spring Bally

NEW YORK—The spring release of MGM's "The Glass Slipper" affords wonderful opportunities for merchandise tieups with stores featuring items seen in the April issue of Mademoiselle.

Exhibitors should contact the MGM field press representative in their area for help in making the tieups. MGM stated that its 30 field press representatives would assist in the stores' promotion of the film by arranging a screening for store executives and personnel involved in the promotion; furnish store with color stills, black and white stills, synopsis, music and special material such as blow-outs, etc., according to request for advertising purposes and window displays; and will work over ad and window copy and okeh rights to use photos and credits properly for the stores' protection.

They will also tie in "The Glass Slipper" promotion with local radio and TV promotions or programs scheduled for such exploitation; will assist at fashion shows with art, blow-ups, color, music, publicity, etc.; will help arrange theatre lobby displays and fashion shows on theatre stage; will bring costumes and props from the picture for windows and store displays; will tie in stores with Mademoiselle's distributors on stands, etc.; will include star or players from picture, if available, on tour in city for promotion; and will attempt "Glass Slipper" contests or searches, with store and media, with the community.

Exhibitors should take full opportunity of this offer by MGM to help sell the picture.

And Watch The Sun Rise

JACKSONVILLE—An unusually imaginative gimmick which, although particularly suitable for the promotion of RKO's "Rage At Dawn," can be used also for other films, was created by Spence Steinhurst, RKO fieldman, for the opening of the film at the St. John.

Steinhurst tied up with the Jax Meat Markets, a chain of supermarkets in the area, to hold a "Rage At Dawn Sale" from 5:30 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. the morning that the RKO release opened at the St. John. The sale was keyed to bargains that the public wouldn't be able to resist (five cents for packages of frozen foods, etc.). All shoppers who purchased $20 worth of goods received a pair of tickets, which the supermarket redeemed, for the opening day of "Rage At Dawn." After 8:30 a.m., regular prices prevailed at the markets.

Jax Markets advertised the sale and the picture on TV, in newspapers, and in all its stores via counter cards and displays at check-out stands and over the stores' public address systems. The theatre cross-plugged the "Rage At Dawn Sale" in its newspaper ads, trailers, and lobby displays.

PHYSICAL THEATRE

The importance of attractive lighting was not neglected when the RKO Kieth's, Washington, D. C., was recently remodeled. Note the completely lighted egg-crate ceiling (above) used in the lobby, and the cheerful atmosphere created in the foyer (below) through the use of properly lighted furnishings.

Devoted exclusively to the theatre structure, its design, construction, furnishings, maintenance, and specialized equipment, with a special section for drive-ins, devoted to their design and operation.

Another Reason Strong Rectifiers are Preferred

Only Strong Guarantees Selenium Rectifier Stacks for 3 Years

Within one year from date of factory shipment, replacement is made with no charge; within 2 years, at 33⅓% of replacement price; within 3 years, at 66⅔% of replacement price.

Efficient operation of each type and rating of projection arc necessitates a rectifier specifically engineered to its particular requirements. That is why Strong manufactures a complete line of rectifiers, which includes one for every type of lamp. Every Strong rectifier assures smooth output current, long life, low operating temperature, and flexibility in control. Transformer taps provide adjustment to compensate for supply voltage variations through a range of 10% above or 10% below the rated A. C. input voltage throughout the output rating range. Fine taps on the primary are connected to an 8-point external manually controlled switch which permits output adjustment while the arc is burning and without the necessity of reconnecting wires.

Strong HEAVY-DUTY SELENIUM PLATE RECTIFIERS

Designed especially for operation with CinemaScope, VistaVision and all drive-in presentation. Require no attention or maintenance. Dependable operation even in damp climates.

125-180 Ampere high-power rectifier for use with 13.6 mm regular, or 10, 11 and 13.6 Hitex carbons.

90-135 Ampere rectifier for use with 10 mm and 11 mm regular, or 10 mm Hitex carbons.

80-120 Ampere for use with 9 mm, 10 mm or 11 mm carbons.

70-90 Ampere for use with 9 mm carbons.

60-75 Ampere for use with Suprex type carbons.

All models may be used with angular or coaxial trim lamps.

Applicable whenever stacks become inoperative for reasons other than neglect or abuse. Replacement covers unit shipped collect from factory with defective unit shipped prepaid to factory and does not include cost of installation.

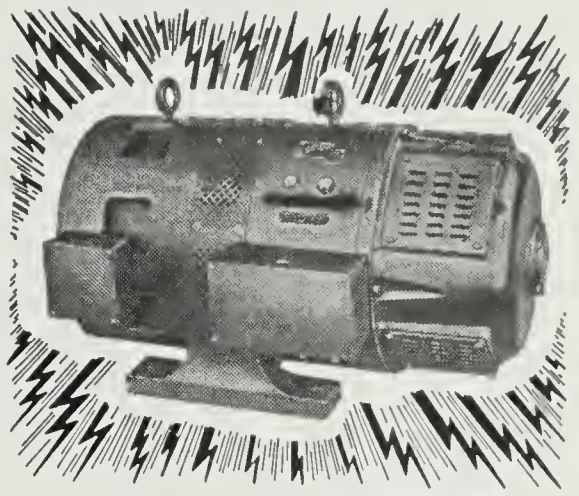
The Light Approach

Throughout the years the operation of a motion picture theatre has become increasingly more complex. In order to successfully run his house, today a theatre operator must know more than a little about projection and sound, building maintenance, staff training, concession operation, design and decoration; all this in addition to properly booking and then publicizing films. This adds up to quite a bit of knowledge and attention to details, and it means that an exhibitor must devote a good deal of his time looking for better and improved methods of making his theatre more attractive to the ticket-buying public.

With this great mass of detail facing him, the theatreman who can find something which serves more than one purpose is indeed fortunate. One area of theatre operation which comes under this happy heading is exterior and interior lighting. When properly used, lighting can do a great deal to enhance any situation.



First, and probably most obvious, lighting makes a theatre a safer place for the public. This is particularly true of the interior. If correctly located, lighting can act as an usher and help guide the patron directly to the auditorium by furnishing a bright path of light. Inside the auditorium the house lights during breaks, and the aisle lights during the show will enable the patron to locate a seat with a minimum amount of difficulty and confusion. Of course, they will also greatly reduce the risk of falling or bumping into objects in the darkened auditorium Lighting can be used in lounges and restroom areas to keep disturbing noises under control. A visit to the Radio City Music Hall, in New York, offers a demonstration of this point. Lighting and decoration were designed so that patrons, in most cases, will automatically speak in a whisper upon entering the main lounge.

Exterior lighting can play a major role in persuading the passerby to enter. A theatre front that is well lighted, possibly making use of colored projector or reflector lamps, or unusual designs outlined in lights, will attract attention and start "selling" a ticket. Spotlights played on interesting architectural portions of the exterior add prestige and dignity. A bright and cheerful box-office area is another unspoken invitation to enter.

The uses to which lighting may be put are many and varied. In this issue we have attempted to indicate some of the ways in which you can make light work for your theatre. It is a subject worth studying.

Interior And Exterior Lighting Needs Of Indoor Houses

A theatre front that is brightly lighted serves a dual purpose; that of furnishing the illumination necessary for safety, and creating a warm and friendly atmosphere that invites the public to enter.

LIGHTING at the entrance of a theatre plays an important part in attracting potential patrons from a distance. The floodlighted banner over the marquee, the well lighted attraction board on the marquee, and the scintillating or chasing lamps around the attraction board all do their part. Projector (PAR) lamps—one for every ten square feet—provide effective lighting for large cut-outs on the attraction board or over the marquee. The use of a relatively large number of small sources offers flexibility in aiming and ability to emphasize certain areas. Building floodlighting, another phase of attracting attention, can be accomplished with a wide variety of techniques. For a smooth effect, PAR lamps can merely be mounted on top the marquee and aimed upward at the building. General Electric PAR-38 or PAR-46 spotlamps, for example, located close to the building will create a pattern of brightness, if widely spaced. If their spacing is equal to their distance from the surface, the result will be reasonably uniform and any projections from the buildings, such as cornices and raised decorations, will stand out in bold relief.

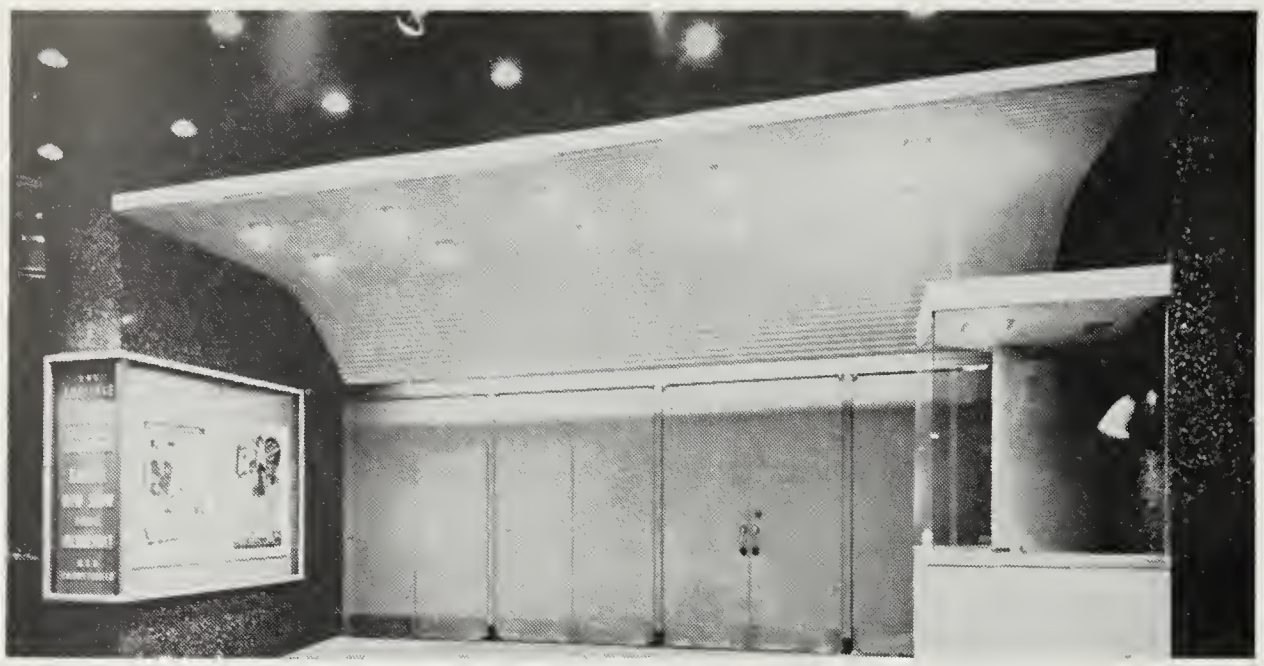
Emphasize Displays

As the patrons reach the entrance of the theatre, reflector lamps can be used to emphasize posters and other displays which describe the show. Where elaborate cut-out displays are used on the entrance attraction boards, PAR-56 floodlamps are recommended because of their rectangular beam. And the PAR-56 floodlamp is useful for lighting the banner which hangs across the sidewalk under the marquee. Its rectangular beam means that light is utilized effectively and glare can be minimized.

The use of projector and reflector lamps as downlights in the soffit of the marquee is becoming wide-spread practice. The Reflector (R)40 floodlamp is particularly popular in this application. The sparkle provided by these lamps, which protrude slightly beneath the soffit, helps give the theatre entrance a clean and distinctive appearance. Reflector color lamps offer new opportunities for better showmanship in this type of installation. They will add both color and sparkle to the theatre entrance. Blue-white reflector color lamp downlights will provide a cool appearance. Or, pink reflector color lamps will cause the entrance to take on a warm, friendly atmosphere, so desirable for a cool evening. Arrangements of reflector color lamps can also form festive patterns for holiday seasons. At Christmas, for instance, alternate red and green, or patterns of red and green reflector color lamps will not only provide color accents, but the mixture of light below will be warm and friendly.

The boxoffice is, of course, a focal point. Brightness is the most important factor here. Reflector lamps can be used to provide additional general lighting in the area. In addition, the concentrated light from reflector or projector lamps aimed at the boxoffice counter will help the cashier make change. They will also help the customers count their change and therefore speed up transactions at the boxoffice. Care is needed, however, in positioning and aiming these lamps to avoid annoying glare and reflections from polished counter surfaces. A reflector lamp can help keep the cashier warm in the wintertime. A 125-watt or a 250-watt infra-red lamp can be mounted in a portable heat-lamp holder under the counter or on the ceiling above.

Helps Direct Traffic



Light can help direct theatre traffic because people tend to go toward the brightest areas. A "path of light" from the boxoffice to the entrance will help guide patrons. The ticket-taker, as the theatre's official greeter can be dramatized with reflector lamps. In many theatres the insides of the doors at the entrance also need additional light. Patrons tend to leave the theatre through the entrance door because this door is open and is brightest. Emphasis placed on the exit doors with 150-watt reflector spots can help reduce this problem.

PHYSICAL THEATRE

FOYER, LOBBY AND LOUNGE AREAS

One method of providing general illumination for circulation areas of the theatre is with downlights. Shielding these lamps to 45 degrees is desirable to minimize glare. Because of their more accurate control of light, 150-watt PAR lamps provide about twice as much light for this application as 150-watt R-40's. To obtain uniform illumination on the floor, space the units so that the distance between them is not more than two-thirds their mounting height.

For remodeling, downlights help direct attention away from an old ceiling. A light-colored ceiling is also important in reducing contrasts and creating a pleasant atmosphere. When ceilings are in good condition, reconditioning existing cove lighting equipment may be the least expensive solution. For a new effect, spots of color from reflector color lamps can supplement the smooth brightness pattern of a cove lighting installation. Aiming lamps at a grazing angle to the surface will dramatize textured or sculptured ceilings by modeling them in color. If there is space, these lamps can be mounted in existing coves; they can be fitted into urns and torchieres; and many types of wall units are available.

Planting boxes take on added interest with downlights above; or, lamps can be concealed behind them for silhouette effects. From this position reflector lamps provide light on vertical surfaces. Lighted walls contribute to a pleasant, cheerful environment and add to the impression of spaciousness of the area. Reflector lamps in small, decorative wall brackets are another method of lighting vertical surfaces; a 75-watt R-30 lamp to provide the downlight component and a 150-watt R-40 or a reflector color lamp aimed up, possibly at a small mobile or similar ornament, will increase interest. While paintings are usually lighted uniformly, PAR-46 spotlamps can supplement their general lighting and add interest by emphasizing specific areas. Posters and other displays can be lighted in the same way. Modeling sculpture or other decorative elements with reflector color lamps while at the same time accenting them with the beam of light from a PAR-46 or PAR-56 spotlamp, adds a dramatic motif to an area.

Attract Patrons

The snack bar is another important focal point. Supplementary lighting on feature displays will attract patrons' attention. High levels of illumination will help increase the size of the sale. While much of the lighting may be fluorescent, incandescent sources such as PAR and R lamps are needed to make merchandise sparkle and to provide emphasis. Reflector and projector lamps concealed in the front part of the canopy will direct light downward onto the merchandise on top of the counter. The PAR-38 and PAR-46 side prong lamps are particularly useful here because they require little depth for recessing. PAR-38 spotlamps in adjustable housings, mounted farther back in the canopy, can be aimed at the back bar displays. If the snack bar has no canopy, the same lighting results can be achieved by mounting PAR-56 spot or floodlamps on the ceiling.

With the amount of revenue that is brought in by the concession stand, it is important that it be lighted in a pleasing and proper manner.

Color can be used to advantage. The combination of a yellow and white reflector lamp inside the popcorn cabinet, for example, will bring out the rich, golden hues of the popcorn. They will also help keep the corn warm. Good, planned lighting will help your staff serve your patrons more efficiently and more profitably for you.

Since the boxoffice is a very important area, brightness is an important factor. Reflector lamps may be utilized to provide additional light.

AUDITORIUM AND STAGE

When the patron leaves the snack bar a path of light can lead him to the auditorium and to the usher, or the sign, that is directing traffic. Individually controlled, louvered PAR spotlamps at the head of each aisle have been used successfully to facilitate seating.

Reflectorized lamps have uses in the auditorium, too. A different type of downlight has been very effective in many recent installations. PAR spotlamps are recessed in the ceiling. Rather than being aimed straight down the lamps are aimed five to 10 degrees toward the stage. The aiming angle is such that the back edge of the spotlamp's diverging beams is nearly vertical. Because of the aiming angle, patrons sitting behind the lamps are not distracted by them. The front row of units is located so that no direct light reaches the screen. It is recommended that the downlights be controlled by a dimmer for two reasons. First, the lights can be brought up gradually after the show so that patrons are not suddenly subjected to the lamp's full intensity.

Whenever the patron enters the theatre a path of light can lead him to the auditorium, and to the usher or sign that is directing the traffic.

ANDALUSIA DRIVE-IN

With automobile registrations reaching all-time highs, and with no end to the upward spiral in sight, the American family car is becoming a living-room on wheels. And every new automobile on the highways represents another potential patron for the nation's drive-in theatres. However, as with every other segment of the entertainment industry, the public must be sold on going to an outdoor theatre. It is in this area that the roadside marquees and signs become extremely important.

As drive-ins have become bigger and better so have the attraction boards. Today's modern outdoor theatre uses its marquee not only to inform the public of what is being shown, but also to do a good deal of the selling job. Cascades of shimmering lights, colorful and distinctive designs, large readable letters are combined to please the senses of the passersby, and make them much more willing to accept the invitation to enter and spend an evening at the drive-in.

The value of making full use of roadside signs and letters cannot be underestimated by the alert drive-in operator. Fortunately, the manufacturers of signs and letters, and marquees have been keeping abreast of the times, and are in a position to offer the exhibitor modern and eye-catching products.

Pictured on this page are some examples of interesting approaches to informing and attracting the car-conscious public. The shapes, forms, and effects are limited only by the imagination. With the new drive-in season just getting into full swing, it might be well to consider the possibilities of what can be done at your theatre to prove that roadside showmanship pays off.

TRADE-MARK

• Delivering sharp, bright pictures to the giant screens of drive-in theatres is a problem – even with the finest projection equipment. But there's a way you can meet this challenge of greater screen areas and longer projection throws.

First, make sure that every component in your projection system is maintained in perfect working order. Second, be certain that your lamps are trimmed with "National" carbons – so small a part of your operating cost . . . so large a part of picture quality.

Always order your "National" projector carbons by number from the popular line listed below:

The Right Light For The Job

THE drive-in theatre's power to attract attention, its identification, and its ability to handle cars without congestion are important. A well-lighted entrance and a floodlighted screen tower supplement the lighted attraction board and add tremendously to the attractive power of a drive-in. As on the theatre building, PAR projector lamps can be mounted on the screen tower, or on the ground near it, to floodlight it. Another method is the use of a canopy containing reflector lamps at the top of the tower. These lamps should be on 18-inch centers and 18 inches or more out from the tower if white light is used. If in color, spacing must be reduced in proportion to the absorption of the color filters in order to produce similar effectiveness. Colored light on colored surfaces can produce unique and potent effects. This not only imparts distinctiveness, but helps get attention by being different. Blue light on a blue surface, for example, can produce an illusion of great depth. Or, alternating red and green light on a red and white design will create startling changes in pattern, brightness, and color. Reflector color lamps are a convenient source for this purpose, providing they are protected from rain and snow. To produce equal color effects, use numbers of reflector color lamps in the following proportions: 1 white; 2 pink; 2 yellow; 4 blue-white; 5 red; 8 green; and 10 blue. Floodlighting in this manner, from the top of the screen tower, also lights the grounds beneath the tower. If the entrance to the theatre is by the screen tower, this overhead floodlighting will produce additional grounds lighting.

A moonlight unit showing arrangement of floodlights. Four additional floodlights at back of pole provide white light for drive-in exit areas.

DRIVE-IN THEATRES

Play Areas

Scallops and other patterns of colored light on the outside of the fence also attract attention. Reflector color lamps, in appropriate housing on six-foot centers and one-foot from the fence are one suggestion. For the drive-ins that have them, kiddies amusement parks provide a great deal of attraction, particularly if these amusement parks are situated so that the children in passing cars can see them. These play areas should be floodlighted; one PAR-56 floodlight for every 30-40 square feet of ground area. Lighted in this way, children in passing cars will be sure to see them, even after dark, and illumination levels will be adequate for safety and enjoyment.

Identification

Rapid identification of the drive-in and its current attractions is facilitated with light. A large filament lamp sign on the screen tower or above the attraction board identifies the theatre. A well-lighted attraction board tells the motorist what's playing. Large floodlighted cutouts, both ahead of and in the entrance area will also tell him what's playing. These should be floodlighted with one PAR lamp for every 10 square feet of surface area.

Approaches to the boxoffice should be well lighted. A driver should not be able

It is very important that the ticket-selling area at a drive-in theatre be well-lighted, as shown in this photograph. As the auto approaches the boxoffice, the driver should be able to see and identify the ticket-seller. Proper lighting can help speed up automobile traffic entering the theatre.

Reade Building New Drive-In

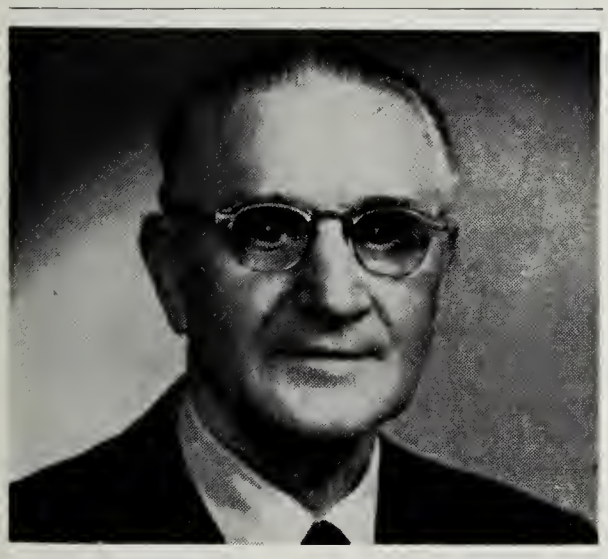
OAKHURST, N. J.—Walter Reade, president, Walter Reade Theatres, recently announced acquisition of property in Wayne Township in Passaic County on Route 46 near the intersection of Route 23 for the erection of the first twin-screen drive-in theatre in the east with a capacity of 1,400 cars.

The theatre, which will be equipped with in-car heaters for year-round operation and new, wide screens, will be the largest in New Jersey and one of the largest in the entire east, Reade said, and will incorporate all the latest technical improvements which will make it a family recreation site as well as a theatre.

Work will proceed immediately from plans and specifications being completed by Leon Einhorn of Albany, N. Y.

The entrance for the new theatre will be on Route 46, approximately 300 yards from the existing Totowa Drive-in, and the exit on Route 23.

The twin drive-in will have screens at either end of the property with a central projection booth which can present the same or different films on the two screens, and, in effect, be two theatres in one. Each side of the new drive-in will have a capacity of 700 cars.



Reade said that the theatre will have a tremendous children's play area and picnic grove which will be open free to the public during the day for use as a recreation area.

A special tower will also be erected under the supervision of the Bell Telephone Company for reception of microwave relay so the theatre can present all large-screen theatre television presentations which are available.

The in-car heaters will be similar to those in the Walter Reade drive-in theatres in Eatontown and Atlantic City, N. J., which will permit the theatre to operate for the entire year.

The theatre will be terraced and landscaped like a large park with trees and a duck pond and is also expected to have an animal zoo in one of the play areas.

The Walter Reade Theatre organization, one of the largest independent motion picture exhibitors in the East, operates seven drive-ins, and is concurrently building another new drive-in of more than 1000 car capacity in Absecon, near Atlantic City.

Harold E. Brown was elected vice-president in charge of sales for the Strong Electric Corp., Toledo. Brown will be in charge of projection arc lamps, rectifiers, spotlomps, reflectors, etc.

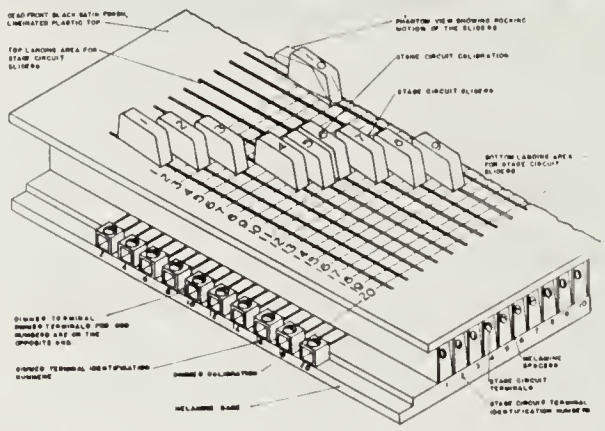
Handy Hand Truck

A new stair climbing hand truck which is said to safely double the load a man can roll up steps and treble the load he can move down stairs or ramps has been announced by Valley Craft Products, Inc.

Known as the Stair Cart, the manufacturer says it is equipped with a special ratchet mechanism which enables it to roll up stairs step-by-step as the operator pulls a cable drive.

The two-wheel safety brakes which are incorporated in the truck can help prevent accidents when descending ramps or stairs with heavy loads since the brakes allow perfect control at all times, it is claimed.

This shipment of film being delivered to the projection booth demonstrates how this stair-climbing hand truck may be used around a theatre.



Features such as interchangeable shoes, sealed ball bearings and steel tube construction are said to assure load flexibility and a long efficient life. The truck is equipped with large pneumatic tires which add to ease of operation and eliminate any marking of steps. Six different models are available for handling various sizes of loads.

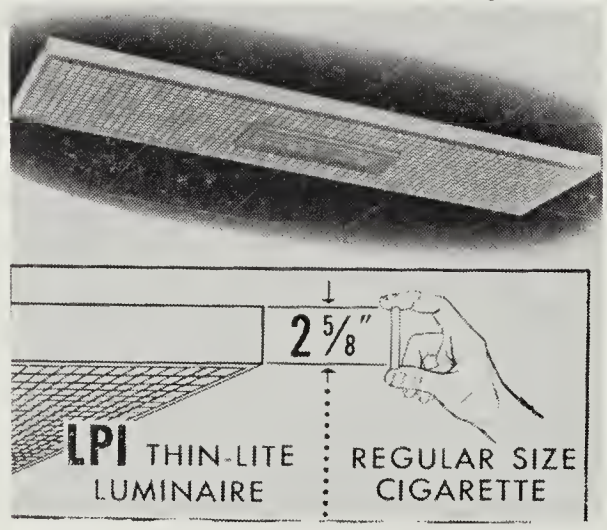
Stage Lighting

A simplified method of connecting individual or combinations of stage light circuits to any of the dimming control circuits of a switchboard has been made available by the Ariel David Manufacturing Company.

Called the Quick-Connect panel, the new unit is designed for easy operation. It is said to do away completely with patch cords and plugs. Cross-connection is accomplished with a series of vertical sliders connected to the stage light circuits. These are calibrated to make contact with horizontal busses connected to the dimmers. The mechanism is completely enclosed for safety and dead front operation, it is said.

Among the advantages claimed for this unit are split-second connection of any stage circuit to any dimmer; complete flexibility for all stage circuits; accident-proof; shows complete lighting layout at a glance; can be cleared in one sweep.

A sketch showing the working parts of the new Quick-Connect panel which is said to simplify the connecting of the theatre stage light circuits.



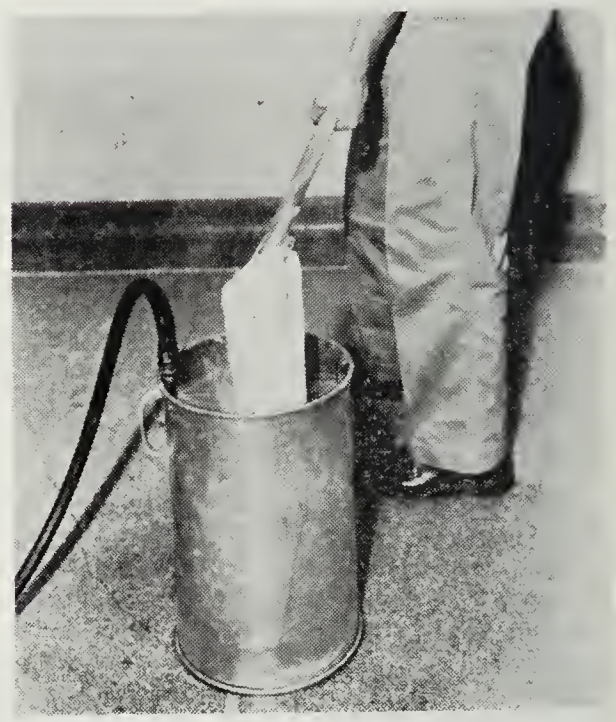
The Quick-Connect panel is presently available in a console model and a wall model. Both of these units have 15 dimming constant circuits and 30 flexible stage circuits.

Ultra Thin Luminaires

What is said to be "the thinnest shielded fluorescent luminaires available," are being offered by Lightning Products, Inc., in its new Thin-Lite series. Each model in the series is said to have a depth of only 2⅝ inches and creates a semi-recessed effect, although surface-mounted to the ceiling. Actually the depth below the ceiling is essentially the same as that of troffers fitted with dished plastic or glass shields, it is claimed.

This new series consists of four different luminaires. Two are 49 inches in length (equipped with 48 inch rapid start lamps), and two units are 97 inches long (equipped with 96 inch lamps). These thin-lite luminaires may be mounted end to end or side by side to form a great variety of light patterns up to any desired size.

Bolt knock-outs are provided, and the back plate is recessed so that the fixtures can be drawn up solidly against the ceiling, it is said. The louver panels are metal framed and secured by floating hinges which cannot be seen from any viewing angle, the manufacturer says.



Combining efficiency and a modern appearance, these new fluorescent luminaires are said to be the thinnest to be found available on the market.

Mop Washing Unit

An interesting and useful new item for the maintenance department is the Jet Streem mop washer being sold by Geerpres Wringer, Inc. The manufacturer contends that although cleaning personnel may do an excellent mopping job, they tend to be careless about washing the mop after use because it takes almost as long to clean the mop as it does the floor. With the Jet Streem unit cleaning is said to take only a few minutes.

The unit is basically a steel cylinder open at both ends. Inside are six directly opposed full-flare spray jets that force water through the mop strands to flush away dirt, caustics and other foreign matter. As the jets clean the mop, it is claimed that the dirt drains through the bottom.

The Jet Streem can be used wherever there is a water outlet with a threaded hose connection. It fits in utility sinks, over floor drains, or in mop wagons, it is said. The cylindrical housing confines the water spray so that operator, walls and surrounding floor remain dry.

This Jet Streem unit was designed to aid the maintenance man to do a better floor mopping job as well as prolonging the life of the mop.

Three-Dimensional Equipment Refresher Course

ALTHOUGH THERE are no positive indications that 3-D is about to have a major revival, the satisfactory grosses of the one new three-dimensional film now in release, and the reports that two or three more films may be made available in the near future, seems to be a good enough reason for exhibitors to give some thought to the 3-D equipment that might be gathering dust in the storeroom. Certainly in these days of product shortage the average theatreman cannot afford to overlook any possibility. The following is a short review of the equipment necessary for the proper projection of 3-D:

Screens: A metallic-surfaced projection screen is necessary for the projection of 3-D in order to avoid depolarizing the filtered light coming from the projector.

Interlocks: The success of 3-D depends upon good projection and exact synchronization between the two interlocked projectors. Not only must the proper pair of right eye and left eye images appear on the screen at the same time, but the shutters must also be synchronized. The two available methods of projector synchronization are either the Selsyn motor interlock, or the mechanical interlock. It is generally agreed that greater precision will be obtained with the Selsyn system.

Lenses: The matching of the focal lengths of the two projection lenses must be controlled for good 3-D results. If this is not done one eye will see a larger picture than the other and cause a great deal of patron eye discomfort.

Reels and Magazines: Larger magazines and reels are needed to project 3-D with a minimum number of intermissions. A 25-inch magazine capable of handling 24-inch reels make it possible to run off a 10,000-foot show with only one intermission.

Light Requirements: It is necessary to run both projection arc lamps at the same time, and to run them with equal light output. A great deal of light is needed for proper picture quality. This is so because the polarizing filter at the projector uses only about 50 per cent of the light falling on it, and the viewing filter also helps to cut down on the light that gets to the eye. In many cases the exhibitor must purchase another generator or rectifier to meet the power demands of two projector 3-D. In some cases a more powerful projector arc lamp will also have to be used. An important thing to remember is that the picture brightness should be equal from each machine. If this is not done the 3-D effect will be decreased.

Filters and Viewers: A polarized filter must be placed over the ports of the two projectors. These filters must be installed in such a manner that the light beam goes through the center. It must be remembered that the filter for the left port has a directional characterstic different from that of the one used on the right port and the two must not be confused. The exhibitor must also furnish his patrons with polarized viewers in order for them to be able to see the film.

Although the Polaroid Company has been working on Vectograph, a single strip system of the 3-D that eliminates many of the projection problems, it has not yet reached a stage of perfection where it can be put into commercial use. Therefore, at the present time here is a list of essential equipment needed to project the twin-projector form of 3-D:

1. A metallic screen.
2. An interlock device for projector synchronization.
3. An additional rectifier or generator.
4. Probably additional wiring.
5. At least four 24-inch reels.
6. Polaroid filters for each projector port.
7. A static master brush to clean the filters.
8. A spirit level to make proper adjustments.
9. Fans to keep filters cool and avoid warping or buckling.
10. Polarized viewers for the audience.

W.D. Matthews In New Motiograph Post

CHICAGO—Motiograph, Inc., announces the appointment of W. Douglas Matthews to a newly created post of vice-president and general manager. The promotion is part of an internal reorganization to achieve better supervision and control of the expanding manufacturing activities of the company.

The duties of Matthews, formerly treasurer of the company, are being taken over by John J. Bullers, accounting head of the firm who will now function as secretary-treasurer.

The company is expected shortly to announce its entrance into a non-theatrical field with a new product under development.

TESMA And IPA Sign Contracts As Plans For Industry Convention-Trade Show Progress

NEW YORK—Signing of a contract by Fred C. Matthews and Bert Nathan, presidents respectively of Theatre Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association (TESMA) and International Popcorn Association (IPA), now brings together four great organizations of theatre owners, manufacturers, dealers in theatre equipment and operators of concessions in theatres in a combined Trade Show at the Hotel Morrison, Chicago, Nov. 6-9. Contracts between Matthews and Jack Kirsch, president of Allied Theatres of Illinois, and general chairman for National Allied in the forthcoming event, had been signed earlier as had an agreement with Ray G. Colvin, executive director of Theatre Equipment Dealers Association (TEDA).

Signing of the contract, which finalized plans that had been under discussion among executives of the four organizations for several months, promises to bring together the greatest assemblage of organizations ever to meet under one roof to settle mutual problems affecting the welfare of theatres.

Two hundred and forty-four booth spaces will be sold at the Hotel Morrison, with 136 on the first floor of the hotel, which will house displays and exhibitions of the new equipment, such as projectors, sound systems, CinemaScope improvements, horizontal VistaVision projectors, Todd-AO projectors, etc. Concessions exhibits numbering 108 will be shown on the third floor exhibition space. Private elevators will connect the floors.

More than 80 per cent of available booth space already has been requested on both floors of the hotel, according to TESMA and IPA, but no booth space will be allotted, by either organization until formal invitations in the form of explanatory brochures have been mailed.

Forums on equipment and concessions will take place during the active business days of the joint Trade Show and conventions.

Matthews and Nathan now are cooperating with Kirsch and Colvin, in formulating business and entertainment plans for convention delegates.

Tom Sullivan, executive vice-president of IPA, and Merlin Lewis, executive-secretary of TESMA also are actively engaged in preparing plans for the business agenda of their organizations' conventions, together with preparing details of the physical operations of the Trade Show, which will be under Lewis' direction, with Sullivan managing the third floor concessions section.

Carl Siegel, Stanley Warner Management Company, will serve as general exhibit chairman for IPA, and he will be assisted by a committee of theatre and concessions buyers.

During the equipment forums, one or two of which will be held, thorough discussions of all new processes, will be led by experts in the various fields, with questions from the floor encouraged.

Speaking of the forthcoming event Kirsch said, "It will bring together under one roof the largest array of theatre equipment, popcorn equipment, supplies, candy concessions and services and will make this Trade Show a veritable Motion Picture Exposition."

Matthews said, "The joint conventions and trade show represents a bargain to all theatre owners. They will obtain ideas on how to operate and equip their theatres from leaders and experts at little more than the cost of transportation to Chicago this coming November. It gives me great pleasure to present an invitation to all theatre owners from every member of TESMA to meet with us at the Morrison this Fall."

Nathan expressed his enthusiasm with the statement:

"This show will be a must for every theatre operator and concessionaire whether in the conventional theatre field or in drive-ins. All the latest in food and beverage items as well as machinery and equipment will be displayed for four days.

"Supplementing the exhibition will be daily sessions having specific programs covering concession stand layout, design and management for both indoor and drive-in operations."

Colvin had stated earlier that it was his firm belief that as the Trade Show was planned it offered "opportunity" such as had seldom if ever been presented to theatremen and the others associated in the event.

Fred C. Matthews (left) president of TESMA, and Bert Nathan (right) president of IPA recently signed a contract calling for a combined equipment trade show to be held in Chicago from November 6-9.

SMPTE Hears Record Number Of Papers

CHICAGO—More than 70 technical papers were accepted for presentation at the 77th Convention of the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers, April 18-22, at the Drake Hotel, it was announced by Byron Roudabush, convention vice-president. This was the largest number of convention papers ever presented since formation of the Society in 1916.

Although emphasis in the program was on 16mm. films, particularly non-theatrical motion pictures, 35mm. and the new wide-screen processes were not overlooked. A symposium on wide-screen photography was held at the State-Lake Theatre. Included in this session was a paper by Earl I. Sponable and H. E. Bragg of 20th-Fox on "Improvements In CinemaScope" and a paper entitled "The Visitation Process" by Academy Award winners Loren Ryder and Jack Bishop. C. R. Daily, also of Paramount Pictures, collaborated on this paper. A VistaVision demonstration was made using both double-frame and standard-size VistaVision release prints.

Another wide-screen sessicn was held and among the papers presented were "Historical Notes On Large Screens, Wide Screens And Cycloramas; Some Little Known Facts" by Julius B. Postal of Tele-Science Productions, New York; and "Evaluation And Reaction To New Processes Of Motion-Picture Presentation" by Lucien E. Pope, Fox Midwest Amusement Corporation and Richard H. Orear, Commonwealth Theatres, Inc., Kansas City.

An equipment exhibit was held in conjunction with the convention. Seventeen exhibitors displayed the latest in motion picture and TV equipment. Those companies exhibiting were Ampex, Bell & Howell, Camera Equipment Company, Andre Debrie of America, Film Services, Inc., Florman & Babb, Houston-Fearless, Kling Photo Corporation, Motion Picture Printing Equipment, Pathe Laboratories, Precision Laboratories, RCA, S.O.S. Cinema Supply, Stancil Hoffman, Vanguard Instrument Company, Westrex Corporation and Wollensak Optical Co.

Standard Committees Prepare For International Meeting

CHICAGO—A joint meeting of the Standards Committee of the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers, and PH22, the American Standards Association committee on motion pictures, was held last week at the Drake Hotel. The purpose of the meeting was to work out the position of the United States delegation to the second meeting of the International Standardization Organization's Technical Committee 36-Cinematography, which will be held in Stockholm, June 11-16.

Among the issues discussed at this policy meeting were such matters as motion picture film dimensions, definition and methods of marking safety motion picture film, screen brightness in theatres and review rooms, location and dimension of magnetic sound tracks, reproduction characteristics of magnetic sound tracks and wide-screen motion pictures.

In addition to the members of the SMPTE and ASA Committees, Axel Jensen, engineering vice-president of SMPTE and head of the U. S. delegation to the Stockholm meeting, and Henry Kogel, SMPTE staff engineer and secretary to the Society's engineering committees, were also present.

The meeting of the policy planning group was held in conjunction with the 77th Convention of the SMPTE.

3-D Viewers At No Risk

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.—Exhibitors will be able to show Universal's new 3-D picture "Revenge Of The Creature" without risk of running out of glasses or getting left with an over-supply, under a new service announced here by the Polaroid Corporation.

"If any exhibitor is on the fence about running the 'Revenge Of The Creature' in 3-D, this should help him decide to do it," according to J. H. Mulhall, in charge of viewer sales for the company. "He doesn't have to call the turn in advance. He can order the number of glasses he is sure of using, to start with. Then if the picture draws better than expected, he can get more glasses overnight as he needs them."

Local supplies of Polaroid glasses, permitting immediate delivery, will be available in exchange centers through RCA Theatre supply dealers and National Theatre Supply branches. Local representatives of the two supply organizations are now rounding up starting orders and asking exhibitors for estimates of likely needs, so stocks will be on hand when the picture opens.

To encourage good projection of the new picture, the company is offering new projection port filters of top optical quality at no charge, pointing out that fuzzy pictures result from filters that may have been of low quality to begin with, or filters that have become soiled and scratched in service.

A limited number of the company's special outfits for keeping 3-D films in synchronization are also being made available without charge. The outfit includes a 3-D Sync Monitor for detecting errors in synchronization and a 3-D Sync Control switch. This switch, wired between the Selsyns of the two projectors, allows the operator to bring the picture back into perfect synchronization merely by turning a knob while the picture is running, without interrupting the show.

Any stocks of Polaroid glasses that have been stored by exhibitors under proper conditions should be fit for service, no matter when they were originally shipped, according to company technicians. They urge all exhibitors, however, to check all stocks left over from previous engagements to make sure lenses have retained their polarization, since glasses of inferior makes may have bleached out and will spoil the show. The company is sending a simple polarization-checker, with easy-to-follow instructions, direct to all theatres booking the picture.

In making the announcement, Mulhall stated, "Polaroid Corporation has a long-term stake in stereoscopic motion pictures. Properly shown, with good filters, good synchronization and good glasses, 'Revenge' can be another money-maker like the original 'Creature From The Black Lagoon' and another demonstration of the drawing power of 3-D."

Compact 30-Ton Air Conditioning Unit

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—A new 30 ton self-contained air conditioning unit, claimed to be the most compact unit of that capacity in the industry, is now being manufactured by the Typhoon Air Conditioning Company, Inc., it was announced by Mark E. Mooney, Typhoon's vice-president in charge of sales.

An important feature of the new unit is that it is the only packaged unit of such capacity to have its machinery entirely free-floated on springs and in no way in contact with the cabinet, it is claimed. This construction reduces operating noise level to a minimum, and permits installation of the unit in many places where noise and vibration problems might ordinarily make a 30 ton application inadvisable.

The 30 ton unit is designed for application as a free-standing air conditioner, or with ductwork as a central system. It features flexibility so far as installation with ductwork is concerned, since it may be applied with air intake at the front or the rear, with air outlet at the front or the rear, or with discharge at the top of the unit. In free-standing applications, it may be conveniently split for remote installation of the high side, with the cooling section suspended from the ceiling or recessed flush with an interior wall of the building.

The cabinet of Typhoon's new 30 ton model is formed of 14 gauge furniture steel, in wrap-around sections which are reinforced with triple thickness at critical spots to insure long life and rigidity. Its dimensions are 92 by 84 by 45 inches.

Equipped with an all-copper condenser, two full-width blowers, and an open type compressor, the 30 ton unit may be furnished with capacity control to adjust machine capacity to varying cooling load requirements. This means that, when its full 30 tons of cooling capacity are not needed, the unit will perform at lower capacity, with resultant savings in operating costs.

Another important feature is that, while many packaged units of the higher capacities are required by law to be operated by licensed stationary engineers, the full charge of Freon 12 in Typhoon's 30 ton unit amounts to less than 50 pounds of refrigerant, and thus no licensed operator is needed, the company stated.

20th-Fox Building C-Scope Theatre In Israel

NEW YORK—Construction of the first American-built theatre in Israel will get underway in Tel Aviv this July by 20th-Fox as part of the company's international theatre building program, it was reported last week.

A completely modern theatre, it will seat 2,000, be air-conditioned, and equipped for CinemaScope and full, four-track magnetic stereophonic sound. It was also revealed that another deluxe house will be constructed in the city of Haifa within a period of two years.

usAIRco Announces Price Increase On Packaged Central Station

MINNEAPOLIS—A price increase of approximately six per cent on most models of its RK-type preassembled central station equipment was announced by the United States Air Conditioning Corporation.

The price rise was necessary for maintenance of equipment quality in the face of increasing material, component and labor costs, according to R. D. McLain, manager of RK sales for usAIRco.

Equipment covered by the increase includes RK factory-built central station air conditioning plants with built-in evaporative condensers; DRK units, with dual refrigeration circuits, and RKW units with shell-and-tube condensers.

Single Phase Selenium Rectifier Now Available From Strong

TOLEDO, O.—A single phase selenium plate rectifier designed for the efficient operation of projection arc lamps burning 10mm. and 11mm. regular carbons and 10mm. Hitex carbons, is now being marketed by the Strong Electric Corporation it was announced last week.

The new rectifier was developed, it was said, to fill the need of drive-in theatres that use powerful arc lamps, but find it uneconomical to use three phase current.

Some of the features to be found in this Strong single phase rectifier are moisture-proof selenium units, remote control relays, an air-flow protective device, large fan ventilator, and taps to provide adjustment to compensate for supply variations through a range of 10 per cent above or 10 per cent below the rated A.C. input voltage throughout the output rating range.

The new Strong single-phase selenium rectifier was designed to fill the power needs of drive-ins that find it uneconomical to use 3-phase power.

Lighting The Theatre

Second, the level of illumination can be adjusted to provide adequate illumination during the show for safe circulation.

As in the lobby, reflector color lamps offer many opportunities for color modeling in the auditorium. Managers of many smaller theatres are using reflector color lamps during intermissions to light the stage curtains, as well as the curtains on the auditorium walls. A three-color system with lamps on six-inch centers is one method. In this case, lamps should be at least 18 inches from the curtains for a reasonably smooth lighting effect. These lamps have also been used advantageously in many older theatres for footlights. This is particularly true in footlights which contain no individual reflectors; those that are merely a wire-way with sockets on three-inch to six-inch centers. While additional shielding is sometimes necessary, the combination of an adjustable or swivel socket extension and a reflector color lamp provide a more efficient and economical system than the older dipped or natural-colored lamps. This same combination is also good for trough-type border lights. Stage lighting equipment using PAR and R lamps (border lights, strip lights, and spotlights) is available. Reflector lamps may also be used in other types of border and footlights, but the economies of the particular situation should be considered before a change is made. Despite the longer rated life and the convenience of the reflector lamps, it may be more economical to use regular lamps with reflectors and roundels or gelatine.

Other Uses

R-52 lamps, in appropriate housings, mounted on the gridiron are well suited as fly-loft work lights. PAR-56 floodlamps and smaller reflectorized lamps are also convenient as portable work lights for janitors and maintenance men. A theatre on the west coast uses PAR-56 floodlamps for a very unusual janitor's work light. A bank of lamps is placed in the aisle and aimed along the floor under the seats, making it easy to see and to work. Many maintenance men are using R-40's or PAR-38's either in clamp-on sockets or on a small portable stand. This type of equipment is convenient for providing the light necessary to repair seats or carpet and to do the many other odd jobs which are necessary.

EXTERIOR

The PAR line of lamps have a great many uses outside the theatre besides the entrance. Outside an exit, a PAR-38 lamp will provide enough light for patrons leaving the theatre. The rugged bulb is not too easily damaged or broken. PAR-56 floodlamps may be mounted on the top of the building to light an exit alley, where a narrow shaft of light is needed.

Cut Along Dotted Line

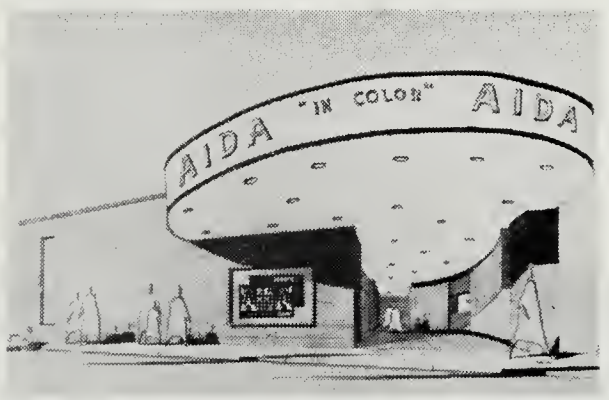
D-I Screen Features A New Design

WALTHAM, MASS.—A new design in drive-in screens, said to increase light intensity up to 200 per cent has been introduced by the Bettinger Corporation.

The new screen, called Reflectoscreen, is a specially treated porcelain enameled surface with tiny glass beads fused into the surface. It will withstand the most rigorous weather conditions, and because of greater reflectivity, enable earlier showings in daylight saving areas, it is claimed.

Reflectoscreen is made by firing glass beads at high temperature onto a white porcelain surface by means of a special ceramic paste.

Due to the inorganic nature of the Reflectoscreen surface, it is said to be impervious to the elements, and to water and cleaning solvents that may be used in cleaning projection screens. The finish is so durable that under extreme conditions in industrial atmosphere it may be steam-cleaned if necessary without risk of damage, according to the manufacturer.



Reflectoscreen was developed over a three-year period of research, and is available in two by five-foot panels (special sizes available when needed) suitable for mounting on new screen towers, or to cover existing screen surfaces, whichever the situation demands. The material sells for approximately two dollars per square foot.

Due to the diffusing reflective characteristics of Reflectoscreen, surface picture quality on the side ramps of outdoor theaters is as good as in the center, thus providing the opportunity of enlarging the capacity of the drive-in.

Altec Service For 17 20th-Fox Screening Rooms

NEW YORK—Consummation of a contract was announced last week by L. D. Netter, Jr., sales manager of Altec Service Corporation whereby Altec will provide technical services for sound equipment in 17 20th-Fox screening rooms throughout the United States.

Negotiated by Netter with E. McFarland, representing the 20th-Fox organization, the contract, effective April 1, 1955, calls for the services of Altec field engineers in connection with sound equipment in 17 screening rooms of 20th-Fox exchanges in key cities, together with the projection room on the sixth floor of the home office, and the two rooms used by Fox Movietone News, at the 10th Avenue studios.

Seen is the architect's drawing of the newly remodeled Kenmore, Boston. The theatre now boasts of a new marquee, boxoffice and brick facade. Fire damaged the house last December.

to make a mistake or become confused in trying to reach the boxoffice from the highway. Conventional street lighting equipment is one method of lighting approach ways. Fluorescent street lights are particularly well suited. Controlled beams from spot or floodlights high on the screen tower are another method, provided the screen tower is near the entrance. Care must be taken, however, to insure that light from these units does not bother patrons or passing motorists. Low mushroom units or other ornamental units along the edge of a drive will also mark it so that the motorist knows where he's going. These should be no farther than 25-feet apart, and even closer on the outside edge of turns. Garden lighting techniques offer a fourth possibility. Trees along the roadway can be silhouetted by placing PAR-38 floodlamps behind the trunks and directing the light up into the foliage. Or, trees and shrubbery may be lighted directly from in front to provide a lighted hedge along the approach way. Mercury lamp floodlighting provides a distinctive color which is appropriate on foliage. Care should be taken in floodlighting large trees so that they do not become a distraction for patrons inside the drive-in.

As the car approaches the boxoffice, the driver should be able to see and identify the ticket seller. A PAR-38 or PAR-46 spotlamp aimed at the ticket seller's position will immediately identify this individual. An R-40 spotlamp should be aimed at the driver's window of the car to help the driver count his tickets and change. It will speed up traffic through the entrance.

Aids Parking

After the patron has paid his admission and has been asked to turn off his lights, the drive-in operator is responsible for enabling him to get safely to a parking place. Well-shielded reflector lamp downlights along the inside of the fence are a good method of lighting the roadway, at the same time permitting the patron to adapt his eyes to the semi-darkness of the parking area. Lighted ramp markers and portable directional signals are also available to help direct traffic.

Natural moonlight from a full moon on a clear night (0.025 to 0.03 foot-candles) is usually considered adequate for general illumination in a drive-in theatre, and would be enough light to guide the patron into an empty parking place once he was on the correct ramp. The drive-in operator has no control of "natural" moonlight, however. To provide drive-ins with a constant level of illumination during the show an artificial moonlight system has been developed. A 100-foot metal pole is erected at the center of the last ramp with a number of floodlights located at the top. Two of these, directed at the center of the parking area, contain 500-watt daylight lamps behind green cover glass; two which are directed at the sides of the parking area have 300-watt lamps and amber cover glass. These two groups of lamps are used during the show. The combination of colors is pleasant and the result is subdued enough to avoid distraction from the picture. The imposing height of the poles and the shafts of light add a much needed dramatic effect, actually giving the feeling of shafts of moonlight. While reflected light from the screen takes care of the front ramps, the moonlight system solves the problem of lighting the rear ramps. This system provides an artificial moonlight which is superior to natural moonlight because it is constant in light output, and practically no light falls on the screen.

Emptying The Drive-In

At the break and at the end of the last show extra illumination is needed to facilitate the patrons finding the concession area, as well as emptying the drive-in. The old practice of locating floodlights on the screen tower to light the parking area creates an unpleasant effect and uncomfortable glare. The tower for the moonlight system is a much better location and three 1,000-watt floodlights can do an adequate job. A supplementary lighting system is also desirable. Lighting for the safety of fast moving automobiles at the exit can be provided by PAR-38 floodlights on the top of the fence aimed downward and in the same direction as the flow of traffic. These lamps will also indicate the direction of the exit to the motorist who is still on the ramp. A PAR-56 spotlamp will help protect the person directing traffic, both at the drive-in exit and in the street outside.

Concession Building

Spotlamps on top the screen and moonlight towers and directed at the concession building will provide the light necessary for identification of the snack area of the drive-in. (One for every 20 square feet of outside wall area). Another method is the use of R-40 downlights around the outside of the concession building. 150-watt reflector lamps are placed on three-foot centers under the outer edge of the concession building canopy, aimed 25 degrees from the vertical. If these lamps are on a dimmer control, they may be dimmed to a suitable level during the picture to retain emphasis without annoying brightness.

Lighting of the interior of the concession building of the drive-in theatre is similar to the snack bar of the regular theatre, the same techniques as in stores. In addition to general illumination, spotlighting can accent displays. Adjustable PAR lampholders may be built into the ceiling to provide flexibility for changing displays. Bullet type housings for reflector lamps may be suspended from the ceiling, and provide an attractive method of supporting R-40 spotlamps. By aiming the spotlights at high profit items—the merchandise that you want to sell—turnover can be improved and profit increased.

Radiant Introduces New, Low-Cost Screen

CHICAGO—Superama, a new, low-cost, fully guaranteed theatre screen said to feature more projection advantages than many higher priced screens now in use, was announced by Radiant Manufacturing Corporation.

"Superama is not merely a novel development," comments Radiant vice-president, A. W. Wertheimer, "it is the combined result of several years of intensive research and development, bringing together in one versatile fabric improvements never before available in a seamless-constructed screen at so low a price."

Electronically welded into one uniform surface through a controlled thermal process, no seams can be detected in the Superama fabric, according to the manufacturer. This process is also said to assure a rugged, dependable and flexible fabric throughout. It is guaranteed to be tear-proof and to provide long, efficient service.

"Electronicam" System New Tool For Motion Picture Production

NEW YORK—A new tool for motion picture producers and directors was revealed last week with the unveiling by Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, Inc., of the Du Mont "Electronicam" TV-Film System.

The demonstration of this system, a blending of electronic television and motion picture cameras with a common optical system, revealed it is now possible for producers, directors, and others engaged in film production to follow action, as the camera sees it, on large screen television monitors set up on the studio floor.

The "Electronicam" is applicable to wide screen systems such as CinemaScope, VistaVision, Todd-AO and Cinerama, it is claimed. The camera accepts both standard black-and-white and color films, and the system may be used with 16mm. or 35mm sizes.

The "Electronicam" system, it was believed, would find wide application in the motion picture field as a supplement to existing techniques.

Raytone Screens Using A New Formula

NEW YORK—A new formula in the manufacture of the Raytone Hilux screen which, "licks the problem of excessive drop-off on metallic surfaces," was revealed by Sol Shurpin, president of the Raytone Screen Corporation.

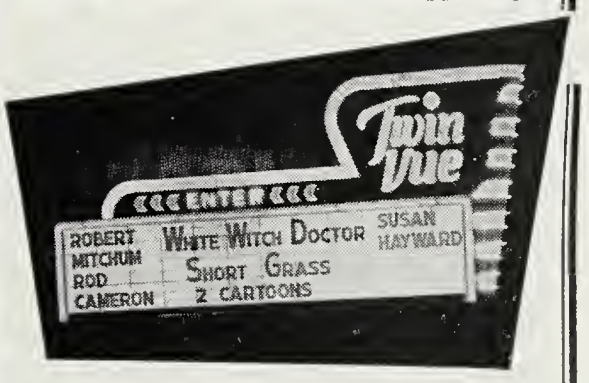
Shurpin stated that the formula was developed after almost two years of research and field tests. It was also revealed that all Raytone Hilux screens delivered during the past few months have been made using the new formula at no increase in price.

Although the problem of getting brightness either in the middle or the sides of a metallic screen was always fairly simple, the company stated, the newly developed formula now makes it possible to obtain a uniformly bright surface. There were said to be no plans to increase the price of the improved screens.

Williams Reduces Screen Price

AKRON, O.—The all-purpose silver screens made by the Williams Screen Company are now available at a reduced price, according to a statement from H. C. Williams, company president.

Williams stated that price reduction was made possible because of the mass production facilities in the company's two plants.



The special embossed surface of the screen, according to Williams, furnishes excellent light distribution and the infrared baked finish is tough, durable and resistant to moisture and salt air.

RCA Expands Theatre Carpeting Line

CAMDEN, N. J.—Expansion of the RCA theatre carpet line from six to 29 different grades, which meet the quality and budget requirements of all types and sizes of motion picture houses, was announced by the Engineering Products division.

The 23 new grades are incorporated among RCA's six basic carpet types to provide each type with a broader range of pile heights and price differential, according to M. J. Yahr, manager, RCA Theatre and Sound Products.

WOMPI Branch Installs Officers

JACKSONVILLE—Officers of the city's new WOMPI unit were installed here in the Mayport Room of the Roosevelt Hotel at a banquet attended by a large group of men and women from distrbutor branch offices, theatre circuits, and booking agencies.

The brilliant social occasion was preceded by a cocktail hour in the Variety Club which was sponsored by ABC Theatrical Enterprises, Exhibitors Service, the Ritz, Arvin Rothschild, Florida State Theatres, Dixie Drive-In Theatres, Carl Carter, Floyd Theatres, and the Five Points.

Janice Claxton, MGM, was installed as president by Mrs. Laura Kenny, WOMPI leader from Atlanta, who is on the staff of United Artists.

Other officers installed by Mrs. Kenny were Neva Taylor, Normandy Outdoor, first vice-president; Sarah Keller, MGM, second vice-president; Doris Posten, United Artists, recording secretary; Pat Tufano, United Artists, corresponding secretary; and Norma Cole, Paramount, treasurer.

Seated on the board of directors were Mamie Newman, Talgar Theatre Company; Marian Stowe, Paramount; Betty Loop, Dixie Drive-In Theatres; Edna Cox, Exhibitors Service; Margorie Roberson, Florida State Theatres; Gretchen Knight, RKO; and Anita McDaniels, 20th-Fox.

Other Atlantans assisting with the installation were Linda Burnett, United Artists, and Edyth Bryant, National Screen Service.

The banquet opened with an invocation by the Reverend George B. Warren, followed by a welcome address by Mrs. Genelle Beaumont, Paramount. Fred Hull, MGM branch manager, introduced the speakers, and Ted Chapeau, WMBR-TV official and member of the Variety crew, served as guest speaker.

Enjoyable entertainment was provided by a troupe of dancers from the Fred Astaire Dancing Studio. The evening was also observed as a "bosses night," for many employers of the WOMPI members attended as guests. Judge May, editor, Florida Times-Union theatrical pages, represented the press.

Cambridge Productions will start on May 15 at Miami, Fla., "Deep Six," a theatrical feature to be photographed in the Caribbean over the wreck of a Spanish ship believed sunk about 300 years ago. Cambridge, which has offices in Miami and Hollywood, will shortly start building a studio in Florida. . . . Ben Jordan, Allied Artists Southern Exchanges, was in for a sales meeting.

Charlotte

A Charlotte agent of a motion picture company has hit it lucky on the Irish Sweepstakes. David K. Phillips said he received a $1,537.46 check from the sweepstakes committee. His prize came from last year's Grand National. It was delayed because Phillips lost his ticket, but, after trading letters and affidavits with operators of the annual Irish classic, the Columbia booker finally received his reward. . . . The Fox reopened under the direction of the Atlas Promotions, Inc., Bud Parry, promotional director, announced. Atlas Promotions, Inc., was organized to undertake reopening of the Fox which has been closed for nearly two years and has been used in recent months for occasional productions only. Parry said the theatre has been refurnished with new tapestries and a new sound system. He said the interior has been repainted in pastel shades. Parry will serve as manager.

David Williams, salesman and manager, IFE office here, has returned after visiting the western part of North Carolina calling on all accounts in that area. . . . Eddie M. Marks, manager, Center and Manor, has been transferred by the Stellings and Gossett Theatres to Wilmington, Del. In Wilmington, Marks will manage four drive-ins and one indoor theatre. William Primm, who has been manager, Manor, has been named manager, Center, and Ben Harton, former assistant manager, Manor, has been named Manor manager.

Queen City Booking Agency is now handling Cary, Cary, N. C., owner, Box Anderson. . . . Charles Hunsuck, salesman, United Artists, visited the Colonial Circuit, Valdese, N. C., and the Statesville Circuit, Statesville, N. C. . . . United Artists has a drive week on during July 1-7. Their aim is to place a United Artists feature on every screen in the territory during that particular week.

Howard Anderson, Anderson Circuit, Mullins, S. C., was in buying and booking for his theatres. . . . United Artists screened "Purple Plain" for exhibitors at the 20th-Fox screening room. . . . Hugh Sykes returned to his home after being a patient in Presbyterian Hospital. Sykes operates the Queen City Booking Agency.

The WOMPI luncheon was a success. The following were elected that day to serve as officers for 1955-56: president, Myrtle Parker, Paramount; first vice-president, Gladys Hawkins, Wilby-Kincey; second vice-president, Rosaline Hutton, Columbia; corresponding secretary, Margaret Baker, Wilkin Supply Company; recording secretary, Mildred Hoover, Paramount; treasurer, Mildred Warren, 20th-Fox.

Harry Botwick, Miami, Fla.; James L. Cartwright, Daytona Beach, Fla.; and Frank Bell, Tampa, Fla., attended a Florida State Theatres conference of district supervisors at the FST home office. . . . Byron Adams, United Artists district manager, Atlanta, came down for a round of meetings.

French Harvey, FST advertising manager, in cooperation with Jack Wiener, MGM exploiteer, prepared attractive booklets of advertising instructions for circuit-wide use by FST theatre managers for advance campaigns on bookings of "Blackboard Jungle" and "The Glass Slipper." . . . Hundreds of doctors and nurses attended the nation-wide closed circuit TV program at the Florida from Ann Arbor, Mich., which revealed accomplishments of the Salk anti-polio vaccine. . . . In New York City for film transport conferences was Frank Benton, Benton Brothers Film Express, and Lex Benton, Atlanta, was in town for several days. . . . Film salesmen in from the road included Jerry Jernigan, U-I, and Harvey Reinstein, Buena Vista.

Bolivar Hyde, Lakeland, Fla., treasurer, Talgar Theatre Company, was currently doing a fine job to promote Florida participation in a Southeastern Movie Festival from May 16 to June 16, in cooperation with Alabama and Georgia exhibitors and distributors. Hyde has been urging full support for the coming campaign to reverse the present trend of ebbing patronage at the state's motion picture theatres. At Hyde's urging, a group of north and central Florida exhibitors and distributors overflowed the offices of Buford Styles at the U-I exchange and pledged their enthusiastic support to the drive. Distributors said they would supply extra prints of selected new feature pictures during the Festival, and efforts were planned to bring the finest Hollywood stars available to Atlanta, Birmingham, this city, and other points to kick off the drive and to insure support from mayors, governors, women's groups, newspapers, and radio and television stations. All exhibitors at the local meeting received order blanks for Festival trailers prepared by Filmack, ad accessories from The Cato Show Printing Company, and radio tapes from Ronnie Otwell, Columbus, Ga.

FST News Notes: Louis J. Finske and LaMar Sarra, FST vice presidents, left on a business trip to Miami. . . . Executive Joe J. Deitch returned from a tour of duty in south Florida. . . . Tom Gerard, FST booker, was the honor guest at a surprise birthday party in the company home office. . . . Making a field trip were Bob Harris, general manager of concessions, and his assistant, Norris McCollum.

Fire destroyed the Princess, Mount Dora, and a grocery store during busy Saturday night shopping hours. About 100 patrons in the theatre filed out in orderly manner and there were no injuries. The fire started in a refrigerator of the grocery store.

Cincinnati

Post-Easter business at virtually all houses in this area was reported excellent, with many first-run houses holding over. With cool and rainy weather prevailing much of the time during recent weeks, drive-in business was reported off somewhat, but it is anticipated that the upcoming warm evenings will quickly boost the auto trade.

"You must be crazy—that man behind you will catch you for sure," was the quick-thinking retort of Mary Jenkins, assistant treasurer, downtown Capitol, when a youth attempted to hold up the boxoffice. The youth whirled and fled, but Miss Jenkins had noted he wore a bright pink shirt, which led to his capture by police three minutes later. He was held for grand jury action under $2,000 bond. . . . The Sunset Boulevard studio of Warners in Hollywood, where Al Jolson's "The Jazz Singer" was produced as the first "talkie" film, is being razed by a local firm, the Cleveland Wrecking Company, which has a nation-wide setup.

Bill Green, Detroit, Cinerama publicity chief, was in to set up a special program for the first local anniversary at the Capitol on June 21. Several of the film's personalities are expected to participate. . . . Also in was Sam Galanty, Columbia district manager. . . . Jolene Brand, appearing in MGM's "The Prodigal," was here to bally the film.

Opening of the baseball season, always a gala occasion here, drew many Film Row executives to Crosley Field, along with a large number of exhibitors. Among those from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mitchell, Jeffersonville, O.; Lloyd Hilderbrandt, Fred Krimm, Roy Wells, John Gregory and Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Suell, Dayton, O.; Ray Laws, Lebanon, O.; H. E. Bennett, Circleville, O.; William Settos and Ray Frisz, Springfield, O.; Nat Wolf and Tom Ally, Cleveland; Jerry Shinback, Harry Schwartz, Frank Tassenoff, Harry J. Knight, and Jack Needham, Columbus, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ziegler, Waverly, O.; George Turlukis, Hamilton, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Orebaugh, New Vienna, O.; Chalmers Bach, Eaton, O.; Frank Allara, Matewan, W. The Fox preview for the Detroit Council of Churches for "A Man Called Peter" pulled 2,000. The picture opened at the United Artists a week later.

Indianapolis

A bulletin issued by the board of directors of Allied Theatre Owners of Indiana suggests that all branch managers in Indianapolis be given "real and complete autonomy in dealing with the small theatres." Expressing grave concern over the state of industry relations, the board stated that decentralizing authority in the case of dealing with small theatres would immediately settle many areas of contention. The reasons given for this stand are the close personal relation that the branch manager is able to form with his customers, which may make him a better judge of the situation than even a more experienced man from another district, and also the fact that the small theatres contribute little, in revenue, so that little will be risked by this giving of responsibility to the branch manager. It is pointed out that the most violent controversies occur in the area of small theatres, and the local manager could settle such matters without upsetting fixed policies outside the area or with other classes of theatres. The bulletin also stresses that the small independent's influence oustide the industry is not measured by its financial contribution, and closes with the statement that people dealing face to face and person to person can build a good relationship, if one of them is not hampered by over-riding directives.

Patricia Jane Eagar was recently informed in Detroit by Harold H. Brown, president, United Detroit Theatres, that she was national winner of Columbia's "The Caine Mutiny" acting contest. Her prizes include a part on the U. S. Steel TV dramatic show and a scholarship to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts. She was the entrant of the Madison.

destroyed a truck terminal at Dallas. Assistant U. S. Attorney Harman Parrott said the charges deal with various phases of the corporation's alleged failure to mark as inflammable a shipment of inflammable film scraps. He said each count carries up to a $1,000 fine and/or a year's penitentiary sentence. He said the film scraps which the company allegedly shipped without danger markings were left on the Dallas docks in the sun. He said they ignited and burned down the dock. Several civil law suits have been filed as a result, he added. Parrot said he believed in the event a penitentiary sentence were assigned against the corporation, its officers would be liable.

NEWS OF THE Territory

Boston

The true horizontal VistaVision will not be shown in Boston for the time being, it was learned, when officials of New England Theatres, Inc., a United Paramount subsidiary, finally decided against the installation. The tremendous expense of enlarging the booth at the Metropolitan, flagship of the circuit, was given as the reason. To install two new VistaVision projectors in the present booth would require taking space away from the mezzanine seats and pushing out the walls of the booth on both sides, not to mention the new VistaVision screen. The decision not to install the new projectors means that when "Strategic Air Command" plays the Metropolitan, it will be on view on vertical VistaVision on standard film. No other theatre in the city has been considered for the new process.

Bill Hellums, city manager, Interstate Theatre Circuit in Texas, is a patient at Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. He is city manager in Austin, Tex. . . . With three separate censorship cases on file in the Boston courts, all involving the Commissioner of Public Safety and his Sunday censorship department, a May date for hearings has been set for two cases. In the Times suit involving the two foreign films, "Game of Love" and "One Summer of Happiness," Judge Counihan, Supreme Judicial Court, has reported the case for decision by the full bench of seven judges. Chief Justice Qua has allowed the case to be placed on the May list for hearing. In an unusual move, Justice Qua allowed a waiver of the rules and permitted the Times case to be argued along with another similar censorship case, the Brattle, Cambridge, Mass., suit involving the censorship of the Swedish film, "Miss Julie," which had been denied a Sunday license by the Commissioner. Otherwise, the Times case would have had to wait for argument unitl the fall term. Attorney for the Times case is the Boston firm of Albert, Albert, and Tyber, while the firm of Peabody, Koffman, and Brewer represents the Brattle case. In still another censorship case filed in this city, the RKO "French Line" suit involving the Commissioner of Public Safety, the Mayors of Boston and Lynn and various city officials, attorney Joseph Welch has asked for a 30-day postponement on the hearing on the merits of the case, originally set for an April 18 hearing.

Area theatremen were cheered by latest development in proposed censorship move for Connecticut film exhibitions. A bill to create a board of review to pass on motion pictures, theatricals, or other public amusement to determine if they are "injurious to the public" drew no support at a Judiciary Committee hearing at State Capitol. TOA's Attorney Herman M. Levy declared that present laws provide ample protection against showing of any obscene or immoral motion pictures.

Bernie Menschell and John Calvocoressci, Manchester Drive-In Theatre Corporation, report installation of a VistaScope screen, first of its kind in the east. Manufactured by Raytone, the screen was used initially in the Chicago area, according to Menschell. Measurements are 100 feet wide and 41 feet high.

New screen, measuring 103 feet wide and 69 feet high, has been installed at the E. M. Loew's Farmington Drive-In, according to George E. Landers, Hartford division manager for the circuit. Landers is supervising construction of a $250,000 drive-in, to be known as the Candlelight Drive-In, Bridgeport, Conn. Opening is slated for early June. . . . Paul W. Amadeo, general manager, Pike Drive-In, Newington, Conn., is eagerly anticipating release of UA's "Marty," starring Ernest Borgnine, a fellow classmate at the Randall School of Dramatic Arts, Hartford, some years ago. Amadeo was an arts division student at the time.

Harry F. Shaw, division manager, Loew's Poli-New England Theatres, and Mrs. Shaw were due home from a South American cruise. . . . The area trade extended congratulations to Phil Gravitz, MGM's New Haven branch manager, on his 25th anniversary with the company. Gravitz started with Loew's in New York. . . . Robert Duffy is new assistant manager, Lockwood and Gordon's East Windsor Drive-In. Bill Daugherty continues as manager.

The Canaan Drive-In resumed operations April 15, following installation of a 100-foot wide CinemaScope screen. Playground equipment has been ordered and the concession building has been completely redecorated. Following policy of past seasons, the situation distributed free soft drinks and popcorn on opening night. . . . A certificate of incorporation was filed at the Secretary of State's office at State Capitol for the B and S Theatres Corporation, Salisbury, a new Connecticut corporation, listing amount of commencing capital, $1,000; incorporators, Ida Solkoff and Louis Solkoff, both of New Jersey; and Isadore Solkoff, New York.

A petition by James B. Sniffen for a waiver of use regulations in a Residence B Zone for a drive-in on South Main street, Stratford, was denied by the Stratford Planning and Zoning Board. Sniffen's petition for the theatre proposed for construction opposite the Stratford Convalescent Hospital was given a public hearing at the February meeting of the board and had been under study since.

Paul Creal has been named house manager, Art. . . . Exploitation field men in town were John McGrail, U-I, "Man Without a Star," Loew's Poli; Herb Schloss, Columbia, "Three For The Show," E. M. Loew's. . . . Joe Miklos, Stanley Warner Embassy, New Britain, Conn., broke into the New Britain Herald with a two column beauty shop co-op ad on Allied Artists' "Bowery Boys in High Society."

MGM home office and field executives met recently with Stanley Warner Theatre representatives in New Haven for an analysis and plan campaign on "The Prodigal." Seen, seated, are Philip Gravits, MGM branch manager; Nick Brickates, SW district manager; Larry Germain, SW booker; and Joe Liss, SW Albany and Boston district manager; while standing are Floyd Fitzsimmons, MGM field press representative; Arthur Canton, MGM eastern division press head; Elmer Hirth, SW buyer and booker; Larry Lapidus, SW Albany and Boston buyer and booker; and Oscar Doob, from the MGM New York office.

A sizable Connecticut film industry delegation attended the April 18 testimonial dinner honoring former Lieutenant Governor Edward N. Allen at the Statler Hotel. The guest roster, numbering 1,100, representing leaders of Connecticut industry, business, insurance, and politics included numerous downtown theatre managers, as well as George E. Landers, Hartford division manager, E. M. Loew's Theatres, and Henry L. Needles, former Hartford district manager, Warners Circuit Management Corporation. Former Mayor William H. Mortensen, managing director, Bushnell Memorial, was toastmaster.

Waterbury

In one of this area's biggest drive-in promotion stunts, Frank McQueeney, manager, Pine Drive-In, tied-up with enterprising disk jockey Les Davis, WWCO, to spend 24 hours on a specially-erected eight-by-eight foot platform atop the theatre's screen, to absorb the theatre's "superb drive-in atmosphere." Teaser ads for weeks ahead of the 24-hour stunt were tied-up with the line, "Watch for the Pine's D.I.A.!" Davis, of course, broadcast his show from the platform. He was supplied with sleeping bag, meals, phone, etc. . . . Bob Schwartz, Lake Drive-In, has a new encyclopedia giveaway.

Belmont

Community Movies here presented the entire proceeds of an Easter show to the Belgian government to help alleviate the suffering of some child who was injured in the disastrous Palm Sunday fire at the Cino Rio, Sclessin, Belgium. The Belmont children received a letter from the Belgian government commissioner of information thanking them for their contribution.

Concord

A bill to raise the minimum wage in New Hampshire to 90-cents an hour, plus an amendment providing a 65-cent minimum for theatre ushers and pinboys, is under hot debate in the State House of Representatives. Other exceptions to the 90-cent minimum would include hotel and restaurant workers, caddies, farm help, and outside salesmen. The bill would provide a 60-cent minimum for inexperienced and incapacitated help.

The Concord Drive-In's huge panoramic plastic screen is said to be the only one of its kind in New England.

Franklin

Ralph Morris, manager, Colonial, reports that a local man, jobless and mentally depressed, attempted suicide at his theatre during a showing of "Battle Cry." The man, 28, took a poison concoction of iodine and aspirin and was rushed to the hospital. He is now a patient at the state mental hospital in Concord, where he was sent for observation and treatment.

Providence

The proclamation of "Admiral Hoskins Day" by Rhode Island's Governor Dennis J. Roberts, and the participation of civic and naval dignitaries, as well as Sterling Hayden and Alexis Smith, stars of "The Eternal Sea," in a program of activities, including a premiere reception, a Chamber of Commerce luncheon, an elaborate parade, and theatre ceremonies were highlights of the world premiere of the Republic film at the RKO Albee. Fleet Admiral William "Bull" Halsey, USN, retired, headed the top-ranking naval dignitaries present at a reception tendered by Herbert J. Yates in honor of Rear Admiral Hoskins and Mrs. Hoskins at the Sheraton Biltmore Hotel prior to the opening, at which Richard W. Altschuler, director of world wide sales for Republic, and Mrs. Altschuler, acted as hosts. J. Whitney MacDonald, vice-president, Chamber of Commerce, was toastmaster at the luncheon in honor of Rear Admiral Hoskins, whose life story is told in the film. Honored guests included Vice Admiral McCormick; Captain W. F. Raborn; Lieutenant Governor John S. McKiernan; John C. Watkins, publisher, Providence Journal and Bulletin; Sol A. Schwartz, president, RKO Theatres Corporation; John H. Auer, associate producer-director of the film; and the stars. Navy bands, marching units, color and honor guards accompanied a motorcade in a parade to the theatre for the opening and participated in ceremonies in front of the theatre, which had radio and TV coverage. The premiere featured navy tenor Everett Morrison, Providence; the Providence College Glee Club; a concert by the Marine Corps of Artillery Band, and introducion of the stars and celebrities. In the morning, both stars greeted the winners of a WJAR-TV letter contest on the "Breakfast At The Sheraton" program. They were also presented with keys to the city and appeared on a TV interview program. A 62-foot model of an aircraft carrier was on display on the Mall opposite City Hall, in honor of "Admiral Hoskins Day," and a navy destroyer fleet was in the harbor at the State Pier.

NEWS OF THE Territory

New York City

Crosstown

Columbia's nine divisional field exploitation managers have returned to their headquarters around the country to prepare for the promotion of the company's forthcoming product following an intensive one-day meeting with home office executives. Holding important places in the discussions were territorial saturations and multiple-opening campaigns, improvement of communications between the home office exploitation department and the field men and between the exploiteers in the various sections of the country, and the coordination of on-the-spot promotion with advertising and publicity material emenating from the home office. Paul N. Lazarus, Jr, vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity, keynoted the meeting and was followed by Howard LeSieur, director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, who outlined the company's general promotion policy. Specific points were scrutinized in a roundtable conducted by Al Rylander, exploitation manager, and Ray Murray, assistant exploitation manager. In addition, Sidney Schaefer, media manager, spoke on Columbia's upcoming advertising campaigns, and Robert Ferguson, assistant to LeSieur, discussed the use of lobby displays, accessories, and other promotion aids produced by the home office. All the members of the home office exploitation department participated in the meeting.

Clark Ramsay, executive assistant to David A. Lipton, U-I vice-president, accompanied by Bob Rains, U-I studio television and radio promotional contact, and Robert Faber, who supervises the production of U-I trailers, arrived from Hollywood for a series of meetings with U-I advertising, publicity, and promotion executives.

Charles B. Moss, executive director, B. S. Moss Theatres and the Criterion, Broadway, left on the Queen Elizabeth for a tour of the film production centers in Europe to view recently completed product. He will also attend the Cannes Film Festival. . . . J. R. Grainger, president, RKO, came in from Hollywood for conferences with E. L. Walton, his executive assistant; Walter Branson, world wide sales manager; and H. H. Greenblatt, domestic sales manager, on forthcoming product.

Dance star Gene Nelson, who is featured in Rogers and Hammerstein's "Oklahoma," produced and filmed in Todd-AO, arrived from Hollywood for a brief stay to do a series of TV appearances. The film is scheduled to have its world premiere at the Rivoli the latter part of July. . . . Margaret Hayes, who appears in MGM's "Blackboard Jungle," Loew's State, participated in a discussion of the film at the Motion Picture Forum at New York University. . . . George

Emanuel Frisch, president, Metropolitan Motion Picture Theatres Association, Inc., which represents the leading theatre circuits in the New York area, recently presented a check representing 100 per cent paid up contributions by MMPTA members to Philip F. New York State

Albany

Airborne for the west coast on May 3 will be Jack Goldberg, MGM branch manager, and Mrs. Goldberg. They will take a three-week vacation in Los Angeles and San Francisco. Goldberg, assistant chief barker, Tent 9, will attend the convention of International Variety Clubs the first week. He and Mrs. Goldberg will also visit the MGM studios; will call on Gus Lampe, one-time general manager, Schine Circuit, later manager, Schine-owned WPTR, Albany, and now entertainment director, Schine Hotels and will trek to San Francisco.

Edward L. Fabian spent two days in the area on a periodic visit to Fabian theatres and with Fabian managers. He inspected Mohawk Drive-In's new widened screen and remodeled cafeteria-style concession building; huddled with division manager Saul J. Ullman and other members of the circuit organization. The son of S. H. Fabian enoyed a 15-day vacation at the famed and fabulous Boca Raton Club, Fla.

Buffalo

With about 350 showmen present from all parts of the exchange territory and Canada, Jack Mundstuk, MGM branch manager, and Garfield Cass, Toronto exchange head, co-hosts, opened the big MGM Ticket-Selling Workshop in the Hotel Statler. Mundstuk and Cass introduced Jack Byrne, eastern sales manager, and Hillis Cass, Canadian general sales manager, who in turn introduced Mike Simons, MGM's director of customer relations, who presided. Showmen were the guests of the Coca Cola Company at lunch in the Statler. Others who attended the workshop were Emery Austin, MGM exploitation director; George Murphy, MGM star and that studio's good will ambassador; Chester Friedman, MGM Canadian publicity head; Stephen Pirozzi, MGM field representative in the Buffalo and Albany districts; and Arthur Canton, eastern division publicity manager. Assisting in the proceedings from the Buffalo exchange were Abe Harris and Eddie Susse, salesman; Marion Ryan, office manager; and Virginia Callahan and Beatta Kaye, bookers. Panelists at the workshop were Ivan D. Anderson, Liberty, North Wilkesboro, N. C.; Bob and Melba Walker, Vintah, Fruita, Colo., who operate a theatre seating 210 in a town with 1200 population; James R. Nairn, director of advertising and publicity, Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto, Canada; Jim Partlow, city manager, Dixie Drive-In, Orlando, Fla.; and A. J. Kalberer, Indiana, Washington, Ind. Simons pointed out the importance of the theatre to the community, how the theatre attracts people to the town or city, who in turn not only go to the shows but buy the goods in the various merchants' shops. He declared that when business is off, the merchants need the theatres with their live-wire selling ideas and the theatres need the help of the merchants in selling entertainment, so that both sides should stage community celebrations and wake things up all around. Simons declared that theatres now have important new technical processes to sell and are learning that television, instead of hurting theatres, is turning out to be another ally and a great help in selling motion picture entertainment. The MGM customer relations head pointed out that there are a large number of exhibitors, many of them new in the exhibition end of the business, who are unfamiliar with the many selling aids provided by MGM in promoting pictures. Simons pointed out that there are no less than 33 aids, most of which are free.

George Murphy, MGM star and now a studio executive, was the star of the Police Ball in Rochester when he appeared in person at the affair. Murphy's appearance was arranged by Lester Pollock, manager, Loew's Rochester, and Carl Hallauer, president, Bausch and Lomb. . . . Leon Serin, former manager, Center, UPT downtown first-run, and now city manager, UPT, Philadelphia, where he supervises the operation of the Tower, Roosevelt, and Nixon, was in making arrangements to move his family and furniture to Upper Darby, Pa., his headquarters. While in Buffalo, Serin dropped in to look over the Center theatre and to confer with Arthur Krolick, district manager, UPT.

Nat Marcus, manager, Warners' exchange, is all smiles these days as he passes around the stogies. Nat is a grandfather. His daughter has given birth to a nine-pound boy. The baby has been named Lee Moss Kutner. Nat also is feeling good because his son, Lieutenant William C. Marcus, is home on a furlough. . . . William Brett, for many years house manager, Shea's Buffalo, has been named president and general manager, Skyway Theatres, Inc., operating the Niagara Drive-In.

Buck Ironfield, former office manager, 20th-Fox, Albany, is now associated with the Buffalo sales staff of Columbia, covering the Rochester and Syracuse districts. . . . Dave Leff has resigned as representative of IFE. He formerly managed the Buffalo United Artists exchange. Leff has been succeeded by Sal DiGennaro, New York, who will cover both the Buffalo and Pittsburgh districts for IFE.

Paul Swater, managing director, Teck, home of Cinerama, has inaugurated a "Housewives' Matinee," which will be staged every Thursday. . . . A $100,000 fellowship program for advanced study in physics, chemistry, and chemical engineering has been established by Eastman Kodak Company in Rochester. Under the program, the company will award 34 fellowships, each providing for a grant of at least $1,400 to the recipient. If married and with dependent children, it provides $2,100. In addition, each award allows a sum of $1,000 to the university to help defray the cost of research expenses during the period of the fellowship.

Some 500 Buffalo and western New York physicians were silent and absorbed the other night as they watched, via closed circuit TV, Dr. Jonas E. Salk demonstrate the conclusive evidence that the anti-polio vaccine developed by him is a success. The hour-long program was given

U-I played host recently at the Victoria, New York City, to several hundred children of its press, radio, TV syndicates and magazine contacts at a screening of "This Island Earth." Philadelphia

Crosstown

Ted Schlanger, local zone manager, SW Theatres, has accepted an appointment to serve on the National Exhibitors Committee and as chairman, Philadelphia exchange area, for a special one day collection for the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital during the week of August 15. He was asked to serve on this project by national exhibitor chairman M. A. Silver, at the request of Si Fabian, national chairman for the one day audience collection. Schlanger expresses the hope that all theatres in the area will cooperate, with the SW theatres participating 100 per cent and the United Paramount houses and the Fox already indicating full cooperation.

Some 500 patrons of William Goldman Theatre's State left the building as smoke from a basement fire filtered into the orchestra. An usher smelled smoke, discovered the fire in a lounge, where an overstuffed chair was ablaze. Employes used fire extinguishers on the flames, which set off an automatic sprinkler alarm. The fire was almost quenched when firemen arrived. Meanwhile, manager Norman T. Cohen, had quietly advised patrons to leave although there was no danger, and they filed out quietly. Firemen said the fire evidently started from a cigarette and that a ventilating system carried the smoke into the auditorium.

Jerry Gaghan, well liked columnist, returned to The Daily News.

The AB-Paramount Nixon had an early morning fire which necessitated closing for a few days. A bad break on newspaper deadlines had the theatre's ad running over the week-end that the house was closed.

Vine Street

With the help of their exhibitor customers and friends, every employee in the local United Artists branch can win a big cash prize during July 1-7, United Artists Week. If the local gang can get more pictures played than any other branch, it will really be a big payoff, so help these nice people over the top.

John "Jam Handy" Golder was recuperating from his recent eye operation. Mrs. Golder, who also had an eye operation, is doing nicely. . . . Bill Brooker, the Columbia publicist, postcards from New Bedford, Mass., saying he spent the winter in Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Georgia, and Florida. Now in New England, he is handling early dates on "Cell 2455, Death Row."

Columbia publicist Milt Young underwent a minor operation in Graduate Hospital. . . . Ben Blumberg, Blumberg Brothers, was hospitalized at Hahnemann, and reported doing nicely.

The third in a series of five 20th-Fox divisional sales meetings to set merchandising policy for the spring and summer exhibition seasons convened here with W. C. Gehring, executive assistant general sales manager, in charge. In attendance was Glenn Norris, eastern sales manager; Martin Moskowitz, Atlantic division manager; and branch heads including Abe Dickstein, New York; Sam Diamond, Philadelphia; Ira Sichelman, Washington; Clayton G. Pantages, Albany; Al Levy, Boston; C. B. Kosco, Buffalo; and Shepard Bloom, New Haven.

Sandy Gottlieb, Tri-States Buying and Booking Service, went to Cleveland to attend the funeral of his sister. . . . Benny Harris, American Film, still has his broken toe in a cast.

Back in July 15, 1918 in an issue of "Vine Street," which predated MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITOR it was stated Williamsport was the town that Joe Schaeffer loved the best. We still wonder, why?

The nation's capital was the site of impressive ceremonies honoring the memory of the late United States Chaplain Peter Marshall and the motion picture biography of his life, 20th-Fox's "A Man Called Peter," adapted from his wife's best-selling book. Richard Todd, who stars as Peter Marshall in the film, and Mrs. Marshall were both on hand to receive an award from the United Church Women of Washington and for other impressive ceremonies, including the presentation of a print of the CinemaScope production to the national Archives.

Horace Johns Mourned; Was IATSE Executive

PHILADELPHIA — The industry last week mourned the passing of Horace Johns, 60, who had been business agent, Motion Picture Machine Operators Local 307, IATSE, since 1929.

Johns, a tireless union worker and top projectionist, who worked in many of the local first run houses, including the Boyd, died from a heart attack. He had been in the union offices the day before his death. He also was a delegate to the Central Labor Union and a member of the Masonic Order.

Surviving are his wife, a son, three sisters, and two grandchildren. Services were held from his home with burial in Hillside Cemetery.

Daylight Time Extended Despite Exhibitor Protest

PHILADELPHIA — City Council last week adopted a resolution starting daylight saving time at 2 a. m. Monday morning, April 25, and continuing until Oct. 30, an extension over previous years.

Representatives of theatres were the only opponents, asserting it will cut down attendance.

MR. THEATRE MANAGER:

The Parkway is about to reopen. It closed approximately two years ago, soon after Morris Mechanic purchased the building from Loew interests. Later it was converted for the legitimate stage and then closed again. A deal is underway wherein Jack Fruchtman, currently operating Keiths and the New, will add the Parkway to his circuit. Fruchtman also owns several drive-ins in southern Maryland. . . . Morris Mechanic entertained about 20 guests at a theatre party at Ford's for the season's final show, "The Seven Year Itch."

Chief Barker Jack Whittle, Baltimore Variety Club, will fly to California to attend Variety's annual convention. He'll be accompanied by Pete Prince. On the tentative list of those going are Howard Wagonheim, Milton Caplon, and Jack Levin. . . . George Matthews has returned to his job as projectionist at the Town after having been confined to his home due to illness. . . . Irving Blumberg, Warners publicist, was in for advance details on "Strange Lady In Town." . . . Clyde Young, Variety Club's manager, took one of his rare day's off for a motor trip with his family through the country.

Reading

The Bern Township Parent-Teacher Association expressed almost unanimous opposition to the showing of "Blackboard Jungle" in Reading theatres. Opponents speaking against the showing of the film, currently at Loew's Colonial, Reading, based their attack on the charge that the picture might inspire "repercussions" among teen-age students in both city and county schools. Letters setting forth the association's stand were posted by President Clayton Mengel and the secretary, Mrs. Arthur Horning, to the Berks County Parent-Teacher Association and to the manager of Loew's, Bob Diem. Reports here said that the Lackawanna-Scranton County Parent-Teacher Association recently successfully fought the showing of "Blackboard Jungle" in the Scranton area. Defenders of the film, however, say that any charges that it tends to juvenile delinquency are not well founded, and that the objectionable feature of the story relates to the conduct of two teachers not the behavior of children.

A state charter, capital $20,000, was granted to the West Reading Drive-In, Inc. The authorized capitalization is 200 shares without par value. Incorporators and present shareholders were listed as Clarence C. Mendelsohn, Mount Penn, Pa., two shares; Lester Mendelsohn, Pennside, Pa., two shares; and Sylvia S. Rosenberg, Pennside, one share.

Renee Martz, a 14-year-old girl, who is described as an evangelist active for several years in church work, has refused a movie contract, it is stated. The girl's refusal of the contract was based on her unwillingness to be screened in anything but a religious film story.

George Payette, Jr., city manager, SW Maryland, Hagerstown, Md., arranged the above stunt recently for the street bally for the Columbia serial, "Riding With Buffalo Bill." Local horseman Walter Hoffman was the rider and is seen in front of the theatre with Payette seen on the right.

West Reading School District has decided to continue its 10 per cent amusements tickets tax. It estimates its revenue from this tax for the coming year, starting July 1, at $600. As the tax, among other conditions, put the borough's only theatre out of business a year ago, tax payers in Berks County's largest borough may wonder how the tax is going to net $600 in the new school year for the school district. The budget does not make clear what this tax yielded in the school year now ending, if anything. The school board has also jumped the real estate tax, this includes the theatre property, from 22 mills to 34 mills, a rise of 12 mills.

The Strand and the Park have been presenting special Saturday matinee offerings. . . . Lewis G. Yost, Astor projectionist, and active in community welfare organizations, has been named a trustee of the recently established Wilbur H. Doran Foundation, a public service and welfare organization, at its first annual meeting. The Doran board was founded in recognition of Doran, president, Metropolitan Edison Company here, who was killed in an automobile accident here last year.

Enterprising Neil Conway, manager, Riviera, utilized to the fullest his exploitation process with maximum results in his presentation of "Davy Crockett" which opened for Easter week. Several contests and gimmicks were used in conjunction with the picture, chief among which was a tie-in with the local Sears Roebuck Company in promoting "Davy Crockett" costume contest. Winners were given a two wheel bicycle, a wrist watch, radio, baseball gloves, baseballs, archery sets, Davy Crockett records and books, with Blackie Bennett, local disc jockey, handling the entire procedure. A coloring contest was held together with the local Kresge store, the winners of which were announced within the theatre. An effective Davy Crockett window display was arranged with the Woolworth store, and two six sheets of Davy Crockett were

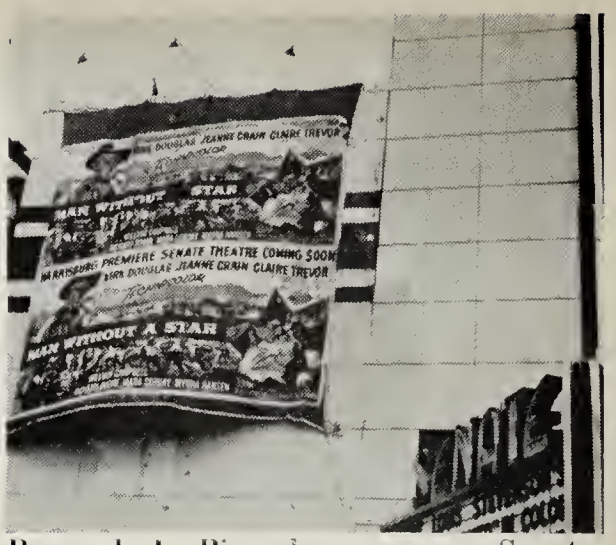
Disturbed Distribs Fight Court Rule

PHILADELPHIA — With the local branches of the distributor defendants disturbed over the April 5 jury verdict in the Sablosky's Norris Amusement Company, Norristown, Pa., anti-trust case, the first step was taken last week by their counsel in what may prove a long series of legal procedures intended to forestall the carrying out of the decision.

The jury, sitting in U. S. District Court under Judge Allan K. Grim, found the defendants guilty of joining in restraint of trade and granted the plaintiffs a trebled verdict of $1,275,000 and a right to play first run day and date with Philadelphia.



Arlin Adams, one of the attorneys who represented the distributors in the seven-week-long trial, has now asked Judge Grim to question the jurors concerning information obtained outside the courtroom. The information, he said, was both erroneous and prejudicial to the defense. It was "sought and obtained" by Michael F. McCartin, Philadelphia, who served as a juror, according to Adams.

Adams told Judge Grim that McCartin "sought and obtained" information that William Goldman, head, William Goldman Theatres, "had secured a verdict of $4,000,000 against the defendant movie companies" in a similar Federal Court suit several years ago. Goldman was a witness for the defense in the Sablosky suit.

The attorney pointed out that information concerning the earlier Goldman action had been excluded from the Sablosky trial. "Not only did it reach the ears of the jury," Adams said, "but it was completely erroneous."

Judge Grim said he would take the matter under advisement, but later refused the petition. The distributor defendants in the Sablosky case were Paramount, RKO, Warners, 20th-Fox, U-I, Columbia and MGM. Spokesmen of several of them have indicated that if the jury verdict stands a precedent will be set and there will be nothing to prevent theatres in Levittown, Chester, Camden, N. J., and other nearby upstate cities from demanding product on similar run, and eventually an appeal will be made to the U. S. Circuit Court.

Meanwhile, Thomas Sablosky, one of the six brothers and their families comprising Norris Amusement Company, died at Montgomery Hospital, Norristown, Pa. He was 68. At the time of his death he was manager, Norris, Norristown, Pa., one of the houses involved in the suit. He was a member of the Jewish Community Center and B'nai B'rith. Surviving are his wife, three sons, and a daughter, as well as the five brothers, Abraham, Benjamin, Lewis, David, and Nathan, and nine grandchildren.

Bernard J. Bispeck, manager, Senate, Harrisburg, Pa., recently created this extended front bally in front of the theatre on U-I's "Man Without A Star" by stretching a cloth panel measuring 40 x 60 across the building.

bannered on a local truck which toured the city in advance of and during the run of the film. Conway issued 10,000 heralds on the film, some 700 of which bore lucky numbers entitling the bearer free admission to a performance. Each youngster admitted to the theatre was given a coupon worth five cents toward the purchase of a 20 cent bag of popcorn, which gimmick proved to be fantastically popular, judging by the popcorn sold during the run of the film.

The Strand, continuing a policy adopted many years ago by its founder, the late M. E. Comerford, was made available during Holy Week for the noon day services of various Protestant churches, and on Good Friday, both the Comerford and the Strand were used for the three hour devotions of the local Protestant groups, with the Reverend Karl Mumford at the Strand and the Reverend Peter K. Emmons addressing the congregation at the Comerford.

Some 70 or more area ministers and their wives were the guests of manager Ed McGovern at a special screening prior to the opening of "A Man Called Peter" at the Comerford. A mailing list of 1,000 was effectively used in sending letters on the film. . . . A general meeting of Comerford Company personnel, including managers, district managers, and department heads, was scheduled in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

MGM's famous Glass Slipper float was in the city during the run of "The Glass Slipper" at the Strand, as announced by manager Tom Jones. Ed Gallner, MGM, was in in connection with the float, which attracted city-wide attention and which was further enhanced by comely Anna Mae Rafalko, Strand, who rode the float through the city, while WGBI-TV picked up and ran two different series of shots of the float.

Known professionally as Rita Hayes, the singer-daughter of Bernard Drexinger, manager, Exeter, in nearby Exeter, Pa., the former Miss Scranton Elk, 1952, and the winner of an Arthur Godfrey Talent Scout TV show, was the subject of a syndicated Earl Wilson column in the Sunday Press. The article made prominent mention of Drexinger and his theatre.

THINGS YOU SHOULD KNOW

—about this service—
THE CHECK-UP

This every-second-week regular department is NOT just an index as published in many other trade papers.

THE CHECK-UP is an exclusive EXHIBITOR service. Started many years ago, it represents a complete, unmatchable . . .

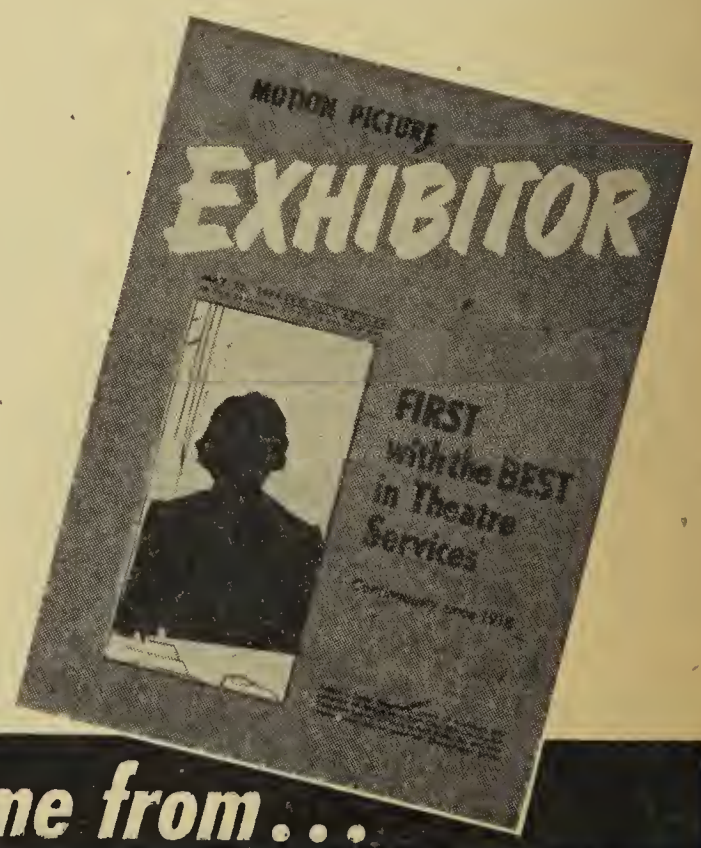
CAPSULE SUMMARY

. . . of ALL Features and of ALL Shorts that have been released and reviewed during the last 9 Months, . . . PLUS information on all that are in production for early release.

WITH THE CHECK-UP AT HAND—

. . . it is NOT necessary to go to your file or to look up a complete Review in order to find:

1. TITLE
2. TYPE OF SHOW
3. COLOR or BLACK AND WHITE
4. LEADING PLAYERS
5. ONE-LINE CRITICISM
6. RUNNING TIME
7. PRODUCTION NUMBER
8. DATE OF COMPLETE REVIEW
9. LEGION OF DECENCY RATING



They are all right here in THE CHECK-UP.
And you need only save it for two weeks,—
for it will be up-to-date the next time issued.

IN YOUR HANDS NOW—

you are holding the only—

9-POINT SUMMARY

in the entire Trade Press that follows this service method.

BEST—of all Theatre Services come from . . .

Pictures in order of release, with principal players, are placed in the month of release. All dates are subject to change. Series westerns are indicated by a W following the title. Holidays and special events will be found at the bottom of this page. This chart is kept as up-to-date as possible on information made available by the home office.

We went to Spain to make "That LADY"

AND what a pleasure it was to make "That Lady" ...to bring you the flaming story of a woman who conquered a king...yet trembled in the arms of a commoner when he whispered, "You've been a widow too long!"...Now you know why it was such a great best-selling novel...why Katharine Cornell chose to star in it on the Broadway stage ...why we traveled to storied cities, fabulous locales, thrill-crowded bullfight arenas...with stars, director, CinemaScope cameras and technical crews. Everyone will talk about "That Lady" —the picture that shocked a nation!

OLIVIA de HAVILLAND · GILBERT ROLAND
